will be interested to know that we show the new blocks in Knox and Stetson Hats as soon as they are shown in the largest cities—and the price is the same. Many men think they cannot get a hat that is strictly up-to-the-minute unless they go to the city for it. This is a big mistake for we enjoy the same privileges with regard to advance styles as shown the largest dealers in the largest cities. When a new block is placed in stock at the factory we are notified at once.

SYNOPSIS.

In the New York home of James Brood, Dawes and Riggs, his two old servants and comrades, await the coming of Brood's son Frederic to learn the contents of a wireless from Brood. Lydia Desmond, Brood's secretary, Frederic's sweetheart, is the daughter of the housekeeper. Brood returns with a bride, Yvonne, who in her charm and beauty bears a strange resemblance to Brood's first wife, Matilde, whom he had driven from his home. Brood's Hindu servant, Ranjah, performs strange feats of magic.

"It is not nobler all stories of its kind, my dear," she said with an indifference that amazed him. "They are all alike. Why should I ask? No. I do not ask you for your story. James. Sometime you may tell me, but not to-day. I shouldn't mind hearing it if it were an original tale, but God knows it isn't. It's as old as the Nile. But you may tell me more about your son. Is he like you, or like his mother?"

Brood's lips were compressed. "I can't say that he is like either of us," he said shortly. She raised her eyebrows slightly.

"Ah," she said. "That makes quite a difference. Perhaps, after all, I shall be interested in the story." Her manner was so casual, so serenely matter-of-fact, that he could hardly restrain the sharp exclamation of annoyance that rose to his lips.

He bit his lip and allowed the frank insinuation to go unanswered. He consoled himself with the thought that she must have spoken in jest, with no intention. He had the uncomfortable feeling that she would make light of his story, too, when the time came for revelations. A curious doubt took root in his mind, would he ever be able to understand the nature of this woman whom he loved and who appeared to love him so unreservedly? As time went on, the doubt became a conviction. She was utterly beyond comprehension.

The charm and beauty of the new mistress of James Brood's heart and house were to become the talk of the town. Already, in the first month of her reign, she had drawn to the old house the attention and envy of the guarantee who feed on novelty. ...

In truth, Yvonne Brood despised Americans. She made small pretense of liking them. The rather closely knit circle of Parisian aristocracy which she affected is known to tolerate but not to invite the society of even the best of Americans. ...

The Desmonds took a small apartment just around the corner from Brood's house, in a side street, and in the same block. As a matter of fact, their windows looked down into the courtyard in the rear of Brood's home. Frederic assisted them in putting their home in order. It was great fun for Lydia and him, this building of what they planned to call "a nest." Lydia may have seen the cloud in their sky, but he did not. To him, the sky was bright and gladsome, without a shadow to mar its new beauty. He was enthusiastic, eager, excited. She fell in with his spirit, but her pleasure was shorn of some of its keenness by the odd notion that it was not to endure.

He even dragged Yvonne around to the little flat, to expatiate upon its coziness with visual proof to support his somewhat exaggerated claims. Her lazy eye took in the apartment at a glance, and she was done with it.

"It is very charming," she said, with her soft drawl. "Have you an cigarette, Lydia?"

The girl flushed and looked at Frederic for relief. He promptly produced his own cigarettes. Yvonne lighted one and then stretched herself comfortably in the Morris chair in which no women ever had appeared comfortable before—or since, perhaps.

"By the way, this window looks almost directly down into our courtyard, doesn't it, Frederic?" said Lydia. ...

"Mother wouldn't like me to smoke," said Lydia, rather bluntly.

"I don't mind women smoking," put in Frederic hastily. ...

She drew back from the window suddenly, a passing look of fear in her eyes. It was gone in a second, however, and would have passed unnoticed but for the fact that Frederic was, as usual, watching her face with rapt interest. He caught the curious transition and involuntarily glanced below.

The heavy curtains in the window of his father's retreat were drawn apart and the dark face of Ranjab the Hindu was plainly distinguishable. He was looking up at the window in which Mrs Brood was sitting. ...

Questions raced through Frederic's puzzled brain. Out of them grew a queer, almost uncanny feeling that the Hindu had called to her in the still, mysterious voice of the East, and although no sound had been uttered, she had heard as plainly as if he actually had shouted to her across the intervening space.

His father had said, more than once, that the Hindu and the Egyptian possessed the power to be in two distinct places at the same time. ...

THE ALIEN'S CHILD

Sometime or other what is North America rose from beneath the sea. The rising was one of the epics of creation. It occurred back in the spaces of time in which men grapple with a brief portion of eternity stated in terms of millions of years. Some time or other, unless this continent was the cradle of the human race, an "alien" first set foot upon its soil. Where the Indian came from no one knows. Neither is it known what races figured in the "centuries before the Indian." It is the North America of the "aliens" not the North America of the natives that we know. The Spaniards were aliens. The Pilgrims were aliens. The Quakers were aliens. The French, the Irish, the Germans, the Scotch, the Moravians were all aliens. They were the men and women who made this country possible, and they were blood brothers to the men and women who in recent years have come streaming into this land. For centuries and centuries the Almighty has been taking Europeans and slowly moulding them into Americans. Never once since that day of Columbus has the fire beneath the "melting pot" gone out. Never once has God failed in His wonderful alchemy. From all lands and all climes He has taken those who loved Him and those who knew Him not and out of them fashioned a nation.

With such a background no one in this country should be surprised when they are told that the children of the aliens, when they are thrown into our schools, more than hold their own. Right in our own city it appears the examinations show that the young Petroskeys, the young Popovitches and all their kind get as high marks in our public schools as the children of the Browns and the Smiths. And why not, indeed? Is it not of such that we have been making Americans? Is it not the law of nature that men grow in conformity with their environment? And then there is an element in the situation that few of our "native born Americans" grasp. In the home of the alien there is frequently a hunger and a thirst after knowledge that few natives of this country ever feel. The father who during all his life has been denied his chance experiences a joy when opportunity summons his boy that the carefully nurtured American parent will never know. We of this land have grown accustomed to our opportunities. They have become accepted facts to us. The things we greet as a matter of course constitute a veritable New World to many an alien.

And so it comes about that when we learn that the child of the alien is able frequently to lead his class when he enters our schools, those who catch a vision of the future of this land are glad, because they know that the fires beneath the melting pot have not died down, and that the Almighty is still the wonderful alchemist He has always been.

SEWARD'S FOLLY

When Alaska was purchased by the United States the two-by-four politicians and smart-Alec newspapers had a season of large and uproarious fun. They even persuaded some of the people that the United States would freeze to death merely by reason of having purchased a large cake of ice up north somewhere.

Only about three generations have gone ahead since Secretary Seward's large real estate deal was concluded, but the "folly" as the purchased land was termed, is now practically a part of the real United States. It is a promising territory in every sense of the word and is about to begin an era of remarkable development.

Now they call the railroad project Wilson's folly. It was one of the president's big ideas that a road should be put through Alaska to start development. This "paternalistic" innovation was projected on the idea that private capital would wait until all signs were favorable before launching such an undertaking, and that meanwhile monopoly would get its fangs irredeemably fixed in the promised land.

The railroad will be a boon to Alaska and the world, opening up the coal and timber, furs and fisheries, the agricultural land and the industries generally.

Seward's folly and Wilson's folly will, in all probability, prove unmixed blessings within the comparatively short space of a century from inception.

America needs more "folly" and less self-path precedent.

All about us at this season of the year are thousands of bird babies. Every apple tree and pear tree, every shade tree is a bird nursery, the vine on the porch, the barn eaves, the grass in the meadow each has its hidden, happy nestful. Their mission is one not only of joy and music but of economic value. Blessings on the bird babies! Don't disturb their little nest when the mother is away hunting their food. The boy who protects the little bird homes is much more of a boy than the one who tries to make a big egg collection.—Our Dumb Animals.

Only a few weeks ago an Indiana man taught his dog, a very finely bred, well-behaved setter, to chew tobacco. Now the dog comes into the house by the back door, never scrapes his feet on the mat, never goes to church, is careless at his meals, gets burrs in his tail, goes with a lower grade of dogs and it is feared that he is beginning to take an interest in politics.

Lame Back

Lame back is usually due to rheumatism of the muscles of the back. Hard working people are most likely to suffer from it. Relief may be had by massaging the back with Chamberlain's Liniment two or three times a day. Try it. Obtainable everywhere.

Shortening the War.

The motor truck and motor passenger vehicle are now undergoing, in the great international war, the greatest of all practical tests. If the war is short, as all good men devoutly hope, the motor vehicle will not only be a great factor in shortening it but also in determining the result, and by shortening the length of the war the motor will not only pay for itself many times over but save direct hundreds of millions—and maybe billions of dollars. The quicker the contenders move the more ghastly and destructive the war will be and the sooner exhaustion of one or both sides will come—the starting of the beginning of the mediations for peace. We know that motors spell mobility, and that there are many motors in service; hence the war should be shorter—much shorter—than Earl Kitchener's preparations embrace.—Rollin W. Hutchinson, Jr., in the Engineering Magazine.

Aeroplane Signals.

There has been tried in France an apparatus for signaling from aeroplanes used in the war, consisting of a reservoir of lampblack, which is connected with a supply of compressed air.

The aviator, by means of a valve within reach of his hand, can blow out a cloud of lampblack of a size varying according to the length of pressure of his hand upon the valve. These small clouds can be seen from a distance of six miles, and the movement of the aeroplane spaces them sufficiently to prevent them running together.

By the use of the Morse code it is an easy matter to send signals in this way from an aeroplane, and in addition it saves the necessity of a wireless receiving station, which is often difficult to operate during a campaign.

Pennsylvania Has Sand.

The production of sand and gravel in Pennsylvania in 1913 was 6,702,499 tons, valued at $4,351,692, against 6,509,333 tons, valued at $4,371,513 in 1912, according to the United States Geological survey. Building sand is the most important product of this character in the state, but of greater relative importance is glass sand, in the production of which Pennsylvania ranks first among the states. In the value of the sand produced, although not in the quantity, Pennsylvania ranks first, the precedence in value being due to the high value of the glass sand compared in other kinds.

French Loquacity.

There is no nation like the French. A French milliner will make a hat out of a piece of felt and nothing; and a French official will make a diplomatic episode out of nothing at all, putting into five minutes of futility all the Gallic civilization of centuries.—Arnold Bennett in the Century Magazine.

How Mrs. Harrod Got Rid of Her Stomach Trouble

"I suffered with stomach trouble for years and tried everything I heard of, but the only relief I got was temporary until last spring, I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and procured a bottle of them at our drug store. I got immediate relief from that dreadful heaviness after eating and from pain in the stomach," writes Mrs. Linda Harrod, Fort Wayne, Ind. Obtainable everywhere.

STEED AS EAGER FOR BATTLE AS IS HIS RIDER.

Also Knows the Call of the Bugle, in Many Cases Better Than the Soldier Who Is Supposed to Guide Him Into Action.

It will probably surprise the public, said a retired colonel of hussars, to learn that a cavalry horse usually enjoys a battle at least as much as his rider, and displays as much courage in it. He will chafe and stamp with impatience while waiting for the order to charge, and at the signal will dash forward like a greyhound released from the leash, full of fire and fury, and often neighing madly. At the moment of contact with the enemy he will rear, striking and biting savagely at the opposing horses and trampling down the infantry.

When his rider falls he will dash along with his fellows and crash as gallantly into the foe. In the famous charge of the Light Brigade scores of riderless horses swept down the "valley of death," thundering through the smoke onto the Russian guns, and galloped back to safety with the shattered remnant of the brigade. Five horses raced neck and neck with Lord Alfred Paget who rode in advance of the line so eager were they to get at the enemy!

And not only is the well trained charger as brave as his rider, he is often as intelligent. He knows the bugle calls just as well and answers them as promptly. In fact cases are proved in which a horse has put his rider right when he has mistaken an order and has gone faultlessly through maneuvers in spite of the efforts of his mistaken master to make him do the wrong thing.

No the process of training is neither long nor difficult. The first step is to accustom the horse to the sound of firing at close quarters. With this object he is put on the ground with legs tied and while in this position a pistol is fired close to his ears, over his back, between his legs, and so on, until his fear is overcome. After a few such lessons it is safe to mount him with a bridle furnished with a curb bit and under this control he is taught to stand still while a pistol or carbine is fired from his back—the latter naturally coming last as both hands are required in using this weapon.

Then follows other practice on similar lines until the horse is as indifferent to the whirl and flash of a sword above his head as to the explosion of a carbine above it. Within a few weeks the horse not only loses all traces of nervousness, he really enjoys the experience and enters enthusiastically into it. In battle the cavalry horse faces even a greater risk of death or disablement than his rider, although the gallant animal rarely gets any of the laurels of war. His danger however is by no means so great as it was.

In the eighteenth century 150 horses fell in battle to every 100 men; from 1800 to 1850 the proportion had fallen to 120, and in more recent wars the ratio has been approximately 112 horses to 100 men. In some charges, however, the proportion has been greater, as in that of the Light Brigade, in which 80 more horses than men sacrificed their lives.

But while the war horse seldom gets credit for his prowess and devotion, there have been, happily, a few cases in which he has shared his master's glories—among them Lord Roberts' pretty little Arab, Volonel, who carried him in the famous march from Kabul to Kandahar, and round whose neck, at Queen Victoria's express wish, he hung the Kabul medal, with four clasps.

The Sleeper.

"European sleeping cars are very dear—$20 a berth in fact—but they afford you the privacy of a bedroom."

The speaker was the well-known comedian, Raymond Hitchcock. He resumed:

"Our sleeping cars, while comfortable enough, afford no privacy. Comfortable as they are, it is very hard to sleep in them.

"I was traveling one night Chicago ward. The berth above me was occupied by a 300-pound broker. It was impossible to slumber anywhere within a half-mile radius of that broker and at about two in the morning I climbed up to him, took him by the shoulders, and shook him rudely.

"'What do you mean,' he growled, 'by waking me out of a sound sleep?'

"'But it's such an ugly sound,' said I. 'It's such an ugly, horrible sound that we other passengers positively refuse to tolerate it.'"

Turtle Two Centuries Old.

A huge turtle, weighing 1,175 pounds, was brought to San Diego, Cal., the other day by Capt. J. Zollezzi of the Italian fishing launch Betvidere. The turtle, said by waterfront men to be the largest specimen ever caught in Lower California waters, is nine feet in circumference and seven feet from the tip of its nose to the end of its short tail. The front flippers are four feet in length and almost a foot wide, tapering gradually until at the end they are about five inches wide. The jaws are a solid mass of teeth, over two hundred being located in the upper jaw. They range from one half to a quarter of an inch in length. The shell is ribbed and in spots pliable, which leads many fishermen to believe that the turtle is nearly two hundred years old.

NOT APPROVED BY SCIENCE

Existence of "Brain Waves," as Popularly Understood, Has Never Been Established.

Sir Ray Lankester, who has been a diligent student of telepathy, now arrives at the conclusion that the so-called "brain waves," of which the telepathist talks, have no foundation in science. According to him, we know nothing of the existence of such waves and are absolutely devoid of the means of establishing them. The chief difficulty lies in the fact that those who seem to believe in them most implicitly are unable to so much as hazard a guess as to the material in which they occur.

The physicist who teaches the existence of light waves affirms at the beginning that they are waves of the ether. In holding to sound waves he explains that they are waves of the atmosphere. To say that sound and light are waves and at the same time to be unable to declare the substance of which those waves consist would be to leave sound and light unexplained, and Sir Ray holds that a like inference is to be drawn from the brain-wave explanation of telepathy.

But granting the existence of such waves, he proceeds to ask by what means they are received and obtains no answer. As far as present day science goes there is no detector in the brain by which they may be received and no mechanism to transform them into sensible form. Neither is there a code between man and man whereby the thoughts conveyed are to be made intelligible as the Morse alphabet transforms the dots and dashes of the telegraph key into words.

The possibility of telepathy is not denied. The noted scientist simply takes the ground that at the present stage of knowledge if brains do communicate with each other immediately and over long distances it is by some other method than that of the supposed "brain waves."

Root's Concentrative Ability.

Senator Root has great power of concentration. He would have made a great war correspondent. No matter how much shot and shell might be flying about him he could sit and jot down what is in his mind without paying any attention to anything else. One day he was going through some papers that contained information he was sifting out. The matter was one that called for much quiet thought and reflection.

A caller arrived at the outer office. A clerk went in to the Senator and told him:

"Mr. Soandso's here for an 11 o'clock appointment. It is now three minutes of 11."

"All right. Show him in at 11," directed Mr. Root.

And during those three minutes he became just as much engrossed in the task before him as if there were nothing else in sight.

Deer Copped Cabbage.

A herd of deer celebrated the close of the gunning season by invading the garden of Postmaster A. C. Stewart at Weymouth, N. J., and eating his winter supply of cabbage. Several gunning parties have been encamped within a hundred yards of the spot during the week and a dozen deer have been shot in the immediate vicinity. The deer came to within fifty feet of where two stag hounds were tethered to their kennels and the barking of the dogs aroused the postmaster and his son, who saw the herd scampering away in the moonlight.

Sportsmen here say that the season just closed has been the best in many years. The heavy foliage remaining on the trees gave the deer more shelter than usual. Over thirty bucks have been reported bagged within a ten-mile radius of Weymouth. This was a proportion of about one to every twenty gunners.

Radium Market Closed.

The European war has for the present at least, totally closed the European market to American radium ores. As is well known, the uranium ores of Colorado and Utah are sold exclusively for their radium content, so little use being known for the uranium that the ores cannot be sold for their content of that element. The condition of the European market leaves the miners without a buyer so that while the war lasts, and probably for some time afterward, the market will be restricted and without the benefit of competition. As has been pointed out by Secretary of the Interior Lane, had the bills introduced in congress been passed the United States government would probably have been in the market as a buyer, and the miner might now have a chance to sell his ore.

Asking the Impossible.

"We'll be glad to handle your account," said the receiving teller, "if you will promise to keep not less than $100 on deposit all the time."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Mr. Hallroomer, "I merely wanted to put the fruit of my self-denial in a safe place until I could find something suitable to spend it for. I have no desire to become a capitalist."

For Defective Thermometer.

When the mercury thread in a thermometer tube separates into two portions, with a gap between, the simplest remedy and one that usually proves satisfactory on the first trial, is as follows: Place the thermometer in the end of a long stocking, the bulb being towards the toe, and whirl at arms length as rapidly as possible. Centrifugal force is thus produced, the effect of which is to force the detached portion of mercury back until it joins the thread nearer the bulb. If not successful at the first attempt, immerse in hot water for a moment and try again.

STRIVE TO BLOT FROM MINDS CRUEL SCENE

Survivors of Destroyed Lusitania Tell of Cries of Women as Ship Sank.

PRINCIPAL FEATURES OF TORPEDOING

In a Twinkling There was a Tremendous Crash and Instantly the Big Ocean Liner Listed Heavily to Starboard.

New York City.—The Cunard Steamship Co. Sunday night announced the receipt of the following cablegram from Liverpool:

"Up to midnight Queenstown advises total number of survivors 764, including 462 passenger and 302 crew. This leaves 1,137 probably dead.

"One hundred and forty-four bodies recovered, of which 87 identified and 57 unidentified. Identified bodies comprise 65 passengers, 22 crew.

By Special Correspondent.

Queenstown, Eng.—Nowhere has the shock of the Lusitania's sinking been more keenly felt than here. In the quaint town hall and in three other buildings improvised for the purpose there lie the bodies of 150 men, women and children brought in from the sea. Long lines of persons pass in and out to see if their friends or relatives are there.

The respectful quiet in the streets and the presence of survivors in the hotels, which look more like hospitals, only faintly suggest the horror of the tragedy. The narratives of the survivors only vaguely fill in some of the details of the death that came so suddenly to the hundreds aboard the ship. None of those approached could adequately reconstruct the manner of its coming. It is possible, however, by piecing one narrative with another to recall the principal features of the torpedoing of the Lusitania and its horrible sequel.

Main Features of Torpedoing.

About 10 minutes past 2, when land was within sight, everyone on board was feeling naturally elated at the rapidly approaching conclusion of the extraordinarily nervous voyage and at a ...

CORONER'S JURY SAYS WHOLESALE MURDER

Holds Kaiser and German Government Responsible for Lusitania Disaster.

Kinsale, Ireland.—"We, the jury, find that this appalling crime was contrary to international law and the conventions of all civilized nations, and we, therefore, charge the officers of the submarine, the German emperor and the government of Germany, under whose orders they acted, with the crime of willful and wholesale murder."

This verdict was returned by the coroner's jury which for two days has been holding an inquest over the bodies of five of the Lusitania victims. The verdict was ordered by Coroner John Horgan after hearing testimony of survivors and of Capt. W. T. Turner, captain of the Lusitania.

Capt. Turner admitted that he had been warned that an attempt would be made to sink his ship.

"Was the Lusitania armed?" Coroner Horgan asked him.

"She was not!"

"I was aware of the threat to torpedo the Lusitania," continued Capt. Turner, "and as soon as we came within the danger zone after passing Fastnet I had all our boats swung out and ordered a double lookout for submarines."

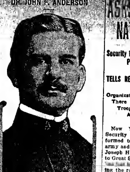
Early in the morning he said the Lusitania had been forced to slow down on account of the fog. She was traveling below her normal speed when hit, he stated, because he wished so to regulate the vessel that she would reach Liverpool before high water.

Capt. Turner further declared that he had been in wireless communication with the admiralty and that he had been told German submarines were lurking in the vicinity. Three of his lookouts sighted the torpedo simultaneously, he said, and three cries, "There's a torpedo!" reached his ears. He then saw the wake of a torpedo. The missile struck the Lusitania between the first and second funnels.

"After the torpedo struck a cloud of smoke and steam arose between the two funnels," said Capt. Turner. "There was a slight shock immediately after the first explosion and another report which might have been internal.

"I immediately ordered the boats ...

DR. JOHN F. ANDERSON



Dr. John F. Anderson, in charge of the hygienic laboratory of the United States public health service of Washington, made the startling statement before the army medical school that the dread typhus fever is far from being eradicated in the United States and that it is possible for it to break out at any time with virulence. He believes that many cases occur yearly in the hospitals of the great cities which are not recognized. Dr. Anderson has had wide experience with typhus, having studied hundreds of cases in Mexico and conducted many experiments with the inoculation of monkeys and guinea pigs.

Washington Officials Speculate On What Wilson Will Say to Kaiser.

EXECUTIVE GLOOMY OVER LUSITANIA CASE

May Tell Germany She Must Abandon Her Attacks on American Lives or Be Denounced as an Outlaw of Nations.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson passed Sunday in gloomy solitude, revolving in his mind what action he shall take against Germany for the destruction of the steamship Lusitania and many American lives.

The expression used in the official statement from the White House that the people expected the president to act firmly has caused all officials to believe that the president is preparing to tell Germany in phrases which will become historic that she must abandon her attacks on American lives and ...

ASKS FOR BETTER NATIONAL DEFENSE

Security League Issues Open Letter to People of United States.

TELLS RESULT OF ITS INVESTIGATIONS

Organization Finds, It Is Stated, That There Are Barely 30,000 Mobile Troops in America and They Are Widely Scattered.

New York City.—The National Security League, an organization formed to conduct a campaign for army and navy preparedness, of which Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, is honorary president, [illegible] ing the result of investigations by its committees and appealing for public support for a program for better national defenses.

Finds Troops Widely Scattered.

The league finds, it is stated, that there are barely 30,000 mobile troops in continental United States, that they are so widely scattered as to make their rapid mobilization impossible, that this force is short of officers, ammunition and equipment and has no organized reserve. The National Guard is found to be below its proper strength in men, equipment and efficiency. Coast defense, the latter continues, is inadequate and fortifications are insufficiently manned and without adequate organized reserves.

Investigation discloses, it is asserted, that the navy is neither adequate nor prepared for war, that it is inadequately manned, is short of ammunition and has no organized reserve of trained men, that the submarine flotilla exists chiefly on paper, that fast scout cruisers, battle cruisers, aeroplanes, mine layers, supply ships and transports are lacking, and that target practice has been neglected or altogether omitted.

Must Prepare for Defense.

Because of this alleged condition of affairs and because "it is manifest that until a workable plan for a world alliance has been evolved and agreed to by the principal nations, with proper guarantee of good faith, the United States must undertake adequate military preparations for its defense and appeal is made for support of the following program:

Legislation correcting present wasteful methods of military appropriation and disbursement, the adoption of a definite military policy, a stronger, better balanced navy, an effective mobile army, a larger and better equipped National Guard; the creation of an organized reserve for each branch of our military service."

The letter is signed by Mr. Choate as honorary president; Alton B. Parker, Democratic candidate for president in 1904, honorary vice president; S. Stanwood Menken, president, and Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of ...

MOTHER AND BABY ARE SLAIN IN THEIR HOME

Skulls of Woman and Infant Son Are Crushed With Hammer and Their Throats Cut With Knife

Chicago, Ill.—Mrs. Ella Coppersmith, 27, and her two-year-old son were murdered in their home, 7100 Lowe av, early in the afternoon. The skulls of both had been crushed with a hammer and their throats cut with a kitchen knife.

There also were evidences that the young mother had been assaulted. Investigation showed she had been robbed of two diamond rings and $60.

The body of the woman was found in the kitchen. That of the child was in an adjoining room.

Clutched in one hand of the dead woman was a 5-cent piece, and the police believe she had opened the door thinking to give the coin to a beggar or else to buy something of a peddler.

Neighbors told of a rough looking tramp in the district who had been turned away from several residences. Shortly before noon he was seen to enter the Coppersmith rear yard and no one seems to recall seeing him after that.

The bodies were discovered shortly after 1:30 by a sister of Mrs. Coppersmith.

Mrs. Coppersmith was the wife of John L. Coppersmith, secretary of P. W. Coppersmith & Co. ...

NEW GERRYMANDER NOW BEING STUDIED

Bill Interests State Solons Who Have Ambitions to Go to Washington.

SPONSOR OF MEASURE IS MUCH SOUGHT

Sprague is Being Driven to Despair by Requests of Prospective Candidates for Congress for Changes in Redistricting Proposal.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

ONE of the interesting eleventh hour pastimes in the general assembly will be to see if a new congressional gerrymander can be rushed through. The new proposal for redistricting is intensely engrossing to all members of the assembly who have ambitions to go to Washington, and all such members have carried home copies of it to study during the interim which takes place before long, when both houses will re[illegible]. Representative Sprague of Scioto county, chairman of the federal relations committee of the house, who is sponsoring the new proposal, is being driven to despair by the requests of prospective candidates for congress for changes to satisfy their political longings. He started out with the notion of pleasing everybody and finally gave it up as a bad job and decided to run the gauntlet of wrath with the measure as it stands. It proposes, among other things, to give the Republicans 15 "safe" districts and the Democrats six. That leaves one, Franklin county, doubtful. Its most drastic change from present conditions is seen in the Seventh district, where Congressman Fess has been accustomed to getting such large Republican pluralities that he is long since weary of counting them. The bill takes from the Seventh some of its surplusage of Republican votes and distributes them to the adjoining districts. In fact, it is attempted thus to make three districts "safely" Republican instead of one overwhelmingly so. But the danger facing the bill, as before remarked, lies in the fact that some of the members of the assembly are pinched by its provisions. A few members hold ...

Knocks Out Old Practice.

An official ruling given by Attorney General Turner will make mayors who act as police judges, justices of the peace and other magistrates "sit up and take notice" because it knocks out a practice which has almost become universal with them. It is the practice of remitting parts of fines upon persons for violations of the statutes. In a ruling to the state industrial commission Attorney General Turner holds that these officials cannot remit a part of a fine and that when once imposed it must stand. Often when some violator is haled into court the magistrate proceeds to administer a scathing arraignment to the offender and then impose a heavy fine upon him. All this looks fine to the public. Later the fine will be almost entirely remitted, but the news of this will be suppressed by the magistrate. Under the ruling it will be unlawful for a magistrate to remit a part of a fine. It is assumed that if he does this that he can be required to make good the part remitted.

Aims to Reduce Fire Hazard.

A person who fails to take the proper precautions to prevent fire may be held for damages, so Attorney General Turner has ruled in an official opinion to State Fire Marshal E. R. Dellenbaugh, who is now conducting a general clean-up campaign in the various cities of the state to reduce the fire hazard. "At common law, one employing fire as his agency, or upon whose property a fire has been accidentally or without his fault started, who fails to exercise ordinary care under the circumstances to prevent its spread to neighboring property, or one who negligently or carelessly starts a fire, is liable to damages to another for injury to person or property, of which injury such fire or its spread is the proximate cause." This is the attorney general's holding. It will be seen from this that there is considerable individual liability for damages resulting from fires caused by carelessness.

Crimps Put in Allowances.

A number of state officials found Friday upon receiving copies of the new general appropriation bill for the next two years that crimps had been put in many of their allowances. Although the law provides that the three members of the state industrial commission and three of the four members of the state administration board shall be paid $5,000 salaries, the bill appropriates but $4,000 for each official ...

PARTY'S ONE HOPE

Republicans Forced to Pray for Crop Failure.

Have Banked on National Disaster to Secure Return to Power Through Howl of Calamity and a Return to High Tariff.

Republican leaders have got themselves and their party in such a position that their only logical course is to pray for drought.

After flirting with the question of national defense and yammering futilely about Mexico, the g. o. p. captains finally pinned their faith to hard times, and settled down to the good old calamity howl. They notified the world that this country was on its way to the bow-wows, and that nothing less than the ancient tariff graft could bring it back. They intoned a regular devil's litany of blessings on disaster. Factories were closing—whoopee! Railroads were busted—hooray! The steel trust was passing its dividends—three cheers and a tiger! If only bad times got bad enough and lasted long enough, the Penrose-Cannon-Smoot combination saw itself restored to power for another half-generation.

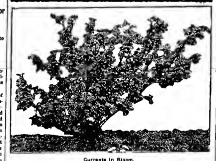
But, alas and alack! hard times refused to last. The banking system devised by a Democratic administration carried the nation through the worst crisis of the last half-century without a sign of panic, and then came the turn. Foreign commerce knocked out for a space by the war, has revived in splendid fashion. Factories are opening, men are going back to work, exports are increasing, railroads are buying equipment, shipyards are working day and night, independent steel companies are making money.

In circumstances like these, a party which banked on national disaster to bring it back to power has just one hope left. The spring has been very dry. If the heavens withhold rain a few months longer, there may be a crop failure, which will make it somewhat easier to howl calamity, and call for a high tariff as a means of regulating the weather. Wherefore it behooves the faithful from Danville even unto Salt Lake City to pray for drought.

A Poem.

Although George W. Perkins, Senator Penrose and other politically interested gloom spreaders deny it and refuse to be comforted by the joyously upward trend of trade statistics, still it is a fact that times are better. The truth of this has been proved by facts, figures, argument and observation. Better times have passed the anticipatory stage and are here like spring and dandelion greens, and like them again they have permeated mise en ...

GROWING FRUIT NEEDS MORE ATTENTION



Currents in Bloom.

(By W. MILTON KELLY.)

There is nothing that needs more special study and attention than growing fruit for home use. The trouble now is that nine-tenths of us do not know how to utilize what nature offers.

I know a lot of farmers who have fine buildings, keep good stock, grow large crops, without having any conception of home and home life.

What we need on our farms is better homes. We cannot do anything that will improve our homes more than growing an abundance of choice fruit for home use. Every farmer's garden should have a strawberry bed that the table may be supplied with this fruit fresh and have a surplus for the cans and jelly tumblers.

The best way to secure plants is to have trial beds set with the leading varieties. In this way it is easy to determine the relative merits of the different varieties, and grow vigorous plants for the next year's beds.

There is no danger of losing plants when they can be taken from the trial beds and removed to the garden rows, but when coming from a long distance they are apt to heat and very few can be saved.

When received by mail or express they should be opened at once, the roots shortened about one-third with a sharp knife and the plants spread loosely in a cool, damp place, or in water in which soil has been mixed.

No imperfect plants should be set. Side runners frequently appear between the sets, and pursue the same course of establishing plants as the main runners. They are little better than weeds. By setting out only the best plants the beds will not run out.

In setting plants give them plenty of room so the air can circulate freely, and winged insects can go from flower to flower that perfect fertiliza...

... dressed with well-composted manure, and no weeds should be allowed to grow in the rows. These precautions are necessary to ward off mildew.

The tree form of growth is best suited for this berry, as well as the currant. Borers seldom trouble the gooseberry. In propagating we employ the layer system, which is done by securing the thrifty bushes to the ground, and placing soil over them, when they will start a root system.

Right after these small fruits we want a small orchard of plums, cherries and peaches. A few trees of the best varieties will supply the home needs.

Every fruit grower wants a small pear orchard because there are a few varieties of the fruit about as near perfection as anything that has been evolved in the orchard line. Next to the small fruits these trees are the most valuable in the farm garden.

As an all-around fruit the grape ranks next to the apple. Fifty or one hundred vines of well selected varieties will afford plenty of this healthy fruit from the middle of August until frost comes.

Then, by taking precautions and carefully storing late varieties in a cool room, we can keep them in excellent condition for Christmas and New Year's.

No other fruit can take the place of grapes during their season. They afford an abundant supply of delicious and strengthening food for nearly five months during the year. We should grow the grapes and eat freely of them.

Blackberries come late in the summer and furnish excellent fruit for canning, preserving and making delicious pies. The following way of managing the blackberry patch will insure plenty of this fruit for the home use ...

The Barnum and Bailey Greatest Show on Earth will exhibit at Cleveland on Friday and Saturday, May 28-29 and this good news is being heralded everywhere by the many agents of this, the biggest and foremost amusement institution in the world. The Barnum and Bailey Circus has always been the largest that travels and this season the management has found it necessary to add many more cars to their trains in order to provide for the great equipment. It requires 85 double length railroad cars to transport the big show, 1280 people are employed, there are 700 horses, 40 elephants and a menagerie of 110 cages. 180 world famed artists take part in the greatest circus program this world has ever known.

A fitting introduction to the wonderful performance this year is the presentation of the new, magnificent spectacular pageant, "Lallah Rookh" in which nearly 1000 characters take part.

In the circus proper, which is presented in three rings, four stages, the hippodrome and in the dome of the largest tent ever erected, 480 performers from every nation in the world take part and present a vast array of foreign features entirely new to America.

Great interest is already being shown in this neighborhood and great crowds will no doubt go to Cleveland for the biggest and most enjoyable holiday of the year. Every one is advised to get an early start in order to be there in time for the parade which starts promptly at 10 A. M., and which is said to eclipse anything of its kind ever before attempted in the history of circus business.

Whooping Cough

"When my daughter had whooping cough she coughed so hard at one time that she had hemorrhage of the lungs. I was terribly alarmed about her condition. Seeing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy so highly recommended, I got her a bottle and it relieved the cough at once. Before she had finished two bottles of this remedy she was entirely well," writes Mrs. S. F. Grumes, Crooksville, Ohio. Obtainable everywhere.

Center of Pilchard Fisheries.

Cornwall, the great fishing town of England, is the center of the pilchard fisheries. The pilchard is a very important food fish. About the middle of July it appears on the Cornish coast in immense numbers, and is captured in large quantities. The fish bears a close resemblance to the herring but is rounder and thicker and the under jaw is shorter.

Dolls for Society Women

In Vienna a regular trade is done in elegantly dressed dolls that are purchased by society women. These dolls are carved by hand after models by well known artists, and they often fetch as much as $15 each. Their costumes are beautifully made, and no two are alike in face and figure. Many of these handsome toys are exported to America.

English Table Delicacy.

The Englishman's weakness for pudding and pie is attested by the fact that the great London fire began at Pudding lane and ended at Pye corner. Wine Office court derived its name from the wine traffic formerly carried on there. Lambert Simnel, the pretender in Henry VIII's time, originated the Simnel or mid-Lent cake, now a celebrated specialty of Hereford. The cake is made of flour filled with plums and candied peal. It is tied in a cloth and boiled for hours, after which it is brushed over with egg and baked hard.

Relics of Other Days.

Splendid gates remain in many of the lesser cities of the old world, just as far north in Germany as there are remains of aqueducts built by the Romans which are as fine as the Aqua Marcia at the papal capital, remains of the days that are long faded, but the monuments of which can be seen above ground or dug out of the underground like those of Troy, of the alleged Babylon, of the more certain Pompeii.

Fads of French Women.

Many society women in Paris keep dolls, and also toy dogs and other animals, and just before the death of Caran d'Ache, the celebrated artist, both French men and French women used to buy the wooden dolls which he had designed, and which were usually caricatures of notable people.

FAMOUS MAKERS OF BELLS

Frans and Pieter Hemony, Natives of Lorraine, Said to Have Excelled in the Craft.

Most of the bells of Holland and Belgium are of the manufacture of the Hemonys, two brothers who lived between 1597 and 1680. The Hemonys—Frans, the elder, and Pieter, the younger brother—were natives of Lorraine who early established themselves at Zutfen. They were excellent craftsmen, producing bells of peculiar beauty of form, and possessed a marvelous faculty for tuning bells. Theirs was the golden age of carillon-making, and their bells remain predominant in the towers of the Low Countries today. It is interesting to notice their contemporaries in the Netherlands, for the carillon was the manifestation in music of the spirit of a people who at the same time were showing great genius in many other directions. Rembrandt, Ver Meer, Rubens, Van Dyck, Frans Hals and Pieter d'Hooch all lived at this period. Likewise, Lieven de Kay, the master builder, and Visscher, the famous engraver, and Vondel, the dramatist and poet. Tromp and De Ruyter were winning their naval victories and Grotius was writing his great works on international law.

The brothers Hemony made their first carillon in 1645 for the Winehouse tower at Zutfen. During 35 years the Hemonys made scores of carillons, the total value of which Van der Straeten says was surely more than 3,000,000 francs—$600,000—an enormous sum for the time.

NO REAL CAUSE FOR "BLUES"

Happiness and unhappiness are irrational. They are outside of theorizing or philosophy. A trivial incident sends our spirits up or down. "Thinking backward" is how the Germans describe melancholia. The loneliness that is experienced in crowded places, and the yearning for days gone by or for far-off scenes creep unannounced into the heart.

Real troubles do not kill the joy of living. Catastrophe and hardship challenge the soul to combat, and there is a grim pleasure in meeting and grappling with adversity. The slumping of precious illusions, the chilling fogs of misunderstanding, jealousy, envy and self-pity pile up at times to obscure the vision. Illusions which are our playthings and our reasons to be alive no longer gleam and glisten. Drab reality supplants the radiant ideal.

Every person has believed in his innermost mind that he had a monopoly of sorrow and tribulation. "No one so oppressed as I walks this earth," complains the unsophisticated wayfarer. Fatalists there be who argue that no one is happier than anyone else and that he who goes down to the depths of woe is merely paying for his ascents to the pinnacles of bliss.—Detroit News.

There was great excitement in the village Sunday morning when fire was discovered in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Schupp on Kirtland Flats. The fire bell rang, people hallooed and soon every man and most of the women and children within a mile of the place were at the fire but in spite of strenuous efforts, the building and much of the contents were lost. Fortunately roofs were damp and no other buildings caught fire.

Lawrence Hunkin is suffering with rheumatism and can scarcely walk.

Mrs. Fred Morse and daughter, Genette, of Cleveland, were visitors at the Morse home last Sunday.

Mrs. Whelpley of Cleveland is spending several weeks with her sisters, Mrs. O. A. Billings and Miss M. C. Crary.

In the month of April, Mr. Hadlock's flock of two hundred hens on the Treadway farm, averaged a fraction over twenty-two eggs per hen, a flock of seventy-one hens in charge of Mr. Dobbs on the Halle farm also averaged a little over twenty-two eggs per hen, and Mr. Mahlon Martin's sixty hens produced a fraction over twenty-one eggs each. These figures are not given as record breakers but just as comparisons and an incentive to poultry raisers to keep a record and know whether their fowls are a paying investment.

Plants Can Feel.

We now know that plants are able to feel objects at a distance. Certain ferns, for example, will begin to send down a root on the outside of the pot the instant water is placed in the saucer; and, when a fly is placed before a sandew plant the leaf reaches for the insect with its tentacles.

What Are We Waiting For?

Why should we postpone our loving and the being happy that goes with it? The wife we are going to show more affection for as soon as we have made a little more of a pile, the husband we are going to be more companionable and sunshiny with as soon as we get a little more service in the house, the children whose lives we will enter more fully as soon as we feel the pressure of circumstances a little less, the people we are going to show how genial we really are as soon as we have time—none of these ways of loving depend on the things we are waiting for. Indeed, our opportunity comes more now than it will come when we have these things. The very pressure of our day brings us in contact with people who must need a show of kindliness, and who will warmly respond to it. The wife most needs and will value most love in her days when she is most being a helpmeet. The husband most needs and most prizes love in his years of struggle. What are we waiting for? The kingdom of heaven is within and will not come of circumstances.

His Fancy Dress Suit.

A recruiting officer in a Lancashire district tells the following veracious story.

He served in the Royal Horse artillery in the South African war, and when the war was over a lot of officers got up a fancy dress ball in Cape Town.

Several of them were discussing what "characters" to assume, when one of them offered to wager he would go in a "get-up" that would insure that no lady at the ball would dance with him.

The wager was taken up by several, the ball came off, and the officer won.

He went as a barbed-wire entanglement!—London Tit-Bits.

Galveston, Tex.—Charles Pertolina, the official rat catcher, has resigned. For the past six or seven months he has been catching rats along the water front at the rate of 2,000 a month. He received the regular bounty of eight and ten cents per rat, and in addition, a bonus of $10 for each month in which he took over 1,000 rats. When he took the job he said he would quit when he had earned money to buy a boat and a gasoline engine. His ambition was realized last week and he handed in his badge.

Best Thing for Bilious Attack

"On account of my confinement in the printing office I have for years been a chronic sufferer from indigestion and liver trouble. A few weeks ago I had an attack that was so severe that I was not able to go to the case for two days. Failing to get any relief from any other treatment, I took three of Chamberlain's Tablets and the next day I felt like a new man," writes H. C. Bailey, Editor Carolina News, Chapin, S. C. A WILD RIDE

Young Bride Escapes From Custody and Reaches the Home of Her Mother

The ninety-ninth reel of the "Experiences of Edythe" was run off Saturday evening and the "Perils of Pauline or the Exploits of Elaine" were tame and colorless in comparison.

Edythe is known to the world as Mrs. Johnny Haserot of Cleveland, and her matrimonial and other troubles have been aired in the city papers for several months. Her troubles began last spring, when she and Johnny eloped to Canada and were married. A few days later Johnny was sent to the reformatory and Edythe filed a $100,000 damage suit against Johnny's father, a wealthy Cleveland grocer. While the suit was pending the girl disappeared.

The girl's mother and private detectives at once started a search for her and after following many false clues located her at Chardon in the custody of Dr. Lucy Hertzog, and plans were made for a rescue.

Saturday evening a big auto dashed up when Edythe and the doctor were on the streets and two men grabbed the girl and hustled her into the machine where her aunt was waiting. A wild ride then commenced. Without lights the car burned up the muddy road between Chardon and Painesville, missing the police in this city by less than five minutes.

At Painesville the party secured an auto truck from the American garage and the girl and her aunt were buried under a half ton of straw, covered with burlap, and thus, disguised as a load of market produce, drove to Nottingham. The balance of the night was spent there and late Sunday afternoon Edythe was safe in the arms of her mother and none the worse for her experiences.

Mrs. Haserot signed an affidavit stating that she left Chardon of her own free will and that she was not kidnapped. This affidavit will be used by Myron Weiss, the Cleveland reporter, and Mrs. Hilda Harding, the aunt of Edythe who were with her on her wild trip from Chardon to Cleveland in case the warrants which were issued for their arrest on the charge of kidnapping are served.

MANY MILLIONS OF BABIES THAT NEVER FRET OR CRY

There are 17,000,000 eugenic babies on Put-in-Bay Island, and more wonderful they never cry or fret. In fact not one of them has ever been spanked nor do fond parents walk the floor with them at night.

However the babies are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Rock Bass and Mr. and Mrs. Pickerel and were raised by the state and government fish hatcheries, this last winter.

The state and government boats are now busy placing the fish spawn in Lake Erie, where they are expected to grow up and be caught by fisherman.

Owing to the existence of fish hatcheries on Put-in-Bay Island and other places, fish are becoming more plentiful in Lake Erie. In fact so many fish were caught this spring that the bottom was knocked out of the market and many fishermen were forced to quit on account of the extremely low price.

ENGLAND EXPECTS TO WIN

Because the Men at the Front Are so Good and Brave

James Garrett of Pearl street has received an interesting letter from a niece in England who has seen some of the war preparations and who is convinced that England must win. Following are a few extracts:

"We have sent out from the county of Durham alone 80,000 men who voluntarily took up arms for king and country. We have had one Zeppelin raid, but suffered little. Our town is in darkness at night, market stalls are being lit up with candles.

"The Germans came to our coast and bombarded Hartlepool and killed about ninety people but our men at the front are good and brave, and we mean to win in this war."

A Birthday Surprise

Young ladies to the number of twenty-five gave Miss Marion Babcock a surprise party Tuesday evening at her home on Jackson street, the affair being arranged in honor of her birthday anniversary by Miss Margaret Donaline, Miss Margaret Thoirs and other friends and members of Miss Babcock's Sunday school class.

The surprise was complete and the hostess received a gift of a fine set of orange spoons. One of the features of the supper was the birthday cake with—lighted candles. (We promised not to tell how many.)

BIG CIRCUS NEXT WEEK

Funniest Clowns on Earth are With the Robinson Famous Shows

A good circus makes all the world akin—at least that portion of humanity within the reach of any big circus. It always has been thus and always will be as long as human nature is human nature.

A boy never forgets his first circus—neither does a girl forget it. It is one of the mile-stones that mark the altogether too fleeting years of childhood's career of innocent and harmless pleasure. What would a circus be without a band? What would it be without a clown?

The circus clown dates his origin back to the beginning of the circus itself, and from time immemorial he has been one of the most important features. During the growth and development he has by no means been left behind. He is funnier now and can do more tricks than ever before. In the old days one clown sufficed to satisfy the demand for the show-goers, but now it takes twenty-five for the Robinson Famous Shows. Nowadays the clown who could not do anything but grin and drive a donkey that played a tattoo with his hind heels on the dashboard of a little cart could not get a job. He must be versatile or look for another position.

The acrobatic work is only a small part of a clown's performance. There is scarcely a humorous phase of life which the clown does not touch or a heroic feature which they do not burlesque. This always delights the crowd, for one of the things which pleases an American audience is to see some one ridiculed.

It has been one of the best circuses on the road for years, but what would its vast array of circus talent amount to if it were not for the tireless work of the "funny fellows"? The presence of the clowns is essential. The burlesque clowns, the rube clowns, the short clowns, the tall clowns, the graceful clown, contingent of more than twenty-five with the Robinson Famous Shows.

Without the clown, the petite, pretty equestrian could not have his brief visit, the acrobats could not get their second breath and the musicians could not catch a moment's rest. Originally a "fill-in" to cheapen the salary list and to serve the above purposes, the circus fools are features with a circus and command liberal salaries. They are no longer used to fill in. All the clowns will be here with the big shows on Wednesday, May 26.

SATAN CLAIMS HALF INTEREST IN THE UNPAINTED CHURCH OR SCHOOL

There will be more religion inside the church, and a better sermon come out of the preacher if the outside of the meetin' house is respectable.

Better work will be done in school if teacher and school board discover that the school house and grounds are an eyesore to the community, and then cure the disease. Many teachers and preachers should be stuck with a pin. Many church and school officers need the stimulating effect of dynamite.

Satan claims half interest in the church or school that needs paint, repair and decent surroundings. When school house and grounds become the most untidy and dreariest spot in the neighborhood, it's time to change teachers and school board. Paint, flowers, shrubs, trees are right bowers of religion and education. Hats off to teacher and preacher who present good appearance. The Agricultural Commission of Ohio urges both town and country to make church and school house beauty spots and not permit them to become eyesores.

TOOK A JOY RIDE

Without Consent of Owner of Machine and Is Fined By Mayor

"There wasn't anyone using the auto so I thought I would take a ride," was the novel excuse given by a Painesville young man when he was captured by the police early Sunday morning in a Buick roadster belonging to the Educational Supply Co.

The machine is kept in a garage at Lee Elliott's on Bank street, and Mrs. Elliott heard two men around the place early in the evening. She at once notified her husband by phone and called up the manager of the company.

For several hours employes of the company and police tried to locate the machine and messages were sent to officers of other cities. About 2:30 a. m. Lieutenant Welton saw the machine coming down Main street and stopped the driver after considerable effort. The car was turned over to the owners and the young man at the wheel was taken to the lockup where he spent the remainder of the night. The machine was not seriously damaged, but plainly showed the effects of the trip to Cleveland in the rain and mud.

Mayor Malin assessed a fine of $15 and costs upon the young man and also gave him some fatherly advice about keeping his hands off from other people's property. As the law provides a penalty of from $10 to $200 fine and imprisonment for six months for taking a machine, the fellow may consider that he secured his experience very cheaply.

"Owed" to the Editor

Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself has said "That editor has quite a head. I'm glad I take his paper. He's got a raft of grit and sand, he prints the news of all the land, he boosts the town to beat the band, and that's the proper caper. He soaks the grafters in the neck, he saves the Ship of State from wreck, he's Johnnie on the spot, by heck when things are in a jumble. He writs the ads that bring the dough, he chases all our gloom and woe, he tells us all we want to know—and yet he is quite humble. He never gets a bit stuck up, he's worked since Hector was a pup, to earn his daily bit, and sup, anr have a little over. I know we owe him many plunks, so let us shame the other skunks and furnish him with kale in chunks, wherewith to live in clover."

Greenhouses Planned

A vegetable greenhouse which will eventually cover 25 acres is planned by the Willoughby Greenhouse company, a partnership formed by E. A. Mantey of stop 47 with James Saywell, a Cleveland greenhouse expert.

SYNOPSIS.

In the New York home of James Grant and his wife Ruth, Jim's sister, Mrs. Ralph Grant, is seen by the children of Grant's cousin Philetta to have the children of Philetta's husband, Ralph, who has given the slip to his wife and family, and who is thought to be in Europe, in his employ. Philetta, who is a woman of distinguished appearance, but of a cold, hard, and domineering character, has come to New York to find her husband. She is accompanied by her son, Ralph, a cripple, and by her daughter, Ruth, who is a pretty girl, but who has been made cowed and disappointed and timid by her mother's treatment. Ralph, who is a cripple, and who is a good-hearted boy, and Ruth, who is a pretty girl, but who has been made cowed and disappointed and timid by her mother's treatment, are seen by Jim and his family, who have long known of Philetta's domineering character, to be the victims of her tyranny. CHAPTER VII—Continued

Then, before they started horrea stretch case, the blinds coolly planned the pitiferous blunder that brought defeat to in the life!

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the poor man.

"It is not always the knife that finds the heart," said he, slowly, as full of meaning, that even the old man grasped the sinister meaning of the remark.

"I rather can be fooled, so anyone have chosen my hiding place," said Dieves, and he was not referring to the assassins of great.

"No, sir," said Mr. Sigan, with electric vivacity, "I don't like the idea."

Ralph set off of the Gates and fatter was the answer. They were beating the vague whispersings of Nelson Gates and Jim Grant, who they had heard then years ago in the sagacity absence of the first.

"Bah! One rescue," said Ringle, "and you fellows are all in a funk."

As Dieves later his chair, he glanced mischievously behind him and the old guys were about to protest in other. There was no sound from the hall. They sighed, relieved, and the cabinet door. At last they heard footsteps in the hall, and then heard the pass.

Frederick's strode results into the room.

CHAPTER VIII

"He Killed a Woman."

His face was livid with rage. For a moment he glowered upon the two old men, his lipless, thin-skinned mouth quiet, his chest heaving with the violence of his breathing. Then, with the quickness of a wildcat, he sprang at the table.

"Is God's name, Freddy, boy, what's happened?" cried old Mr. Sigan, all of a tremble.

"Dieves, you've ruined me!"

Ralph's eyes met those up his eyes in a gesture of amazement. There was a wall of misery in his voice as he groaned out.

"In the name of God, why should he ruin you? What has he done?"

"Hush!" ingested Mr. Sigan, "hush, only "he'll hear you!"

"Hear me!" cried Frederick, and repeated aloud in his restlessness. "Why shouldn't he hear me? My uncle's house is mine, and my uncle's house is mine, and I can do as I please in it. I'm a man, I'm a man, I'm a man,

WILSON'S BRAVE WORDS

"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight," said President Wilson in his remarkable Philadelphia address to naturalized Americans. "There is such a thing as a nation being so right," he added, "that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

Brave words these. Braver could hardly have been conceived or uttered. And certainly they must appeal to the sober sentiment of the American people.

Yet the Roosevelts and the Gardners and the jingo press will not be able to understand them. The thought of the president is above the comprehension of men who take the bull dog as the type of courage. Those who would plunge this country into the maelstrom of war at the cost perhaps of tens of thousands of lives to avenge the loss of a few Americans who threw prudence and sober counsel to the winds when they sailed on an enemy ship into the war zone are not patriots; they are not men of vision; they are simply disturbers, a dangerous element in our society, a menace to the country they profess to love, yet whose institutions they would imperil as lightly as a boy would cast a stone into the sea.

"The example of America must be a special example," said the president; "and must be an example of peace not merely because it will not fight, but because PEACE IS A HEALING AND ELEVATING INFLUENCE OF THE WORLD; and STRIFE IS NOT."

America can fight. There cannot be the very least question on that score. It has demonstrated its fighting quality more than once. But it can do a greater service and show a higher kind of valor than by rushing pell mell into the bloody enterprise out of which the recent unspeakable tragedy grew as one of its most horrible and perhaps most wanton incidents.

CHANGING THE CLOCK

At midnight Sunday every clock and watch in Detroit, except those used in the railroad and postal services, was put one hour ahead by resolution of the City Council. Monday morning 200,000 got to work an hour earlier, and stopped work an hour earlier in the evening. This also applies to all mercantile houses, to the banks and every other activity, except those mentioned.

This chance is the result of the campaign for more daylight, but more especially of Cleveland's adoption of Eastern time a year ago. The sun instead of rising in Detroit at 4:15 will rise at 5:15, and instead of setting at 6:42 will set at 7:42. There will be more daylight during working hours, and sleep will be centered in the hours of darkness.

These isolated efforts to promote early rising by clock tinkering may be symptomatic of a popular awakening to the loss of daylight under existing hours of working and waking. There is much that may be said in favor of a general readjustment during the summer months that would give us the fullest use of daylight now wasted in slumber. But any reform should be made by scientific and national action, not by the edict of a City Council here and there, with its resulting confusion and disorganization of established [illegible] custom.

"LITTLE" JAPAN

It is still quite the usual thing to hear Japan spoken of as a small state. Contrasted with the bulk of China, for instance, it is not strange that men think of "Little" Japan and the next nearest neighbor of the Japanese is Russia, another enormous empire.

But only such comparisons make Japan seem small. The Japanese islands including Formosa have an area of over 160,000 square miles. They are bigger than Great Britain and Ireland, larger than Italy. With Korea now entirely a part of Japan added the area of the Japanese empire is over 240,000 square miles. That is a greater area than Germany has or France. Russia and Austro-Hungary are the only countries in Europe which are more extensive.

The population of Japan not including Korea or Formosa is now about 53,500,000. It is larger than the population of any country in Europe except Russia and Germany. It exceeds the population of France by about 14,000,000 and the British Isles are surpassed by fully 6,000,000. Add Formosa and the total for Japan is raised to 57,000,000. Include Korea and it becomes no less than 70,000,000 or about 2,000,000 more than the inhabitants of Germany.

Such facts simply prove that Japan as a nation is not little. On the contrary the Japanese are a numerous, powerful, ambitious people quite formidable enough to be taken into very serious consideration by any other country, however great and rich, proud and confident it may be.

INFLUENCED BY MUSIC

EFFECT OF SWEET STRAINS ON DOMESTIC ANIMALS

Lecturer Urges Farmers to Place Phonographs Near Their Bee Hives and Stables—Tells of Her Own Experiences.

Farmers who want better honey, richer milk and more of both should put phonographs near the hives and in the pasture or stable. Dr. Alma Webster Powell, LL. B., M. B. A., M., Ph. D., of New York and Columbia university is authority for the assertion. She declared to an audience at the University of Washington recently while lecturing on "Music is a Human Need," that she herself had tried the experiment on her farm and that it had proved absolutely successful.

Nor are bees and cows the only creatures influenced by music. Doctor Powell and her daughter keep four or five crickets in their hearth, and evenings they attract them forth to a dance in the middle of the living room in their farm home by singing to them. Madam Powell says she has had many scientists as her guests to witness the phenomenon.

Six little crippled girls, of particularly unlovely natures, whom she found in the slums of New York, were other objects of Madam Powell's study. She gave musical training to these children, putting phonographs in their homes, and not only succeeded in entirely reforming their dispositions, but in effecting marked changes in all of those with whom they associated.

At Coney Island, she said she ran a tent where mobs were incited to riot every evening by radical speeches. After a few months of experiment in this direction she introduced music at the meetings, and though the speeches became more fiery then ever the crowds were invariably peaceful.

She contended, as a result of these experiments, that music stirred the sluggish and tranquilized the nervous person, animal or insect.

Madam Powell believes in ragtime for all who like it, and she is one, though a highly educated and successful prima donna soprano and pianist. "A good ragtime piece sets me beating time and if I don't do it on the outside I feel it on the inside," she said.

Gamblin' Man Led to Repentance.

During the recent revival in Ebenezer chapel Goat Simmons, the gambling man, "came through" amid a thunderous concomitant of triumphant hosannas. He sprang to his feet with a loud shout and immediately tumbled down in a fit on the floor, where he postured and gyrated like an unfortunate toad in the embrace of a hot cornpopper. An especially animated squirm sent a couple of dice flying from the pocket of the groveling wretch, to be followed a moment later by another which caused a deck of cards to be widely scattered.

"Hallelooyer!" shouted good old Parson Bagster. "It's de sin dat's bein' shuck out'n our sufferin' brudder! Shake him ag'in, Lawd!—shake him twell all de sin am purged fum him!"

"Dat's right, Lawd!" yelled Brother Bogus. "Keep on uh-shakin' de scamp twell he rattles out dem two dollahs he won off'n me at de lodge last night!"—Kansas City Star.

Easy to End Dissension.

Much of our dissension is due to misunderstanding, which could be put right by a few honest words and a little open dealing.—Black.

THAT IDIOTIC FRIEND

MOST OF US HAVE HAD EXPERIENCE WITH HIM.

Worst of It All Is That the Surge of Hate in One's Heart Has to Be Suppressed, Though at Times It Almost Chokes.

Most of the annoyances of life are caused by friends. It doesn't annoy you when your enemy tries to get you in bad. You don't expect anything else from him. It's his regular business. You'd feel that he was a pretty measly sort of an enemy if he didn't try to puncture one of your tires. Then you can think and speak about him as a leprous horned toad. But you can't think or speak about a friend that way when he gets under your skin. He's your friend! That's all there is to it—he did it, and he's a feeble-minded anteater, but he's still your friend!

Only a dear friend would greet you when you're feeling peculiarly gay and fit with "Saaay! What's the trouble? You look positively green, old horse! Don't you feel well? You ought to take a long rest. That's right. I don't like that hollow-eyed look of yours, perhaps it's your heart."

Or

Come up behind you when you are looking calmly at some old prints in a window on the avenue and forgetting there are such things in the world as idiotic friends, and let his enormous flat nine-pound hand down on you between your shoulders so that you think for the moment that a prehistoric mule with hoofs on him the size of the rubbish receptacles on the corners has planted them in the interior of your lungs! Only a friend could inspire such diabolical and streaming hatred that rises up in the wreck of your breast when you manage to turn and see what hit you!

Or,

If you happen to ask certain friends to go motoring several times and have them to dinner quite often and you let two or three Sundays go by without asking them, it is only dear friends who would on meeting you next time greet you with a Hudson Bay expression and a bucket of sarcasm!

Or,

Speaking of the sex that is responsible for all the poets, who but a true and tried friend would put over to her friend, "Oh, Camille, you were such a pretty girl as a young girl and you did have the loveliest clothes!"—James Montgomery Flagg, in the American Magazine.

Known by Chipped Tooth.

Down at League Island the entire marine corps is shaking with silent laughter at the dilemma of the officers of Company 17, Second regiment, for the company has as members unusual twins.

They are Leslie and Hallie Woodcock, twenty years old, from South Carolina. At enlistment they were promised they would not be placed in separate companies.

In reading the list of those detailed for various police duties in the morning the officers merely mention the name of Woodcock. They realize that one blond twin will report for duty. Further investigation is useless.

One or two of the men have discovered a small piece has been chipped from a front tooth of one of the twins.

"That would be a hot one," observed an old sergeant. "Who goes there—Woodcock? Halt and uncover tooth."—Philadelphia (Pa.) Dispatch to New York Herald.

Soul of the Samurai.

The beautiful Japanese sword which has been presented to King Albert was forged in 1577 by the famous swordsmith, Kakagawa Shichiyemon-no-jo Yukikane, who died in the year of the great armada. To the collector it is the wonderful adornments of the hilt, guard and scabbard of the Japanese swords which appeal. But to the connoisseur it is the blade itself. For the Japanese swords excelled the finest products of Damascus or Toledo, and the great smiths were a hereditary caste, who forged their blades with secret and immemorial religious rites. This blade was the "living soul of the samurai." The finest blades were made of soft magnetic iron, with a hard steel edge, which was tempered in cold water while the softer backing was surrounded with fire clay.

To Speak Japanese.

Strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless a fact (which was admitted in the house of commons a short time ago) that there is not a single officer in the British army who understands the Japanese language!

Some time ago one of the assistant directors of military operations on the staff of the army council compiled a work on strategy, and the Japanese war office authorities perceiving its value, translated the work, and as is usual in such cases, forwarded the British author some copies of the translation.

The author, not knowing the language, turned over the leaves of the army list, and found that not a single officer in the British army was qualified to act as interpreter in the language of its allies.

Easily Seen.

"I don't believe Jack's new automobile has been any pleasure to him."

"Why do you think that?"

"He hasn't been arrested once since he's been running it."

Something of a Novelty.

Young Actress—"I am going to get married and I would like you to make a big story about it." Dramatic Editor—"I don't see just how I can." Young Actress—"Oh, yes, you can; you can have a great headline saying, 'Actress Marries for the First Time in Her Life!'"—Puck.

Daily Thought.

Don't flatter yourselves that friendship authorizes you to say disagreeable things to your intimates.—O. W. Holmes.

Wife's Question Made Broker Wonder Whether He Might Not Have Been Deceived.

A Wall street broker of English parentage and an unusual name was talking to several other brokers, business not being particularly rushing at the moment.

"If anybody in this crowd has a gold brick for sale," he said, "I wish he would try to dispose of it to me at a good figure. Why? Well, I'm in the market since yesterday for that sort of material.

"It happened this way. About 4 p. m. a very nice-appearing man of the working class came into my office and asked for me. I saw him and asked him his business. He told me he had seen my name in the papers, and as his name was the same as mine he thought, the names being so unusual, he would call on me.

"He was very unmistakably English, and the similarity of names was of some interest, even though I hardly thought he was in my class. Still he might have been a hard-up titled nobleman working for his living, as some of the best of them do rather than sponge it off somebody else.

"He talked along about his family and where they lived and asked me where mine came from and said he had been living in Canada for fifteen or twenty years, where his father had gone from England. Times were hard and he had come to this country, where they were no softer and—well, it ended by his touching me for $5. His name was good for that, I thought, whether he was wholly deserving or not.

"When I went home in the evening I told my wife about it and did she applaud my respect for my family name? Not on your parish register she didn't. She looked at me critically and said: 'John, did the man show you any papers to prove that his name was the same as yours?' Right then I awoke and if any of you gents have a gold brick to sell will you please pass it on to me?"

On His Dignity.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who has equipped a $250,000 field ambulance for the allies, told many interesting war stories during her recent visit to America.

"The new English army is wonderful," she said at a studio tea in New York. "The officers themselves are surprised at the rapidity with which the young English volunteer can be trained into a splendid soldier. Of course, though, amusing mistakes often happen before the military rules are mastered.

"An English officer told me of an incident which occurred in his regiment. One day the colonel had to reprimand severely a recruit. The next day this recruit was on sentry duty when the colonel passed by. Noticing that the sentry failed to give him the usual salute, the colonel intentionally passed him a second and even a third time. To his astonishment the salute was each time omitted.

"'Do you know who I am?' the colonel asked indignantly.

"'Yes, sir,' the sentry answered.

"'Then you know you ought to salute me, then?' pursued the colonel.

"'Aye, but,' said the sentry, 'thee and me fell out yesterday.'"

For Love of the Work.

The Russia of today has no social life, its women have no thought of dress and amusement. All are working for their country, and an exceptional number of the women of education in that country are specially qualified to be of service to the wounded soldiers. Speaking of her country, the wife of a Russian attache in London said: "Perhaps the women of Russia study medicine and nursing more generally than is the case elsewhere, for in Russia the poorer classes look more naturally to those who are blessed with a larger share of this world's goods for care and protection. This feeling is now on the decline in towns, but in country places, where doctors have rounds of a hundred miles' radius, the poor of a district, in the absence of the medical man, are looked after and tended by the daughters of the house on whose estate they live. Thus every young girl goes in for medicine because she loves the work."

Fear Eskimos Slew Priests.

Advices received from Mackenzie river valley in the Arctic circle by the Catholic authorities here caused serious alarm among friends for the welfare of Rev. Father Jean Baptiste Rouviero and Rev. Father Guillaume Leroux, Catholic missionaries.

It is reported they have been murdered by Eskimos in the vicinity of Bear lake, 100 miles east of Port Norman. They have been engaged in that field for several years.

News comes to Rev. Father Allard, the Archbishop's secretary, in a letter brought from the Arctic Red river and written by Rev. Father Jules M. Lecayer, Catholic missionary at that point. The letter was written on January 15.

HAS FAMOUS PANTRY

MOST WOMEN WOULD ENVY QUEEN MARY'S TREASURES.

Besides Possessing Great Historic Interest, Their Financial Value Is Enormous—Some Marvels of Workmanship There.

Among the famous pantries of the world is that of Queen Mary at Windsor. This pantry comprises two rooms of no great dimensions, but it contains treasures in the form of plate and household articles that are valued at more than a million pounds sterling. Many of these possess historic interest. For example, there is a conspicuous exhibit in the form of a table of solid silver. This is nearly a yard in length, and its top, with an area of several square feet, bears the royal arms and exquisitely chased designs of the symbolic rose, thistle, harp, etc. Every reign since that of Elizabeth has contributed to this table a design of some sort.

The most imposing of all the dazzling array of plate is the so-called gold dinner service for occasions of the highest state.

The walls of the two rooms of this royal pantry, the larger of which is 30 feet by 16 feet, and the smaller a square of 16 feet, are lined with cases of plate glass and mahogany, and in these and similar cases, occupying the center of each room, are some of the most extraordinary examples of art in gold, silver and precious stones that the world has ever seen.

There are tall, graceful epergnes, each of which would tax the strength of two men to lift it; there are dishes in gold and silver, any one of which would be too heavy to run away with; dainty toilet services in gold and silver, candelabra, communion services, flagons, vases, punch bowls, wine coolers, fountains and fonts in silver, wrought in designs of great beauty by the most skillful artists.

The most beautiful of all these, it is said, is the Nautilus vase fashioned, it is claimed, out of pearl, gold and silver by the hands of Benvenuto Cellini himself, although it bears the name of an artist of Nuremberg, Nicholas Schmidt. The shell, which is of pearl, mounted in silver and gold of the most delicate chasing, is poised on the shoulders of a superbly mounted horseman, and above the pearl shell another figure is throned.

Another marvel of workmanship is the rose water fountain, in silver, with its dome supported by columns, around which are grouped horses and hounds.

In point of interest it would be difficult to picture any article of the kind more artistically perfect than the silver-gilt flagon, that was rescued from the armada more than three hundred years ago. This flagon is a yard high and its value runs far into the thousands.

One of the historic bits that are highly prized is a quaint pair of bellows, mounted in silver and gold, that once belonged to Nell Gwynn. There are ponderous silver "firedogs" of the time of Charles II, and near by is an enormous punch bowl, contributed by George IV as an example of the art of Flaxman.

Is It a Dinotherium?

It is refreshing now and then to get away from daily consideration of the modern monsters of destruction and renew a suspended acquaintance with the behemoths of the earliest days. Here, for instance, is the story of the fossil survival of what may have been a dinotherium, according to the discoverer. It was dislodged, the fossil was dislodged, from a section of yellow clay 15 feet below the street level at St. George, Staten Island.

The foreman of the excavating gang says the bones look mightily like an elephant's, but the finder scorns this unprofessional opinion and sticks to the dinotherium theory. What the ubiquitous and fee-gathering coroner will have to say may be known later.

Anyway, the dinotherium—if that's what they decide to call it—is calculated to give sated New York a rest from war's alarms and bomb outrages and scandal stories, which can be regarded as a consummation devoutly to be approved.

Sell Bomb at Auction.

First Aeroplane Bomb—A contribution to the fund has been made in the shape of a fragment of the first bomb which fell on English soil in this European war. The contributor considers that, as an enduring record of the war, the fragment should increase in value as time goes on, and he has decided that it shall be offered for sale to the highest bidder, and the amount realized credited to the Times fund for the sick and wounded. The donor will give to the purchaser of this fragment of the bomb the authentic history of how it came into his possession. The highest bid received will be accepted.—From the London Times.

He Had a Collection of Them.

"I've just got a little note from Cousin John," she said. "Shall I read it to you?"

"No," he said quietly. "It won't be necessary. I've got six of his notes now and they're no good."—Detroit Free Press.

That Started Him.

Boreleigh (at 11:40)—Do you know I always thought you had a retiring disposition?

Miss Weereigh (stifling a yawn)—Not exactly, Mr. Boreleigh; but I must confess to a disposition to retire.

Should Have Sealed It.

Through some slight error in the use of the old Hebrew letters it seems that the official seal of Yale university has been embellished with the motto, "Blasphemers and Farmers," instead of "Light and Truth." This may emphasize anew the old saying that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, but the fearful mistake should never have been exposed. If the wise ones who detected the error had only maintained a discreet silence there are very few who would ever have known the difference.

When Spencer Tried Vegetarianism.

Herbert Spencer tried vegetarianism for about a year, says the London Chronicle. "At the end of that time," he relates, "I went over all that I had written during the year, and consigned it to the fire." Spencer found an exclusively vegetarian diet too bulky, and came to the conclusion that rational life is a compromise. "In the matter of diet it is best to strike the happy mean between the tiger pacing its cage and the cow lying upon the grass."

TEXT OF NOTE FROM U. S. TO GERMANY

Calls Attention to Recent Acts of Teuton Authorities in Violation of American Rights On High Seas.

Says It Is Clearly Wise and Desirable That American and German Governments Should Come to an Understanding as to Grave Situation.

Washington, D. C.—The text of the note from the United States government to the German imperial government, transmitted Thursday to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin and presented Friday morning to the German foreign office, reads as follows:

"The secretary of state to the American ambassador at Berlin.

"Department of State,
Washington, May 13, 1915.

"Please call on the minister of foreign affairs and after reading to him this communication leave with him a copy.

"In view of recent acts of the German authorities in violation of American rights on the high seas, which culminated in the torpedoing and sinking of the British steamship Lusitania on May 7, 1915, by which over 100 American citizens lost their lives, it is clearly wise and desirable that the government of the United States [illegible]

FEDERAL LABOR BODY LAUNCHES NEW PLAN

Will Educate New Americans in Citizenship at Meetings in Cities to Be Addressed by the President or High Officials.

Washington, D. C.—The visit of President Wilson to Philadelphia to welcome several thousand recently naturalized American citizens is only the beginning of a series of such meetings in American cities to be addressed by the president or some high government official. The president's trip inaugurated a most important policy of the federal department of labor's division of immigration for educating in citizenship the increasing numbers of immigrants who each year enter into citizenship as Americans.

A "course of instruction" is being prepared, and the co-operation of the public school officials with the federal authorities is to be sought. The object is "to change that portion of the alien body which is now in a condition ranging from helpless dependence and mere self-maintenance to a state of productive capacity," according to a statement just issued by the department.

The action of the labor department is based on a belief that citizenship is something for which a man or woman [illegible]

END OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY NEARS

FINISHING TOUCHES BEING PUT ON WORK

Ohioans, as Result of Session, Next Fall Will Vote Again on Question of Exempting Public Bonds From Taxation.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

THE end of the 81st general assembly's session at last is in sight unless untoward circumstances arise to change the formal plans that have been made. Both houses have agreed to work during the first three days of this week and then to recess to Thursday, May 27, for final adjournment. This constitutes a longer session than most of the members expected when the session began and longer than many members looked forward to a month ago. Final differences between the governor and the Hamilton county Republican delegation over a liquor license law was partly, at least, responsible for the [illegible]

Physical Welfare of Ohioans.

Public health has been given a big boost by the present assembly, health experts aver. Numerous bills affecting the physical welfare of Ohio residents have been sent through both houses and are now practically laws. Here are some of them: The bill by Dr. Deaton of Miami, compelling reports of eye infection in new born babies and providing for the use of a prohylactic against eye troubles which are responsible for a large per cent of blindness in the state. The Platt-Ellis measure, which brings under state regulation all forms of non-medical healers and protects the public from untrained persons who seek to practice these non-medical branches without a rudimentary education in anatomy and physiology. This bill is regarded by public health workers as the most advanced cult regulation measure enacted in any state. The Sprague bill provides for the registration of trained nurses and is designed to discourage incompetents. The Hoy medical board bill, which makes it possible for the state medical board to materially curb the operations of unscrupulous medical practitioners. The Lloyd dental board bill, which is designed to protect the public from dishonest or poorly prepared dentists. The White bill will raise the standard of pharmacists in Ohio by demanding of them higher preliminary qualifications along educational lines. Officials Make Tentative Survey of Yellow Springs Location.

Cincinnati, O.—The Neff grounds at Yellow Springs, with 5,000 acres of land situated between the Grinnell road and Clifton are being considered among other sites for the summer encampment of at least a part of the Ohio National Guard, is indicated by a tentative survey of the grounds made by high officials of the guard and local committee. Whether the guard officers in charge of the encampment this year plan to hold regimental camps or brigade encampments has not been announced, but will probably be soon, in view of the near approach of the time for the summer drills. The state officers in the party were: Adjutant General Benson W. Hough, General John C. Speaks, General Herbert W. McMacklin, Major Duffield and Captain Duffey. The local committee was comprised of Congressman S. D. Fess, P. M. Stewart, J. F. Egolf and Towne Carlisle, owner of Neff park.

Secretary Redfield Talks of Democratic Record.

Action Taken Has Seen in the Interests of the People and Not at the Dictation of Private Interests.

Denunciation of "calamity howlers" and a vigorous defense of the policies of President Wilson's administration were the features of a speech at Indianapolis by Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce before a meeting of representatives of Indiana manufacturing interests.

The secretary defended the tariff, lauded the federal reserve act, declared that the Clayton antitrust law and the federal trade commission act have made plainer the way of the business man, and asserted that in the condition of the country today "there is no happiness for those who would do evil to the administration."

The secretary quoted several newspaper articles to show that the country was on the way to prosperity, and paid caustic respects to "purveyors of pessimism."

Proof That There Are More Ways Than One of Effecting Separation From Obnoxious Job.

A boy who went to work in the Hotel Sherman running an elevator tired of the job and wanted to quit. He was told that it was customary to give notice and that he would have to stay until his month was up, that if he left sooner he might forfeit his pay.

The next morning he stopped the car on signal at an upper floor and Eugene Belfeld, son of the proprietor, got aboard.

"Good morning, Gene," said the conductor. "Fine day, isn't it?"

Gene said nothing until he reached the manager's desk, when he exclaimed:

Sick Women Made Well

Reliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

Camden, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping-chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. Tillie Waters, 530 Mechanic Street, Camden, N.J.

Mentor

Mrs. Maggie Carrol and Miss Kate Garret have been sick, but are nearly well now.

The Mentor Temple to the number of twenty-one attended Willoughby Temple last Wednesday evening and report a fine time.

Thursday night the Mentor serenaders treated Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lyman to a sample of their music.

Nearly all of the city people have opened their summer homes here, and business is on the increase.

A number attended Barbara Worth at the Utopia Monday evening and were well pleased.

Mrs. Chas. Reynolds, aged 83 years, of Kirtland, a well known and highly respected lady, died of pneumonia at her brother's, Isaac Wright of Kirtland, with whom she has made her home for years, and her funeral will be Tuesday afternoon. They used to live on Mentor Plains. The only immediate family left is Dr. Don Reynolds, head of Green Springs sanitarium.

Mrs. Marin Hopkins returned from Eustis, Florida, Thursday or Friday, called by a dispatch telling of the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Kittie Reynolds who lived until the Sunday following.

Miss Annette Pierson entertained her cousin, Miss Bianca Morse of Cleveland over the week end.

West Mentor base ball team defeated Kirtland at Field Day there Saturday.

Mrs. Lucille Zigler and friend of Kirtland visited cousin here Saturday.

Chas. Montgomery has moved to Painesville with his sister Mrs. Elmer Freshwater.

Mrs. L. H. Morse of Kirtland spent Sunday and Monday with her cousin, J. W. Pierson and family.

L. P. Clark gives the Baccalaureate sermon Sunday evening, May 30th at the M. E. Church for the high school.

Mrs. Fred Stevenson entertained her grandmother, Mrs. Martha Brooks of Kirtland Wednesday.

Mrs. Elliot is spending some time at Mrs. Diantha Carver's.

The Disciples expect to celebrate children's day in their new church. The church has four more new memorial windows one for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Radcliff, one for Mr. Robert Filmore and William Greenstreet, one for Mrs. Clark, and one for Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Otis.

Rev. Clark is to give the memorial address to the G. A. R. at the M. E. Church, May 30. But the old soldiers are growing so very few, so many have died during the past year, also the G. A. R. Commander, Spencer Munson, and several are confined to their homes by illness.

The body of Mrs. Thersia Carver of Elyria was brought to Mentor for burial yesterday, by her husband, and a large party of relatives were met by many more at the cemetery. Their pastor, Rev. Frank Tyler accompanied them. Mr. Tyler was born and raised at Little Mountain and it was a solemn service for him also, as his father, mother, and many other dear friends were buried there. Mrs. Carver leaves a husband and son, Addie Carver and family, also the family of her deceased daughter, Mrs. Minnie Booth.

Rev. and Mrs. Clark expect to attend the State Convention of the Christian Church at Nelsonville next week.

Master Harold Smith who has the broken limb, is able to ride out, but helpless as yet.

The Mothers' Club of West Mentor, who gave such a popular entertainment last winter that they repeated in the same place the next week, have purchased and presented their school with a $40.00 Victrola. Mr. Chesney, the music teacher, is given the power and money to purchase suitable records now and from time to time, and is making them a study, teaching the children the history of music and certain pieces. This is an excellent idea and is being successfully carried out in Cleveland and many other city schools, and wish all schools in Mentor township were so supplied.

Since Prof. Mills has taken charge of West Mentor schools, there is something doing all the time.

The Crochet Club met at Mrs. McKown's last Thursday.

Burridge woods camps seem to have overflowed, as Monday night two tents for workmen were put up on Frank Rexford's estate on Jackson St.

Early Monday morning one of the C. P. & E. cars bumped into the Paving Co.'s steam ditcher, near Stop 61½, derailing the front end of the car and smashing the fender. They did not seem particularly cheerful, especially as a bystander gleefully remarked, "Say, it wasn't a Ford you hit this time," and the ditcher didn't say a word but kept on digging. The driver of the ditcher evidently did not allow for the sharp curve at that point and so a mixup resulted, but no one hurt as we could find out.

"Ignorance of the Law."
Take an innocent little statute. One lawyer (maybe a country counselor) says it is dead. Another lawyer says it is alive. The poor little statute does not know whether it is coming or going, whether it is alive or dead, afoot or horseback. And yet "no man can plead ignorance of the law." A man may go to jail if he does not know the law—unless he is a lawyer. Oh, you Exact Science!—Kansas City Times.

Fresh Air Is Life.
No man ever successfully made love when he had a cold in the head. Also no man ever devised a great business scheme when he had asthma. Adenoids, enlarged tonsils, defective hearing, myopia, often come from bad sanitary conditions that weaken the individual, until the germs of disease get him in their deadly clutch.

To Get Rid of Fleas
Sand forms the best surface on which to expose garments or bedding infested with fleas. If the sunlight is strong enough to raise the temperature of the sand to 120 degrees the fleas will be destroyed within an hour, provided there is no vegetation or shade where they can take refuge.

HERE'S A FEW SUGGESTIONS FOR BOOSTING PAINESVILLE

Don't be the man who put sit in city.

Building good houses builds a good town.

Save a little money and save a lot of worry.

Good roads lead not only to town, but to money.

Be a live one and the town will never be a dead one.

A nice front porch has prevented many an old maid.

Why should the town muzzle dogs and not knockers?

When someone plans to help the town, plan to help the plan.

The best plans a man can have to the future are house plans.

A good way to make the world better is to begin with the home town.

A town is like a perambulator, it isn't much good unless it is pushed.

Don't spend all your time telling what you could do if you had some time.

Be like a ball player. The thing he is always working for is home.

Be one of the leaders of the town, if you can; but, anyway, keep up.

Don't be a grouch. Everybody in this town wishes you well, even the doctor.

Let's not be trying to stop something all of the time. Let's start something.

A good town will do more to keep the boys at home than good advice.

A town is like a girl. It's wonderful what a little fixing up will do for her.

The world owes every man a living, but the street corner is a poor collection agency.

Don't look for soft snaps; the hard snaps are the ones that have the ginger in them.

Don't spend so much time talking war that you haven't time left to talk business.

If you would like to have somebody working for you, put a little money in the bank.

It improves the soup to throw a little pepper into it. Same way with a town.

If you spend all that you earn, some other fellow is banking your money.

Many a young man goes away to seek his fortune when Fortune is seeking for him at home.

Plaster your house and everybody will follow your example. Lath and the world laths with you.

You've got to be a citizen in order to vote, but you've got to do a good deal more than vote to be a citizen.

If you will consider the men in this town who are well off you will find that most of them made their money here.

KILLED AT MENTOR

Young Man Meets Death Fixing Electric Light

Bert Severs of Geneva was instantly killed at Mentor Tuesday afternoon when he came in contact with a live wire.

Severs was an electrician in the employ of the traction company and had gone to Mentor to look after the lights. He was working alone and was on a pole at Stop 55, opposite the Garfield home, when the accident occurred.

Severs leaves a wife and two children at Geneva. One sister-in-law, Mrs. M. Hayes, resides in Painesville.

MENTOR KNITTING MILLS CLOSE TWO DEPARTMENTS

The finishing and cutting departments of the Mentor Knitting Mills have been discontinued and this part of the work will be done at Erie in the future. The change will affect about fifty people who have been working at the Mentor mills. Some of these may be given work at Erie.

Other departments of the Mentor mill will be continued, for the present at least, although the plant is not running to full capacity.

COUNCIL DOES LITTLE

Meeting Monday Evening Was Not Exciting

At Monday night's meeting of the council bids were opened for the $35,000 worth of electric light bonds which the city will sell providing the people are willing and the issue was awarded to the Provident Savings and Trust Co. of Cincinnati at a premium of $503.10.

The dog ordinance, passed at a previous meeting, was vetoed by the Mayor on the ground that there was no money appropriated for carrying out the various provisions of the measure.

The clerk in the office of Secretary O. W. Kile of the water and light department was given a small increase in salary and was entitled to as much more as she does the work of two ordinary girls.

"SWAT THE ROOSTER" IS SLOGAN FOR THE FIRST WEEK IN JUNE

"Swat the rooster," is the slogan which Septimus Mawer, chief inspector of the state dairy and food department, has decreed shall herald throughout Ohio the annual anti-rooster crusade.

"Swat the rooster and save the egg," says S. Mawer. "One million dollars' worth of eggs are annually rendered unfit for food in Ohio because of the pernicious activity of the male birds following the hatching season. Eighty degrees of temperature starts incubation and a cool spell later kills the embryo chick, which means a bacterially infected egg or bad flavor. Every egg consumer and every egg producer should join in observing rooster week."

Mr. Mower cites Professor F. S. Jacoby of the poultry department of Ohio State university, and other authorities to show that destruction of the rooster is essential to an increase in both the quantity and the quality of eggs. He quotes Professor Jacoby as asserting that the results of the national laying contests show that hens lay better where the male birds are not permitted to run among them and that the practice of slaying, selling or confining roosters should be universally practiced by farmers and poultry raisers. To make this an annual practice, he says, would place Ohio in the forefront as an egg-producing state.

WINANS SCHOOL LAW

Makes Some Radical Changes In Present School Code

The Winans School Law, which passed the House Tuesday night makes some quite radical changes in the present school code, but, in the main, does not materially injure the rural school system; in fact, the law, as we see it, seems to be intended to strengthen the power of the county board of education and county superintendent and to hasten consolidation or centralization of schools. Some of the more interesting features are as follows. No district superintendent is allowed to have charge of fewer than 30 teachers, but a school district maintaining a first-grade high school may remain out from under district supervision, and the local board of education will have power to say how much time the principal of such school shall give to actual supervision. Such schools will receive no state aid toward payment of principal's salary, but such principal shall perform the office of superintendent directly under the county superintendent. This provision will add work for the county superintendent. Another feature of the new law is the power of the county board of education concerning the closing of schools having a daily attendance under 12 for the past year. In cases of this kind the county board shall have the power to exercise its discretion as to whether such school shall be closed or continued, and from their decision there is no appeal. The county board also has power to set one whole district into another.

To Become June Bride

Miss Marjorie Nicholas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Nicholas, 8402 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, is to be married June 12 to Le Roy Davenport of Youngstown. The ceremony is to be solemnized at "Broadfields," the Nicholas country home in Unionville, where the family is now staying.

He Didn't Take the Paper

A farmer in the community once had a horse he wanted to sell. It was a valuable horse and should have brought a good price. For months he tried to sell the animal, but could not find a buyer at his figure. He finally sold it for about $25 less than its value, rather than carry it through the winter.

Now it happened that just across the line in another county there was a farmer looking for just such a horse, but was unable to find it. Then he inserted a little ad. in the home paper, which brought him a number of offers, one of which he reluctantly accepted.

The first farmer did not take the home paper, and of course did not see the little ad. of the man who wanted a horse, and who would have purchased his animal at a good price.

By not taking the paper he saved $1.00, and likewise lost $24 by not seeing the other fellow's advertisement.

Such occurrences are happening every week right here in this community, in which people actually lose good money because they do not take their home paper, and hence do not know of many of the opportunities that are placed before them. [illegible]

AN OLD-TIME COLLEGE

School at Willoughby Was Organized Eighty Years Ago

In reply to the query of a correspondent, who asks if there wasn't a college at Willoughby eighty years ago, W. R. Rose of the Plain Dealer makes the following reply:

No doubt you refer to the Willoughby University of Lake Erie, which was located in the town of Chagrin, afterward called Willoughby. This was incorporated in 1834, but didn't go into operation until a year or two later. The names of the incorporators were Nehemiah Allen, David Root, Lowell Goodman, George W. Card, Jonathan Lapham, John M. Henderson, Samuel Wilson, Luther P. Bates, Orrin Holmes, Hosmer Graham and Asahel Brainard. The college was, according to the incorporation papers, "in part a medical institution, and designed for instruction in medical science as well as general literature."

The faculty was made up as follows:

Hon. Nehemiah Allen, president.
Hosmer Graham, M. D., secretary.
John M. Henderson, treasurer.
J. C. Bennett, M. D., professor of medicine.
John O. Masterson, A. M., professor of mathematics.
Asahel Brainard, M. D., lecturer.
Mr. Prezriminsky, professor of French and German.
Rev. Mr. Coe, professor of philosophy, mineralogy, geology and belles lettres.

The cost of a full course of lectures in the medical department was $45, with an extra charge of $10 for a graduate fee and diploma. The college had a male and female collegiate department.

The medical school was soon removed from Willoughby to Cleveland.

Pioneer Miller Dies

Stephen T. Storm, 88, who established one of the first flour mills in northern Ohio at Kirtland, died May 20, at his home in Willoughby. Mr. Storm was the father of Fred Storm, well known resident of Lake county. A widow, Mrs. Sarah Storm, is the only other survivor.

Mr. Storm had lived in Lake County all his life and for several years had been out of active business life. He was the only surviving charter member of the Willoughby Masonic lodge.

Funeral services were held at Willoughby Saturday afternoon and were attended by many friends from all parts of the county.

Sunday Concerts Planned

Fairport may have Sunday afternoon band concerts during the coming summer. The Finnish band has offered to give a two hour concert on the park every Sunday afternoon, providing the council will grant the necessary permission and contribute the small sum of $15 a month.

The Fairport band is also after a concert job and a resolution has been introduced into the council to appropriate the sum of $300 for band concert purposes.

Big Machine Rolls Over Hill Near Willoughby Sunday

One woman was injured and a six-cylinder Kissell car was wrecked on the hill leading east out of Willoughby Sunday afternoon. The accident is said to have been caused by a desire on the part of a driver to "hog" the road.

The machine bore Ohio license number 135383 and is said to have been owned by Charles Baden of Cleveland. The occupants consisted of a man, woman, two children and a dog. In some manner the machine got out of the control of the driver and shot through the guard rail and over the bank. The car tipped over but in doing so struck a tree which prevented it from turning turtle.

Man Painfully Injured

Caught in the shafting of a gasoline engine, C. D. Hazen, of the Lake Erie Concrete Co. came near losing his life Sunday morning.

Repairs were being made on the engine at the concrete plant and Mr. Hazen was being assisted by Cal. Wooten. In some manner Mr. Hazen's clothing became fast to the shafting and had the engine been running full speed he would undoubtedly have been killed. Wooten sprang to his rescue and managed after considerable effort to cut Hazen free.

Mr. Hazen's injuries are painful but not dangerous, consisting of a badly lacerated face and wrenched back and arms.

Fruit Trees Dying

This is the season of the year when stone-fruit trees may begin to show signs of decline. It is not at all uncommon for cherry, peach and plum trees to blossom and to come out in leaf only to begin to wither and die. Death comes on very quickly, and so the cause is apt to be puzzling to the novice. Such symptoms are usually the signs of winter injury in some form. Not infrequently the bark will be found to split and peel from the stem easily. In other cases this symptom will not be present. In any event, there is, of course, no remedy for such trees, but in handling orchards in the future one should see to it that moisture and plant food are not too available. In other words, trees should ripen their growth thoroughly before cold weather comes on. Nature can be assisted in this process by restricting the supply both of plant food and moisture. The moisture supply can be controlled to a certain extent by the use of non-leguminous cover crops and the plant-food supply can be somewhat controlled by the judicious use of fertilizers and manures.—Professor W. Paddock, Ohio State University, Columbus, O.

SYNOPSIS.

In the New York home of James Brood, Dawes and Riggs, his two old pensioners and comrades, await the coming of Brood's son, Frederic, to learn the contents of a wireless from Brood, but Frederic, after reading, throws it into the fire and leaves the room without a word. Frederic tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancee, that the message announces his father's marriage, and orders the house prepared for an immediate home-coming. Mrs. Desmond, the housekeeper and Lydia's mother, tries to cool Frederic's temper at the impending changes. Brood and his bride arrives. She wins Frederic's liking at first meeting. Brood shows dislike and veiled hostility to his son. Lydia and Mrs. Brood meet in the jade room, where Lydia works as Brood's secretary. The room, dominated by a great gold Buddha, is furnished in oriental magnificence. Mrs. Brood, after a talk with Lydia, which leaves the latter puzzled, is startled by the appearance of Ranjab, Brood's Hindu servant. Mrs. Brood makes changes in the household and gains her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia away. She tries to fathom the mystery of Brood's separation from his first wife and his dislike of his son, but fails. Mrs. Brood fascinates Frederic. She begins to fear Ranjab in his uncanny appearances and disappearances, and Frederic, remembering his father's East Indian stories and firm belief in magic, fears unknown evil. Ranjab performs feats of magic for Dawes and Riggs. Frederic's father, jealous, unjustly orders his son from the dinner table as drunk. Yvonne follows Frederic to the jade room and influences him to apologize to his father and the guests for his alleged lapse. Brood tells the story of Ranjab's life to his guests. "He killed a woman" who was unfaithful to him. Yvonne plays with Frederic's infatuation for her. Her husband warns her that the thing must not go on.

"Are you mad?" he gasped. "Good God, woman, how can you ask that question of me, knowing that I love you with all my heart and soul? How—"

"With all your heart, yes! But with your soul? No! That other woman has your soul. I have heard your soul speak and it speaks of her—yes, to her! Night after night, in your sleep, James Brood, you have cried out to 'Matilde.' You have sobbed out your love for her, as you have been doing for twenty years or more. In your sleep, your soul has been with her. With me at your side, you have cried to Matilde!' You have passed your hand over my face and murmured 'Matilde!' Not once have you uttered the word 'Yvonne!' And now, you come to me and say: 'We will come straight to the point!' Well, now you may come straight to the point. But do not forget, in blaming me, that you love another woman!"

He was petrified. Not a drop of blood remained in his face.

"It is some horrible, ghastly delusion. It cannot be true. Her name has not passed my lips in twenty years. It is not mentioned in my presence. I have not uttered that woman's name—"

"Then how should I know her name? Her own son does not know it, I firmly believe. No one appears to know it except the man who says he despises it."

Maryland Senator May Boast His Ancestry.

Descendant of Some of the Most Distinguished Families of the Nation, Blair Lee Has Name Linked With History.

Imagine, if you can, a congress meeting in Washington, among whose new senators could be counted a scion of the Washingtons of Virginia, another of the perennially famous house of the Virginia Lees, yet another representing the only less famous Blairs of the day of Andrew Jackson and the "kitchen cabinet," another whose mother had lived in the White House as the intimate friend of "Old Hickory," and yet another descended directly from the war cabinet of Abraham Lincoln.

Add to that a group of representatives of the colonial aristocracy that founded Maryland and Virginia, that received its vast landed estates from the old Stuart kings, that fought in the colonial wars, that represented, through ancestral affiliation, some intimate association with half the administrations that have presided at the White House from the beginnings of our government, and, finally, include to that group the most intimate personal friends of the present administration—that would be quite a notable representation of the old American aristocracy, wouldn't it?

Yet there is among the baby senators of today one man who represents all this aggregated association of distinction and ancestry. He is Senator Blair Lee of Maryland—a Lee of Virginia, a Blair of the old Virginia-Kentucky-Missouri family of that name, a gist of the colonial gists, distinguished for nobody quite recalls how many generations, a relative of the Washingtons.

NATIONAL SONG OF CHINA

Country Has Awakened to the Need of Melody to Inspire Patriotism.

After the rejection of eight national anthems composed in China since the revolution, that of the Chinese minister to Belgium, Wang Yun Poo, which together with the song of the minister of agriculture, commerce and trade, Chang Tsein, belongs to the latest compositions, is likely to be accepted by the Chinese government. Following is a translation of the first three stanzas:

"China, the sublime mountains and luxuriant plains attest thy greatness. Country of wonders through thy hoary civilization thy emperors have sacrificed themselves in ceding the rule to the people.

"The people have the supreme power. So has taught Confucius and Mengtse. And already in the hoary times of Yao and Suen it had thus been announced to the people. The people is composed of five tribes. The unity of the five tribes is past dispute. Then China is invincible.

"Develop the wealth of the country, improve agriculture, and make the people happy. Education and culture are the achievements of centuries. All citizens are equal; for Confucius and Mengtse have taught social equality."—Philadelphia Record.

Why He Kept a Servant.

In the days when he was superintendent of the Portsmouth dockyard in England, Lord Fisher, the present admiral of the British fleet, had the seadog attitude toward the men; he frequently tested them with all the harshness of a whaling captain; they, in turn, treated him with a half friendly, half-hostile familiarity.

Several years after his Portsmouth days Fisher visited one of his old associates of the forecastle who was then living on half pay. He found the old man comfortably settled in a cottage, attended by another superannuated seaman.

"Why do you have this other man here?" asked the admiral.

GERM OF IMMORTAL ADDRESS

Proof That Lincoln Long Had In Mind Right Idea of What the War Meant.

Hay referred to Browning's suggestion that the North should subjugate the South, exterminate the whites, set up a black republic, and protect the negroes "while they raised our cotton."

"Some of our Northerners seem bewildered and dazzled by the excitement of the hour," Lincoln replied. "Doolittle seems inclined to think that this war is to result in the entire abolition of slavery. Old Colonel Hamilton, a venerable and most respectable gentleman, impress upon me most earnestly the propriety of enlisting the slaves in our army." (I told him his daily mail was thickly interspersed with such suggestions.)

"For my own part," he said, "I consider the central idea pervading this struggle is the necessity that is upon us of proving that popular government is not an absurdity. We must settle this [illegible]

IN HONOR OF DEAD

Practically Every Country Has Day Set Apart for Solemn Observances.

THE custom of strewing flowers on the graves of the soldiers originated in the South. Even before the Civil war was over the women in the South, where skies are warmer and temperaments more poetic than in the practical North, formed the habit of scattering flowers on the graves of the dead.

Days set apart for festivals in honor of the dead are found among all nations. The Chinese, Japanese, and even our druidical ancestors had or have such days.

The Romans commemorated a similar occasion and called it "Parentalia." With them it lasted eight days. But the Romans loved holidays. They finally accumulated so many in the course of the year that the law was forced to restrict the number.

Mass of Brilliant Colors.

There is a strong contrast in the way this day is observed in different countries. In France the "Jour des Morts," Day of the Dead, as it is called, is a pathetic and beautiful occasion. For two or three weeks before the day arrives the shop windows are laden with wreaths of immortelles, some in their natural color and some dyed blue, pink, or purple. When the day arrives the people stream to the cemeteries.

Thousands of people, thousands of wreaths! The cemeteries are one mass of brilliant color, of moving throngs, for not even the remotest part of the potter's field is neglected.

In Naples this day, celebrated there as All Saints day, is regarded as a holiday, and the visit of the families to the churchyard becomes a pleasure party. Metal garlands are chiefly used, and though they are more durable they do not possess the charm of real flowers.

In some of the villages in southern [illegible]

TOLEDO MAN EXPECTED TO DIE

D. L. Bower, treasurer and manager of the New Overland Real Estate Exchange at Toledo, thought death was close upon him. He suffered from derangement of the stomach and digestive tract and his condition was highly discouraging.

He took Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. Then he cheered up and went to eating. He had new interest in life.

J. W. Wood, Mr. Bower's partner, wrote:

"This remedy is surely one of the greatest medicines I ever heard of. My partner spent $2,000 with renowned doctors in trying to get relief. He gave himself until about the 20th of September to live. He has taken three doses of your remedy. Now he can eat and sleep without any distress."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.—Adv.

Being and Doing.

As the man is in the integrity of his character, so is his strength. Being is everything. It conditions happiness; it determines and measures service. A man's happiness depends upon what he is in himself. A man's service to others is conditioned upon what he is in himself. Being is basal to doing. As the speed of the electric car is determined by the energy stored in the power house, as the power of the piston rod is determined by the push of accumulated steam, so personal power is determined and measured by character. This is supreme power, a character filled with the divine presence and radiant with a divine holiness.

YOU AND THE PAPER

The local paper is always hustling for you and yours.

But what are you doing for it?

The paper is always scheming, and planning, and laboring for a better community, for a more prosperous community.

Do you ever exert yourself to give the paper a boost?

The paper is always pushing you and your people to the front, giving you a good word before your neighbors and the public, assisting you to build up a reputation which will be of inestimable value to you throughout the years of your life.

But what are you doing? Are you reciprocating in any way? Do you ever suggest to your neighbors or your friends that it is a good paper, a loyal paper, and that it should receive their support?

The paper devotes many hours and many pages in advertising the natural advantages of the community of YOUR community and in seeking to enhance the welfare of YOUR community and of YOURSELF.

But what of you? Do you ever seek to advertise the paper, or to swell its subscription list, or to increase its general usefulness to the community?

The paper is working six days of the week for the community, and for you, and for yours.

But do you ever devote a minute of your time to its material welfare? Have you ever done so?

The duty of the paper is to supply you with the legitimate news of the town and community. But the paper goes much farther. Its labors in behalf of the community are endless and without end, and it will continue to advocate the cause of community progress as long as it is a paper.

You are an important part of the community, therefore its labors are in YOUR behalf.

But are you doing one single thing to requite the paper for all of its toil and expense in your behalf?

You take the paper, you say.

True, and you get more than value received each issue in the news items alone. The fund of information which the paper hands you each publication day for a cent or two would cost you many dollars if you went out to gather it up yourself.

But this is not a kick, nor is it a roast. It is just a little food for thought in a few of your idle moments.

THE OLD SOLDIERS

In every generation there have been old soldiers. But in no other generation in America has this have these two words borne such significance and honor, been so meaning and definite. The Old Soldier is he who carried arms for the salvation of the Union, he who suffered wounds and sickness and unspeakable weariness in a cause so idealistic that a more sordid, a more selfish age, gropes in darkness to understand.

Among us there are veterans of other wars, some of them fought over mysterious quarrels and in places the names of which fall strange upon the ears. There are soldiers who passed through the bitter campaigns against the Cheyenne and the Apache And later the Spanish war and the conflict in the Philippines added great numbers to those who had experienced military service. Yet we can think of none of these—the soldier of the outland parts, the veteran of the Indian wars and the campaigner in Cuba and Luzon—as old soldiers. Whatever their age, whatever their suffering may have been, they will never command that description while those are living who have known the men of the civil war. There is but one Old Soldier.

Deeper become the furrows that are mowed in the ranks of the Grand Army. Each year fewer respond to the beat of drum that once stirred every fibre of being. The number of graves to strew with flowers increases in legions as the number of soldiers to strew flowers falls away. The Grand Army that is fast approaching the hour when it will be the Grand Army that was. But if ever men, of their strength and unswerving will, made a principal immortal, this army will never die. Its nobility will live though every heart of it is stilled.

CUT THIS OUT—IT IS WORTH SAVING

B. WOODROW WILSON

(From speech delivered at fleet review)

The interesting and inspiring thing about America is that she asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity. We want no nation's property; we question no nation's honor.

We stand for that for which every nation should wish to stand for.

When I think of the flag, the only touch of color about the fleet, it seems to me I see alternate stripes of parchment, on which are written right and justice, stripes of blood spilled for maintaining these rights, and in the corner a strip of blue serene.

The mission of America is the only thing a soldier or sailor should think about. He has nothing to do with best policy. He stands and waits to do the thing which the nation desires.

America sometimes seems to forget her program, or rather those who represent her do, but the people never forget. Their real affection and force is for the ideals that men embody.

When a crisis comes in this country it is as if you put your hands on the pulse of a dynamo.

The spirit now broods over the river. No threat is lifted against any man or nation. This is just evidence that the force of America is lifted for great moral principles. There is nothing else for which she will contend.

The Memorial services at Willoughby Sunday were very interesting and drew a nice crowd. It was the best they've had in several years. The band with their new uniforms were a very attractive feature, and the music was good considering the short time they've been in practice, "but then it couldn't be otherwise with Wm. Parsons as leader." The company of veterans is getting smaller every year and soon the brave G. A. R. men will be only a memory. I think Kirtland only furnished one veteran in the parade and that was Mr. George Stokes. We noticed one man, Mr. Allan Cleveland in the ranks who is past 90 and whose step was more elastic than some that were twenty years younger.

DECORATION SERVICES

The largest crowd in years gathered Sunday to attend the Decoration services. The first on the program was a service at the monument, by the Womans' Relief Corps, from Mentor. Then a long parade headed by the band, formed of the Veterans, a number from out of town were present, the K. of P. Lodge, the Woman's Relief Corps, the Firemen and a large number of school children and boy scouts, marched to the Andrews Institute grounds, through Erie St., where the exercises were held. Two numbers were sung by a chorus of Andrews school girls, there were drills by the children and J. S. Ellen gave an address. After the singing of America, the line was formed and marched to the cemetery to decorate the soldiers graves. S. S. Wilson gave a short address at the vault. The town need not be ashamed of its band, which did fine for a new band, and looked very smart in their new band suits. The flowers were plentiful this season.

Sunday Visitors

The season of the year has arrived when the farmers' wives may expect Sunday company from the city. It's so easy, you know, just to touch the auto button and be at the end of your journey in a jiffy, and enjoy the big dinner that is sure to follow. There is another side to this visiting, however, that is often forgotten, and is expressed by a farmer's wife in one of our leading agricultural papers as follows: "The majority of farmer's wives are simply over-burdened with summer company from the city, either relatives or friends, who, if they were forced to change places with us, would soon realize what it meant to be considered the one to make life lovely for them during the long, hot days of harvest, haying and all. Sunday visitors ought to realize that we farmer's wives are not machines of perpetual motion with no chance of a feeling of physical exhaustion."

Not in All Respects.

"I hear that they belong to the early settlers." "Well, you wouldn't think so if you could see the bill collectors climbing their front steps."—Judge.

REFERENDUMS MAY RETARD NEW LAWS

LIABLE TO CAUSE SERIOUS COMPLICATIONS

McDermott Liquor License Decentralizer and Parrett Whittemore Taxation Measures Would Be Hardest Hit if Forced Before People.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

IF REFERENDUMS are called against the McDermott liquor license decentralizer and against the Parrett-Whittemore taxation bill, serious complications are likely to occur in the starting of the tax and license machinery. Referendums would have the effect of suspending operation of the new laws until the fall election, but in the meantime the one measure proposes that saloon licenses shall be issued and the other that tax assessors shall be elected. The McDermott bill provides that the saloon licenses shall be issued on or before Oct. 15, but if the law is suspended there is a question when or how the issuance could take place. For, in the first place, if the saloons to be given authority to exist were chosen in anticipation of the approval of the law by the voters, the very act of choosing might be questioned, since the law itself would not be in effect. And even if the legality were assured, a serious question would arise in the event that the law were rejected. For the saloon men would have paid in their money and would have been given their licenses under a statute that was not a statute at all. The tax situation would be just about as serious. In fact, it would be hard probably to get people to become candidates for assessorships since if the new tax measure should be rejected at the polls there would be no elective assessors and the candidates would have had their trouble for nothing. But is it not definitely determined as yet whether or not there will be referendums. The decision is up to the state central and executive committees of the Democratic party, which will be called into joint conference just as soon as the general assembly session shall have been finally over.

O. N. G. Encampments.

Official orders for the Ohio National Guard encampments for this season have just been issued by Adjt. Gen. B. W. Hough. The First and Second brigades will hold maneuvers at Yellow Springs, Greene county, where some 3,500 acres of territory is available for the operations of the troops. The First brigade, with the Second, Third and Sixth regiments, with the Seventh infantry, Ninth battalion of infantry and Toledo signal corps attached, will be in camp from July 26 to Aug. 2. The Second brigade consisting of the Fourth, Fifth and Eighth regiments with the First infantry and Columbus signal corps attached, will be in camp from Aug. 9 to 16. A school of instruction for officers will be held on the maneuver grounds from July 5 to 10. Some 107 officers will attend the school. The sanitary or medical troops will be at Sparta, Wis., from July 5 to 15; the cavalry squadron will be in camp from Aug. 1 to 10, place not yet selected; Engineer corps, Belvoir Tract, Va., Aug. 17 to [illegible], and First battalion of field artillery, Sparta, Aug. 18 to 27. Brig. Gen. W. V. McMaken of Toledo commands the First brigade and Brig. Gen. John C. Speaks of Columbus the Second brigade.

'Swat the Rooster' Week.

This is "Swat the Rooster" week. It has been so proclaimed by the state agricultural commission and as a result thousands of roosters will be slaughtered during the week. This campaign against the barnyard king is in the interest of a better quality of eggs. After the hatching season is over the rooster is a positive detriment rather than a benefit, hence the edict for his extermination. If the chanticleer is not separated from the flock during the laying season eggs are fertilized and this causes them to spoil rapidly. The commission esti- [illegible]

Should Death Chair Be Abolished?

The fact that there are now two men in the Ohio penitentiary annex awaiting death in the electric chair is again emphasizing the existence of capital punishment in Ohio and is again turning public attention to the question of whether the state should continue or cease the taking of human life. However, to recall some of the things that have been done in the last few years is to conclude that the continuation of the electric chair is the result of deliberation rather than of accident. The question has arisen in practically every general assembly during the last 10 years. It was raised early in the present assembly by Representative Jones of Franklin county, a Democrat, but was given scant consideration. Three years ago the constitutional convention submitted to the people the capital punishment issue and the people voted down the proposal to put the electric chair out of commission. Of course, there are arguments on both sides and all the arguments are seemingly logical. In fact, there is hardly a subject that comes before legislatures for which more can be said on both sides. There is a strange feature incidentally, in the case of the two men now in the annex. Both are murderers of policemen and both committed their crimes when caught in the act of burglary, although their crimes were in different cities and at different times. Pete Scribner, just received this week, killed a detective who caught him trying to get into a residence in Toledo. Sam Scheff, who was the solitary occupant of the death chamber when Scribner arrived, killed a Columbus policeman who caught him trying to rob a saloon. The death penalty that awaits the two emphasizes the fact that public sentiment always is severe with murderers of policemen and develops the fact that, although a few such persons have escaped the severe penalty in years gone by, they have been the exceptions rather than the rule.

Two Bills Up to Governor.

Rural school supervision districts are much reduced by the Winans senate bill, which the house of representatives virtually enacted into law a few days ago. It is estimated that the present districts throughout the state, numbering about 700, are made reducible by at least half under the new measure. In other respects the bill only mildly revises the present rural school code. The house also enacted into law the new civil service bill by adopting the joint conference committee report, which the senate already had approved. One of the provisions of the new measure is the legislating out of office of persons who are now in the state, city, county and school classified service by virtue of passing non-competitive examinations. However, such persons can be retained by affirmative action of the appointing power.

Are Pen Prisoners Protected?

Are penitentiary prisoners protected by the workmen's compensation act? This is the latest question that has been put up to the state industrial commission, which administers this law. It is an exceedingly unusual one and probably will be referred to the courts for settlement. The question is raised by Ernest Ludwig, Austro-Hungarian consul at Cleveland, in the [illegible]

SWAM THROUGH SEA COVERED WITH DEAD

First of Lusitania Passengers to Reach United States Tells of Horrors.

NO PANIC WHEN SHIP WAS TORPEDOED

One Victim Was Caught in Blades of Liner's Propellers, Screamed Horribly for Second and Then It Was All Over.

New York City.—Dr. Carl E. Foss, a physician of Harlem, Mont., James Smith and Edward Skay, the first survivors of the Lusitania disaster to reach this country, arrived May 24 aboard the American liner New York. Smith and Skay were stewards on the Lusitania, but are now at work on a ship that flies the American flag.

Says Everyone Was Calm.

Dr. Foss was standing with some other passengers looking toward the Irish coast an hour before the Lusitania was torpedoed. At that time they sighted the periscope of a submarine and declared its nationality must be British. Then they went below for luncheon and were in the saloon when the Lusitania was struck.

"The explosion that followed brought home to us all what had happened," said Dr. Foss. "But there was no panic. Everyone was calm. I think we all realized the ship was going to sink and we made our way to the deck quickly and without serious confusion. [illegible]

Youngstown, O.—Collision between two trains on the scenic railway course at Idora park here resulted in the death of one man, the serious injury of nine others and minor injuries to several others in a party of 25.

Ten of the victims at once were removed to hospitals here, where one of the number died a few minutes after admission. Others of this group are suffering from broken limbs and severe lacerations and bruises of the body and head.

Several are in a serious condition. The nine suffering lesser injuries were able to go to their homes unassisted. A few of the pleasure seekers crawled down from their perilous position on the trestle and disappeared without giving their names. [illegible]

AUSTRIANS ATTACK BY THE AIR AND SEA

Assault Four Cities in Northern Italy With Aeroplanes and Destroyers.

GERMANS CUT THROUGH BRITISH LINES

Battles Are Raging Along Practically Entire Front in Russia—Turks Direct Fierce Attack Against Allies in Gallipoli.

Bukarest, Roumania.—Roumania is about to follow Italy into the war on the side of the allies. The government is negotiating with the foreign offices of the powers of the entente, and apparently little remains to be done to throw this Balkan state into line against Germany and Austria is the settlement of a few minor details as to the rewards in case of victory. Great enthusiasm for war fills the capital. The army, always prepared since the two recent Balkan wars, is eager for action, and the people cheer every suggestion that Roumania assert herself to expand her national power.

London, England.—An attack by air and sea on northern Italy, delivered before the time set for the opening of hostilities, was Austria's reply to Italy's declaration of war. Four cities on the Adriatic coast were attacked by destroyers and aeroplanes. Slight damage was done. Minor clashes between border patrols occurred in the Austrian Tyrol and along the eastern frontier of Italy.

In France the Germans again have resorted to the use of poisonous gases and have cut through the British lines east of Ypres.

In Russia battles are raging along practically the entire front, but decisive results have been obtained at no point. In Galicia the Russians are taking the offensive after their disastrous retreat.

Austrians Are Driven Off.

Austrian destroyers and torpedo boats raided the Italian Adriatic coast before daybreak. Simultaneously a fleet of Austrian aeroplanes attempted an attack on the arsenal at Venice. After a brief exchange of shots Italian torpedo boats, which had been expecting attack, drove off the Austrians. Like success attended the counter efforts of the anti-aircraft gunners and the Italian aviators in repelling the Austrian air raiders.

At Porto Corsini the Austrian aviators began dropping bombs, but immediately were driven off. Ancona was next attacked. Here bombs were dropped on the railway, but the damage was slight and can easily be repaired, according to the Italian report. [illegible]

ALL IN ONE MONTH

Figures That Will Keep Republicans Guessing.

They Would Not Dare Return to the Old Tariff Schedules, Even If They Were Returned to Power.

According to our dispassionate Republican friends, who desire nothing but the progress of the true, the beautiful and the good, the Underwood tariff was in process of wrecking the country when the obliging war came along and stopped up "the breach in the tariff barricade." Now it is no use for us Democrats to dodge, facts are facts. We might as well face them. Here goes to gaze on the Underwood tariff at its worst.

In May, 1914 our importations were $34,000,000 greater than they had been under the Payne-Aldrich tariff in the corresponding month of the year before. This was the greatest excess of the period before the war. Let us analyze it a little.

Of the $34,000,000 excess $14,000,000 is accounted for by increased importations of food. In 1913 this country was visited by general drought and the crops of the four principal grains fell short of the 1912 yield by a full billion bushels. Result, a greatly shortened food supply and heavy importations in the spring of 1914. Here are some of the items of increase: Food animals $665,000, fresh meats and dairy products, $3,900,000, corn, $809,000. Several millions of this decrease was in commodities which had been taken off the dutiable list by the Underwood tariff and made free.

We respectfully ask our Republican friends whether, if they had the power, they would restore the tariff on these things, so that the food supply of the nation should be scarcer and higher in time of drought and shortage at home?

Of the $34,000,000 increase more than $11,000,000 was in the four items of coffee, hides, manufactured rubber and raw silk. The amounts were: Coffee, $2,429,000; hides, $4,145,000; unmanufactured rubber, $1,758,000; raw silk, $2,745,000. All four of these commodities were free under both tariffs—the Payne-Aldrich and the Underwood. The change of tariff had no more to do with this increase than the aurora borealis had.

More than $13,000,000 of the increase in this awful month was in the importation of crude materials for manufacturing. Of these, raw cotton—free under both tariffs—increased nearly $1,600,000, and raw wool—made free by the Underwood tariff—$6,789,000. The tariff had, therefore, nothing to do with the first increase. As for the wool, the greatest wool-producing state in the Union is Montana. They grow about 40,000,000 pounds a year there. These blighting wool importa- [illegible]

WESTERN CANADA SEEDING FINISHED

Wheat and Other Grains Have Had an Excellent Start.

The seeding of spring wheat was pretty general this spring about 7th of April or about as early as in Illinois and Iowa. Oats and barley followed. Information is to hand that on first of May all seeding was practically finished. Farmers will now be busy at their breaking, and the land for summer fallow will be entered upon. Some who did not get their land prepared last fall, will be later than the others, but as the spring in Western Canada has been very open they will be only a few days later. At the time of writing rain would be welcome, but at seeding time, the ground contained a splendid lot of moisture and the lack of rain at the present time will not be serious. The number of farmers who have gone into the raising of cattle has been considerably increased, and the preparation for extensive cultivated grass pastures is in evidence everywhere. The cultivation of fodder corn is being largely entered upon in Manitoba, there being upwards of 25,000 acres in corn. In Saskatchewan there will be a large increase in the area planted, and in Alberta many of the more progressive farmers are taking hold of it. The yield varies according to the cultivation it receives, and runs from five to nine tons per acre. In some portions of Manitoba where it has been poor for some years, success has been achieved in ripening and it is expected that a variety will soon be developed that will provide seed for the entire West, that will at an early date give to Western Canada a fame for the growing of a marketable corn equal to that it has now for the growth of smaller cereals.

A trip through Western Canada reveals field after field of alfalfa, the growth of which in any portion of the country is now absolutely assured. When these facts are made known to the farmers of the corn and alfalfa growing states, where their value as wealth makers is so well known, there will be no hesitancy in taking advantage of the splendid gift of 160 acres of land made by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, where equal opportunities are offered. Besides these free grant lands, there are the lands of some of the railway companies and large land companies, that may be had at low prices and on reasonable terms. During the month of February a large number of inquiries were received, asking for farm lands.

An encouraging feature of the farm land situation in Canada is the large percentage of sales made to settlers in the country who desire to increase their holdings or to others who will take up farming in place of different [illegible]

SYNOPSIS.

In the New York home of James Pound, Wall Street broker, his daughter, Virginia Blair, his niece, Dorothy Pound, and Dorothy's friend, Jerry Lydig, are entertaining Mr. Lydig's brother, and family, Frederic, Mrs. Lydig and Lydia, who are visiting from Chicago. Frederic is an inventor, home-spun, Bohemian, and a confirmed bachelor. Jerry and Virginia are engaged, but Virginia is in love with Frederic, who is "dead" to all the world but Lydia. Lydia is a beauty, and Jerry's cousin. The family have been at the opera, Frederic having left his sister to escort Lydia home. Jerry, who is a lawyer, has been "tipped off" by his father that Frederic is "the real thing" in love. Frederic, who is a chemist, has invented a new process for dyeing, which he has patented, and Lydia wants the formula for her father, who is a dye-stuff manufacturer. Frederic, who is a "Bohemian" in the real sense of the word, and Lydia, who is a "society" girl, are fascinated by each other. Frederic

THE DAY FOR MEMORIES

Appalled by the slaughter in Europe, Americans of the present generation observed Memorial Day this year with a deeper realization of the meaning of war and the sacrifices made by the men and women of the early sixties Although some of the diabolically destructive means of modern warfare had not been invented than, the conflict called for the same courage and endurance, the same unselfish devotion to ideals, and left in its wake the same sorrows and suffering.

Fifty years of peace have followed that great struggle. The day set apart for hallowed memories has been in some danger of being perverted to a mere holiday making. But in the light of Europe's conflagration we were brought back to a sober perspective, to an understanding of what this day of memories should mean to us.

The dead and surviving members of that Grand Army fought, not for oppression but for liberty, not for territory and power but for the perpetuation of human freedom. They earned not the mere symbol of kingly approval but the enduring gratitude of their countrymen.

Can it be hoped that fifty years from now a united Europe may have a day of memories for the countless dead in this titanic struggle, a day for commemoration of the principles of humanity established for all time by this sacrifice?

POSTAL SAVINGS

The postal savings system has proved quite popular. At the end of March of this year there was on deposit with the postal savings system approximately $6,750,000 and former deposits to the amount of $6,441,000 had been converted into postal savings bonds. The number of depositors was about 515,000, each depositor having to his credit approximately $120.

Although the postal savings system has grown rapidly since its windows were first opened on Jan. 1, 1911, its growth would have been even more rapid and its usefulness would be broader, its administrators believe, if some of the restrictions thrown about it were modified. Now not more than $100 can be deposited to an account in one month and no depositor's account can exceed $500. Bonds can be bought to the amount of the deposits semi-annually, however, and this makes possible the deposit at the maximum of $1,000 a year. The postmaster general has recommended removal of all limitation on monthly deposits and the doubling of the limit on total deposits and it is believed that a law to this effect will be passed by the next congress.

DOWN WITH MINCE PIE

It has been noted by distinguished medical authorities that some people eat mince pie who never get sick, but who may do so. Some eat it who occasionally suffer as a result. Others eat it who always get sick.

The same authorities agree that men with disordered digestion are often dangerous, given to violence of temper, to unreasonable and unreasoning anger, likely at any moment to fly into a passion and to do harm to wife or child or neighbor.

The inference is unavoidable. Mince pie should be prohibited by law. It should be stamped out under the iron heel. It should find no place in civilized cookery.

The fact that most people never suffer at all from eating it or only occasionally cannot be adduced as an argument in favor of mince pie. That some few never eat it without bad effects condemns it utterly and it should have no friends.

What if millions find it wholesome, satisfying, grateful to the digestion, a thing of gastronomic delight, shall we give any concern to these while observing its disastrous effects on the occasional man to whom it is poison?

Never.

The plain duty of society is to look after the welfare of the occasional man and to do so, no matter at what cost to the millions who can eat mince [illegible]

JUNE

June this year came in on the first and will end on the thirtieth. It will have ten and twenty days with a night tacked onto each one of them. June's days, too, have a habit of absorbing most of the allotted twenty-four hours, and the habit is not at all approved by those who retire and rise by the sun.

On June 19th Jupiter, who has long been working mornings, will give up that position and take a job as evening star. His place in the wee small hours will be vacant for about a week, when Saturn will go on duty. Summer is almanacally said to begin on June 22nd, but most of us will be willing to believe that it has been hanging off altogether too long this year.

And then comes the dreamy maids, creamy and screamy maids, filling our souls with delight, and though with discretion, a slight premonition says that money is saved if we stay in o' nights. Summer time's money time—picnics and parties both call us until we attend, and once we are started quite soon we are parted from all winter's savings.

It is claimed that farmers own nearly 50 per cent of the 1,750,000 automobiles in use in the United States. Authorities are agreed that 60 per cent of the 1915 output of American factories will go to the farms or farming communities. When it is realized that according to the census of 1910 there were 6,361,502 farms in the United States the possibilities for future sales are almost limitless.

The Dog

I've never known a dog to wag
His tail in glee he didn't feel,
Nor quit his old-time friends, to tag
At some more influential heel.
The yellowest cur I ever knew
Was, to the boy who loved him, true.

I've never known a dog to show
Half-way devotion to his friend;
To seek a kinder man to know,
Or richer, but unto the end
The humblest dog I ever knew
Was, to the man who loved him, true.

I've never known a dog to fake
Affection for a present gain—
A false display of love to make,
Some little favor to attain.
I've never known a Prince or Pope
That seemed to be what he was not.

But I have known a dog to fight
With all his strength to shield a friend,
And, whether wrong or whether right
To stick with him until the end.
And I have known a dog to lick
The hand of him that men would kick.

And I have known a dog to bear
Starvation's pangs from day to day
With him who had been glad to share
His bread and meat along the way.
No dog, however mean or rude,
Is guilty of ingratitude.

The dog is listed with the dumb,
No voice he has to speak his creed.
His messages to humans come
By faithful conduct, and by creed
He shows, as seldom mortals do,
A high ideal of being true.

Fine Arrangement.

Failing and being a failure are two entirely different things, and there are people who wring more success out of their misfortune than others do out of all the advantages showered upon them. It is not failing but staying down that makes a failure.

Dr. Brady had Mrs. Lewis Jacks treated with the new pneumonia serum, and her fever began to go down soon after. By morning her heart was much stronger. At present, she will, with no back sets, make good recovery. If any thing can break up pneumonia, especially in a person of her age, it is certainly grand news for the public. Not that Mrs. Jacks is very old, but she has gotten to the age that pneumonia is liable to prove fatal and it was expected to and no doubt would but for that wonderful discovery of some scientist. Do not know to whom the credit belongs.

We hear the housekeeper remark that this spell of cool weather was just what they needed to finish house cleaning.

Jackson street road at the Disciple church is expected to be closed before the week ends. The paving job is coming up the line fast.

This morning the ditcher that got its bumps, or some other, has begun work again.

A good many gardens have suffered severely by frost, while others remain untouched. One neighbor had just gotten two hundred tomato plants out. They were black the next morning. Many vineyards round about seem to be badly injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Evera Parson of Richfield, are in Mentor for the summer. Prof. Persons will return to Western Reserve for a post graduate course this summer.

Commencement every day and night this week—nearly. The Western Reserve cannot be beaten for its educational facilities.

A good many attended the Queen Esther May Festival at Painesville Friday evening, Misses Mabel and Laura Otis, Claribel and Irene Pierson and Florence Cook being in the chorus. Every one was more than pleased with the program. Just why Prof. Snyder needed any one to take a part he could have filled so well himself, was a mistery.

Mrs. Hattie Lamonyan Traxler was married to a Painesville gentleman Friday. Name not learned.

Mrs. Eliza Bedlant of East Painesville and Mrs. Philo Bedlant of Perry visited Mentor relatives Tuesday.

Mrs. Bert Noble is in very poor health this spring.

Richard Burridge had the misfortune to have all their chickens stolen, setting hens and all, the other night.

Twenty five Turks employed by the paving contractor and camping in Burridge woods left town recently. As one man remarked as they went through the burg, "Bet they are full of set hens."

Fred Greer has rented his brick house to Dr. Warner Superintendent of Lakeside hospital, Gleveland, for a year. The family do not take possession until July. At present Mr. Greer is having the place thoroughly overhauled, a bath room, new pantry, electric lights and other improvements and papered throughout.

The Knitting Mills soon move all employment to Erie, Pa., except the knitters and washer, also the main office still remains here. Only about fifty employees are left here. It threw a good many out of employment that have been there ever since they started. They wish all to go, but a good many it would be impossible for. GERMANY REPLIES TO WILSON'S NOTE

BLAMES GREAT BRITAIN FOR LIVES LOST ON OCEAN LINER LUSITANIA

Says It Is Not Intention to Submit Neutral Ships to War Zone. Which Are Guilty of No Hostile Acts, to Attacks by Submarine or Aeroplane.

Berlin—On many withdrawals its time to decline to discuss the demands advanced by the United States government in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania until the result of an order from the United States to the note which Herr Von Jagow, the foreign minister, has delivered to Ambassador Gerard, in reply to the American note of May 13 the German government sent on May 15.

In its reply the German government declares that it is not the intention to submit neutral ships to the war zone. While not guilty of no hostile acts, in attacks by submarine or aeroplane. The German government, however, intends to continue to attack with the attacks on the America steamers Cushing and Gulflight, and that in all cases where neutral vessels, through no fault of their own, are been damaged, the company will pay damages.

The German government in the case of the Lusitania, which German aeroplanes was armed and carried large stores of war munitions it was "acting in good faid satisfactorn in sinking with all the means of war at its disposition to protect the lives of its soldiers by preventing munitions intended for the enemy."

The German government recalls the proposals submitted by the United States government to Berlin and London, designed to end the submarine warfare and the shooting out of food contraband on the high seas. It regrets, failed of their purpose because of the refusal of the British government to join them.

The following is the text of the note:

"We understand from the note of Ambassador Gerard, which he delivered yesterday, the communication of May 15, regarding the injury to American interests through German submarine warfare.

"The German government has collected the material which it has at its disposal in a thorough investigation. It envisages in some measure to incorporate in a fresh and friendly way in discussing a possible misunderstanding which may have arisen in the relations between the two governments through the recent incidents for the American government.

"Regarding, firstly, the case of the American steamers Cushing and Gulflight. The American government has already been informed that the German government has no intention of submitting neutral ships to the war zone which are guilty of no hostile acts, to attacks by a submarine or aeroplane or airforces. On the contrary, the German forces have repeatedly been instructed more specifically to avoid attacks on such ships.

"If neutral ships in recent months have suffered through the German submarine warfare, owing to mistakes in identification, it is a question of quite isolated and exceptional cases, which can be attributed to the British attempts to cover their ships with the flag of the neutrals or to the employment of neutral ships for the purposes of the enemy.

Has Given Instructions.

"The German government, in all cases in which it has been shown that its investigations thus a neutral ship, has given, or will give, instructions to its submarine sections and, if justified by conditions, has offered indemnification.

"The cases of the Cushing and the Gulflight will be treated on the same principles. An investigation of both cases has been ordered, the results of which will immediately be communicated to the embassy. The investigation cannot, however, be carried out by international call on the international commission of inquiry as provided for in article 10 of the Hague agreement of Oct. 18, 1907.

"When sinking the British steamer Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of allowing the passengers and crew a full opportunity to leave the steamer, but when the commander did not allow the crew to leave it, but fired and commenced firing at pretty distance, the German commander other the crew and passengers to remain on board, perhaps to leave the ship sooner and more easily. EXTRA MONEY
HOW TO CASH FORGOTTON THINGS

Do you realize that there's more real money "laying around the house" than you'd had any idea of?

Well, there is.

How long is it since you took an "inventory of odds and ends?"

Well, why not?

Why not check up the "old things" down in the basement? That old rocker and davenport, the picture you had removed when the guest room was done over, etc., the odd dishes of the old set, the old range, the old stove, the carpet sweeper, make up a list of all of them—and then put a Classified Ad in the Want Columns of THE HERALD and get the money. Why not?

Thousands of people need those very things—glad to buy them and pay for them—and fix them up.

Why not "cash the odds and ends?" This is what Want Ads are really for, if people only knew it; and you might just as well "get what they are worth" as to "throw them out." Why not?

GREAT WHEAT HARVEST

Predicted in Ohio, With Prices Soaring—Other Crops Above Normal

Ohio is blessed with abundant crops and has promise of an abundant yield of all the staples, according to the estimate given out today by the agricultural commission.

This estimate is made up from reports received from every township in the state.

The commission gave out with its estimates the following statement:

The approaching wheat harvest gives promise of a most abundant yield. Correspondents estimate present prospect at 99 per cent. This average is based upon 18 bushels per acre, being represented by 100 per cent. On the corresponding rate one year ago prospect was estimated at 103 per cent, and the harvest resulted in an estimated production of approximately 29,000,000 bushels. The estimated area to be harvested this year exceeds the acreage of 1914 by almost 173,000 acres. The total production should equal, if not exceed, that of last year. In the Northwest and Northeast sections of the state the prospect will average 107 percent. These sections contain some of the best wheat producing counties of the state. In the Southwest and the Southeast sections of the state the prospect averages 95 per cent. As stated, in previous reports, issued by this Department, Ohio cannot produce normal wheat yields until the acreage seeded is materially increased. The present average price, per bushel of wheat, is estimated at $1.43. One year ago the average price was 93 cents per bushel.

The recent rainfalls have proven very beneficial to oats. Its growing condition is good and the prospect for the harvest is estimated at 92 per cent compared with normal yield. One year ago the prospect was estimated at 83 per cent. The present acreage exceeds that of last year. The market price of oats is estimated at 56 cents per bushel. One year ago oats sold at 44 cents per bushel.

The clover has been slightly damaged by grub worm.

Hogs, generally, are in healthy condition.

At this time the danger period for fruit of all kinds has passed. Peaches promise one of the largest crops in years, the Northeastern part of the state alone having suffered any serious injury. The cherry crop will approach very closely the large crop of 1914. In the Southern half of the state fire blight is general and has seriously affected the apple crop. In many orchards the blossoms were attacked and total loss has resulted. This trouble is not as serious in the northern portion of the state. A fair crop is assured.

Big Truck in Creek

On Saturday a big truck owned by the Reliable Wet Wash Co. of Cleveland was being driven along West Jackson street when in some manner the driver lost control of the machine and it struck the abutment of the bridge just west of the Mentor Nurseries and dropped into the creek below, a distance of about ten feet. The driver had a very narrow escape from being killed as the front of the truck lay right over the water.

On Sunday the Star Garage was busy getting the big machine out of the creek, a work of considerable magnitude on account of the difficult position the machine was in and it was necessary to drop the front wheels into the water before anything could be done.

The truck is in bad shape, the radiator, front axle, springs and steering gear being badly bent, motor shook from its bed and other damages so that the front of the machine will have to be practically rebuilt.

It is understood that the driver was taking a joy ride without the knowledge or consent of the owners of the machine.

No, Not to Drink!

Speaking of foolish questions, Strickland Gillilan, who is to give his humorous talk here July 30, tells of an incident which occurred recently in a small eastern town.

It was just before time to begin lecturing, when Gillilan asked an usher to place a glass of water on a table on the platform.

"What for—to drink?" he was asked.

"No, I make a high dive in the third act," replied Gillilan.

PIONEER SHIP BUILDER

Alanson Bailey Was One of First to Construct Boats at Madison Dock

Alanson C. Bailey, aged 94 years, passed away Sunday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. V. Winans in Madison. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Many years ago the firm of Bailey Brothers were well known ship builders and turned out a number of small boats at their yards near the old Madison Dock. Later the firm came to Painesville and their ship yards were located near the present slip at Fairport.

Here they built the "City of Painesville," the "S. S. Osborne," and "Anna Vaught." These boats were three masters and among the largest and finest on the lakes in the early days, although they would look small beside the big freighters that now visit Fairport. Many are still living who attended the launching at the Bailey yards. The firm later moved to Toledo and also had government contracts at Buffalo.

The old schooners have long since found their way to the "port of forgotten ships;" of the old Madison Dock not one pile remains to mark its location, and the death of Alanson Bailey removes the last of the men who were connected with the firm of pioneer builders.

He was an old resident of this city and came to Painesville to make his home in September, 1879. A host of friends will mourn his loss.

The Best Place to Fish

In answer to an inquiry as to the best fishing and camping spot along Grand River, Morris Ackerman makes the following reply in the Leader:

"The fishing is fair along the Grand river both north and south of Painesville. For camping I would recommend getting off the C. P. & E. car at Lane, walking south two and one-half miles to the river and pitch your tent near the spring at Indian Point. The water is fine, the scenery wonderful and the fishing as good as can be found near home."

Cemetery Improved

People driving past the Mentor Avenue cemetery cannot help but notice the improvements which have been made by the lot owners, assisted by the trustees. A new fence surrounds the last resting place of many Lake county pioneers, the grass has been neatly cut and the shrubbery trimmed up.

Much credit for the improvement is said to be due Mrs. Carroll and [illegible]

CONTRACTS IN JEOPARDY

Turner Says the Winans Bill Threatens School Pacts

Attorney General Turner gave an opinion to Frank W. Miller, superintendent of instruction, today, interpreting the Winans amendment to the school code to mean that contracts entered into between district supervisors and local school authorities after May 27, when the bill was filed with the secretary of state, may be declared invalid, though the measure actually does not go into effect for ninety days.

Contracts made before that date are not impaired, however. County boards of education may act now to make new districts in conformity with the Winans bill's reduction of number of districts by increasing the minimum number of teachers under a supervisor from twenty to thirty, and need not await the time when the law actually goes into full effect, the attorney general held.

Contracts made before May 27 with district superintendents may be invalidated if county boards make a redistricting in accordance with the petition of three-fourths of the presidents of local school boards, however.

Council Orders Sidewalks

One of the principal matters considered at Monday night's council meeting was the construction of sidewalks in the north end of the city, and resolutions were passed providing for cement walks in many places. Parts of Owego and Sanford streets will be improved with gravel walks.

The plumbing code ordinance which had been in the hands of committee for some time was passed in its amended form. The state code will govern, and all plumbers must pass an examination and secure permits before doing any work, new or old. The examining board is to serve without pay.

The annual budget was approved and sent to County Auditor Davis, and certificates of indebtedness were ordered issued, a renewal of one for $3,090 borrowed to pay for the gravel pit and $500 for the safety department.

The Benjamin property located on the southeast corner of High and Liberty streets has been purchased by the hospital board of trustees as a site for a new beating plant and laundry for the hospital.

THE TATTLER SAYS:

There are a lot of high-toned Christians who hope that Heaven will be a big place because it would be very embarrassing to have to come in contact with a lot of Common People up there.

Most men and most things seem easy until you try to do them.

Madison Alumni Meets

The Alumni Association of North Madison High school held its annual meeting and banquet Saturday evening at Hotel Griswold, about forty of the "old grads" being in attendance.

Following the banquet, Supt. J. R. Adams acted as toastmaster and introduced the following speakers: Ernest Hensel, Miss Loye Souder, E. J. Davet, Miss Mildred Chaffee. A number of readings and impersonations were given by R. H. Gee. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Nellie Corlett Moodey, Painesville; Vice President, Mrs. Frank Davet, Madison; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Frances Pattit, Madison.

Winans After More Honors

The law passed by the state assembly which redistricts the state for congressional purposes has brought out early a number of aspirants for seats in the next national House of Representatives.

In an article in today's Cleveland Leader, John T. Burke says that among the aspirants for a seat in the lower house of the national congress, will be Dr. J. V. Winans, of Madison, a member of the present Ohio Senate and with three terms' experience in the state legislature, the man who was instrumental in securing in the upper house the passage of the bill making of New Lyme institute a state agricultural school.

Opens Law Office

Ralph M. Ostrander has opened a law office at 311 Main street, in the Western Union block, occupying rooms 1, 2 and 3.

Attorney Ostrander is no stranger to the people of this vicinity. He was born in LeRoy, obtained his education in the schools of Lake county and has been practicing law since 1911 when he graduated from the University of Michigan. Republican in politics, he has taken an active part in the affairs of his party and his name has already been mentioned in connection with the office of city solicitor.

Memories of an Editor

An exchange observes. "Soon the boys will be holding up two fingers." We wonder if that fashion remains in these days. It was an expressive sign. It meant, 'Let's go swimming.' It was given on the sly, for it was not always allowable to go swimming in those fair and innocent days. Besides there was a sort of modesty in the sign, which could thus be made in the presence of the girls.

There was always a thrill in the sight of two fingers, which were really suggestive of two happy legs curveting in the clear waters of the old swimming hole. The sign represented a mutual joy, which easily awakened an affirmative answer. There was a romance in the sign not awakened by a verbal invitation, and it carried into the event a divine fancy that was almost proof against parental discovery or reproof. We are happily descending the sunset slopes, but if some old chum would flash the two fingers in our face, we would soon be down at the old creek, sloshing about in its limpid waters.

Hires Six New Teachers

The list of the teaching staff of the Willoughby schools for the coming year, just completed, includes six new teachers. Miss Florence Thomas, who will teach mathematics and history, is a graduate of Wooster university, with B. S. C. degree and lives in Painesville. Jordan T. Cavan, who will have charge of English and science, is a graduate of Western Reserve university, with the degree of A. B. His home is in Cleveland. Miss Laura Owen, who will teach the fifth grade, has been teaching in Perry, and makes her home in Painesville. Miss Marion Tear, who will teach the third grade, is from Mentor Plains. Miss Nellie Kinney, who formerly taught in Wickliffe, will teach parts of the first and second grades.

Teachers who retain their places are: E. M. Otis, superintendent and science; Mrs. Ethel G. Viall, principal of the high school and language; Miss Marie Brennan, commercial; Hazel M. Yarnell seventh grade; Florence Gallagher, sixth grade; Sadie Boose, fourth grade; Jessie Henish, second grade; Harriet Dean, first grade, and James A. McMahon, music.—Delta.

Fair Warning

And now, they say, they are going to prohibit pink lemonade. The bacteriologists, or whoever it is that are always discovering that something particularly dear to our hearts is deadly and dangerous, the bacteriologists say that it has more germs than Heintz has pickles. So it must go. W-e-l-l, all right. But by the great Central Pote of the universe; we want to warn you scientific ginks, right here and now; don't go snooping around and discovering that it is unsanitary to feed peanuts to the elephant! For if you do, and you try to have any laws passed prohibiting that pinnacle of pastime, the great American public will rise up on its hind legs and hurl the whole horde of you, with hideous ruin and combustion, down to bottomless perdition!

MENTOR TWP. SCHOOLS

Held Nineteenth Annual Commencement Exercises Friday Afternoon

Friday afternoon, June 4th at 1:30 o'clock was the occasion of the Nineteenth Annual Commencement of the Mentor Township Schools at the Village Hall in Mentor.

The Hall was filled to its capacity with the parents and friends of the pupils, every one of whom performed their parts splendidly, a credit to themselves, Supt. Wm. Gillespie and Prof. Cheney. Prof. Cheney, musical director of all the schools, is certainly a wonder-worker. Children who formerly could not be made to sing a note stood up on the stage "before all the folks" singing like birds ever so many verses, just took us old folks away up out of "Wars and rumors of wars" to that peaceful place where those children's voices were surely doing their mightiest to produce the music that "hath charms to sooth the savage beasts." Even little Mildred Draper only six years old of Dist. No. 7 stood bravely up at the end of a row of "big scholars" twisting her handkerchief into a tight curl to emphasize her singing. Especially enthusiastic in this vocation were Raymond Lapham and Georgie and Karl Winfield. One most comical performance was "Song Playlet" by four of Miss Doncaster's pupils, the boy and girl had a falling out, she'd caught him "whispering to Bessie Brown." He offered her a red apple so she'd "forget it" Scorn was his answer. "Give it to Bessie Brown" she said. Then he offered a dime "To buy two dishes of ice cream." "Come I don't mean it though" she said, and the reconciliation was instantaneous. She "Loved him same as yesterday."

Clarence Becker's recitation was fine and seemed to bear this moral: "Don't let the grass grow under your feet before you act upon a good inspiration." He told of how he longed for a sister, so his folks adopted one from an orphanage. Mary. And with her he grew up, walking in the shady lane for thirteen years, when he thought he might propose to her some day. While he was rubbing his eyes trying to make up his mind how to say it, farmer Brown said the very thing he was about to say and married Mary before that same week was past. Then for thirteen more years spent in "Hating Brown worse than pizen, and wished I could break his neck" he pined away till his hair got grey. Then Brown died, and he married Mary at last, spending his fortune on her two children. Thus twenty-six of his young years were "throwed away," when it might just as well been only a week.

And there was "Auntie Doleful's visit" to "Cheer up her sick friend." She took her sewing along, staid about two hours by the bedside of a patient with the nervous prostration. "How pale you look Cornelia, I don't believe you are as well as when I came in, but if the worst should come as it likely will, send for me at once, if I can't do anything else I can at least cheer you up a little." This is a warning to sick folks to get well in spite of their friends. "I don't think you have a good doctor, Cornelia, do send him away and try some one else."

Miss Doris Parker, accompanied by Martha Gault on the piano, sang a sweet little song, about "Two little blue little shoes, two little feet where are they, two little shoes laid away," and Doris is a fine singer.

Also Maybelle Brooks and Martha Gault did their solos just fine.

Arlington Parker Ferry delivered his recitation in a very manly way. Marion Jayne's solo "I am afraid you'll forget me Marguerite" was very sweet, in her fine soprano voice.

Ralph Wheeler's recitation "Life's Mirror" was well spoken, and the idea conveyed was "What you holler into the woods, the woods will holler back the echo," or "What you sow, you reap." If we sow radishes, we'll get um if it don't freeze. If we sow pricker-bushes, we'll get um any way.

Leila French's recitation "Nobility" was done by her with good expression, and so plain all could hear.

The six graduates were Marion Jayne, Martha Gault, Ralph Wheeler, Arlington Parker Ferry, Clarence E. Becker and Leila French, and formed a fine picture in the front row with their bouquets pinned on, and their diplomas in hand, proud as could be.

Supt. Wm. Gillespie made a fitting speech to the graduates before closing, in which he told them their diplomas were well earned, and yet that all the education gleaned from books would be worth less unless they keep their lives pure and clean, choose good associates, and live honestly and uprightly, always keeping their minds pure and high, that their feet may walk the straight and narrow way.

The parents thank the teachers, the Superintendent, and Prof. Cheney for their faithful and patient work of the past year for the children.

Referendum Election On Light Bonds To Be Held On Tuesday, June 22

The special election on the question of issuing bonds in the sum of $35,000 for the purpose of remodeling, improving and making additions to the electric light plant, will be held Tuesday, June 22nd. Following are the arguments for and against the approval of the ordinance:

ARGUMENT FOR THE APPROVAL OF THE ORDINANCE

It is necessary to increase capacity of the electric power plant to take care of its increasing business. During the past year the number of consumers increased almost fifty per cent. There are now about 1000 consumers. Both engines are now needed to pull the peak load. It even requires the large engine to pull the day load on dark days. More power must be added before November when dark season begins. Both engines and generators are in excellent condition. Every light plant must have power in reserve sufficient to pull the load in case of emergency. Present engines will not be discarded but will constitute that reserve power. New 500 K. W. generator and turbine (or engine) are needed. Proposed bond issue will provide such generator and engine, condensers, one additional boiler, spray pond, necessary piping, addition to building, etc., and also distributing lines on all streets not now served.

Last year the plant earned about $8000.00 above cost of operation and maintenance. Evidently the earnings will pay bonds and interest, and NO TAX WILL BE NECESSARY TO PAY SAME.

The C. P. & E. Railroad Company asks the city to abandon the municipal plant and to buy the current from them. They offer to furnish it for 1.86 ct. per K. W. It cost the city last year only 1.71 ct. per K. W. to produce it in the city plant. Interest upon present electric light debt of $85,000 and depreciation upon present power plant which cost about $40,000.00, will be just the same whether city buys the power or produces it. New generator and engine of condensing type will produce current cheaper than present equipment, so that the cost of current, including interest on new debt and depreciation on new equipment, will be less than cost of buying from C. P. & E.

If city continues to own and operate its own plant, it is entirely independent. No controversy over bills or payments; service entirely within city control.

Other towns buying current from power companies are not satisfied notably Willoughby and Bellevue.

"C. P. & E." charges Willoughby Village for current, almost twice the price which it now offers to Painesville. What will the "C. P. & E." charge Painesville in the future, when the municipal plant is not on hand to compete for the business?

The municipal electric light plant is a good paying investment for the people of Painesville. Its service is good and the rates are low. Its business is growing rapidly. This growth will lessen the cost of current in the future, and will permit a lowering of rates. More power will also permit street lights upon some streets now not sufficiently lighted. To buy the current from the C. P. & E. is the first step towards turning the whole light and power business over to a private corporation.

If you believe the city should continue to own and operate its own lighting plant, vote for the approval of the ordinance.

Give to our people and also to the strangers who come here plenty of light, so they CAN "See Painesville First."

ARGUMENT AGAINST THE APPROVAL OF THE ORDINANCE STATEMENT OF COMMITTEE REPRESENTING PETITIONERS FOR REFERENDUM

We present no argument in favor of the rejection of the ordinance, for the reason that after the passage of the ordinance by Council, opponents of the measure circulated petitions asking to have the ordinance submitted to a vote of the people at the general election next November. To tie up the matter until next November would prevent the city from adding the necessary power machinery in time to take care of the increased business next winter, as it will take three or four months to purchase and install the necessary engine and generator. The proposition to vote on the ordinance next November looked like a deliberate attempt to force the city to make a contract with the "C. P. & E. R. R." In order to avoid this delay and to enable the people of Painesville to settle this question now, the petitions asking for a vote at a special election were circulated and filed. We submit this statement in order that every voter may understand that those who circulated the petitions for the special election are not opposed to the ordinance, but on the contrary favor it.

"Vote for the approval of the ordinance."

London, England.—For the first time on record, a Zeppelin in the air has been destroyed by an aviator in an aeroplane. Reginald A. J. Warneford, a young Canadian sub-lieutenant in the royal navy, who mastered aeroplaning only this summer, has performed the feat and is now somewhere within the British lines while the Zeppelin lies in ruins sprawled on the roof and ground of an orphanage near Ghent.

Falling there a blazing mess after being struck by the young aviator's bombs, its crew of 28 men was killed, as also were several occupants of the orphanage buildings.

The theory is advanced that this Zeppelin was the craft which raided the east coast of England Sunday night, for the fact that it was in the air over B[illegible]um, between Ghent and Brussels at 3 in the morning leads to the belief that it was returning from an expedition, and not starting.

GOVERNOR SETS UP NEW VETO RECORD

Willis Disapproves of Million Dollars of the Appropriation Items.

SWEEPING SLASHES BRING FORTH WAIL

Heads of State Institutions Reduced in Their Allowances for Improvements and Betterments to Total of Over Half Million.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

ESTABLISHMENT of a brand new veto record is conceded to have been effected in the Willis disapproval of a cool million dollars of the appropriation items. Judson Harmon during his regime vetoed several items out of an appropriation bill and created a precedent for his time, but his aggregate monetary disapprovals fell far short even of the $100,000 mark. Numerous and plaintive wails are being heard here in the wake of the sweeping slashes made by Gov. Willis to effect his million dollar cut. Heads of state institutions are clamoring dissent. They are reduced in their allowances for improvements and betterments to the aggregate total of more than half a million dollars. The assembly had granted them in all about one and a half million dollars mainly to increase their housing facilities and thus to be able to accommodate more patients. Some of their executive officers are complaining that the governor's cuts were so sweeping that crowded conditions, now prevalent, will continue [illegible]

Move to Invoke Referendum.

Coincident with the signing of the McDermott liquor license decentralizing bill, which provides for the repeal of the present license system, by Gov. Willis, a movement was started in Cincinnati to invoke a referendum on the measure. Liquor interests are behind this. They are objecting to the proposed new law on the ground that, in many instances, it puts two dry counties and one wet county into a district, thus cutting down the number of saloons that can operate in the district. Cleveland saloonkeepers are not particularly interested in the movement for a referendum, according to C. E. Moore of the Cuyahoga County Home Rule association. Under the new law license commissioners will be appointed by the county recorder, county auditor and president of the board of county commissioners. If enough signatures for a referendum are obtained the present system will continue in operation until at least the next November election.

Miller's Term Expires Soon.

The term of John I. Miller as superintendent of public works will expire with the close of this week, but there is nothing to indicate that Gov. Willis will be in any haste in appointing his successor. Miller has made good, and because of this the chief executive is not eager to displace him immediately. He gets an annual salary of $4,000. He is a Democrat and was appointed under the Harmon administration. There are a number of applicants for his place. Harry W. Meacham of Toledo, a former engineer in the department, is being urged for the place.

Mayor Gives Instructions to All Departments to Retrench—Street Repairs May Be Stopped.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cincinnati, O.—With a deficit approximating $500,000 staring the city officials in the face, Mayor Spiegel announced that all of the departments will have to make further retrenchments, and that many employes of the city will have to be laid off. A foreboding of what is to come was evidenced when Building Commissioner Rendigs notified Robert Sieckmann, rope and scaffold inspector, of his lay off because of a "lack of funds." At the same time Rendigs stated that others in his department will have to go to meet a deficit there of nearly $8,000. The mayor's statement was made in connection with his semi-annual appropriation ordinance, which he submitted to council for action by that body.

According to the ordinance the anticipated revenues for the next six months from all sources will aggregate $3,392,165.40, and the estimated expenditures, $3,231,097.60. This on its face shows there will be an ap[illegible]

In the New York home of James Brood his son, Frederic, receives a wireless from him. Frederic tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancee, that the message announces his father's marriage and orders Mrs. Desmond, the housekeeper and Lydia's mother, to prepare the house for an immediate home-coming. Brood and his bride arrive. She wins Frederic's liking at first meeting. Brood shows dislike and veiled hostility to his son. Lydia and Mrs. Brood meet in the jade room where Lydia works as Brood's secretary. Mrs. Brood is startled by the appearance of Ranjab, Brood's Hindu servant. She makes changes in the household and gains her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia away. She fascinates Frederic. She begins to fear Ranjab in his uncanny appearances and disappearances, and Frederic, remembering his father's East Indian stories and firm belief in magic, fears unknown evil. Ranjab performs feats of magic for Dawes and Riggs. Frederic's father, jealous, unjustly orders his son from the dinner table as drunk. Brood tells the story of Ranjab's life to his guests. "He killed a woman" who was unfaithful to him. Yvonne plays with Frederic's infatuation for her. Her husband warns her that the thing must not go on. She tells him that he still loves his dead wife whom he drove from his home through her. Yvonne. Yvonne plays with Brood, Frederic and Lydia as with figures on a chess board. Brood, madly jealous, tells Lydia that Frederic is not his son, and that he has brought him up to kill his happiness at the proper time with this knowledge. Frederic takes Lydia home through a heavy storm and spends the night at her mother's house.

"She was jealous. She admitted it, dear. If I don't mind, why should you incur—"

"Do you really believe she—she loves the governor enough to be as jealous at all that?" he exclaimed, a curious gleam in his eyes—an expression she did not like.

"Of course I think so," she cried emphatically. "What a question! Have you any reason to suspect that she does not love your father?"

"No—certainly not," he said in some confusion. Then, after a moment: "Are you quite sure this headache of yours is real, Lyddy? Isn't it an excuse to stay away from—from Yvonne after what happened last night? Be honest, dear."

She was silent for a long time, weighing her answer. Was it best to be honest with him?

"I confess that it has something to do with it," she admitted. Lydia could not be anything but truthful.

"I thought so. It's—it's a rotten shame, Lyddy. That's why I want to talk to her. I want to reason with her. It's all so perfectly silly, this misunderstanding. You've just got to go on as you were before, Lyddy—just as if it hadn't happened. It—"

"I shall complete the work for your father, Freddy," she said quietly. "Two or three days more will see the end. After that, neither my services nor my presence will be required over there."

"You don't mean to say—" he began, unbelievingly.

"I can think of them just as well here as anywhere else. No, I shan't annoy Mrs. Brood, Freddy." It was on the tip of her tongue to say more, but she thought better of it.

"They're going abroad soon," he ventured. "At least, that's father's plan. Yvonne isn't so keen about it. She calls this being abroad, you know. Besides," he hurried on in his eagerness to excuse Yvonne, "she's tremendously fond of you. No end of times she's said you were the finest—" Her smile—an odd one, such as he had never seen on her lips before—checked his eager speech. He bridled. "Of course, if you don't choose to believe me, there's nothing more to be said. She meant it, however."

"I am sure she said it, Freddy," she hastened to declare. "Will she be pleased with our—our marriage?" It required a great deal of courage on her part to utter these words, but she was determined to bring the true situation home to him.

He did not even hesitate, and there was conviction in his voice as he replied. "It doesn't matter whether she's pleased or displeased. We're pleasing ourselves, are we not? There's no one else to consider, dear."

Her eyes were full upon his, and there was wonder in them. "Thank you—thank you, Freddy," she cried. "I—I knew you'd—" The sentence remained unfinished.

"Has there ever been a doubt in your mind?" he asked, uneasily, after a moment. He knew there had been misgivings and he was ready, in his self-abasement, to resent them if given the slightest opening. Guilt made him arrogant.

"No," she answered simply.

The answer was not what he expected. He flushed painfully.

"I—I thought perhaps you'd—you'd got a notion in your head that—" He, too, stopped for want of the right words to express himself without committing the egregious error of letting her see that it had been in his thoughts to accuse her of jealousy.

She waited for a moment. "That I might have got the notion in my head you did not love me any longer? Is that what you started to say?"

"Yes," he confessed, averting his eyes.

"I've been unhappy at times, Freddy, but that is all," she said, steadily. "You see, I know how honest you really are. I know it far better than you know it yourself."

He stared. "I wonder just how honest I am," he muttered. "I wonder what would happen if— But nothing can happen. Nothing ever will happen. Thank you, old girl, for saying what you said just now. It's—it's bully of you."

He got up and began pacing the floor. She leaned back in her chair, deliberately giving him time to straighten out his thoughts for himself. Wiser than she knew herself to be, she held back the warm, loving words of encouragement, of gratitude, of belief.

But she was not prepared for the impetuous appeal that followed. He threw himself down beside her and grasped her hands in his. His face seemed suddenly old and haggard, his eyes burned like coals of fire. Then, for the first time, she had an inkling of the great struggle that had been going on inside of him for weeks and weeks.

"Listen, Lyddy," he began, nervously, "will you marry me tomorrow? Are you willing to take the chance that I'll be able to support you, to earn enough—"

"Why, Freddy!" she cried, half starting up from the couch. She was dumfounded.

"Will you? Will you? I mean it," he went on, almost arrogantly.

He was very much in earnest, but alas the fire the passion of the importunate lover was missing. She shrank back into the corner of the couch, staring at him with puzzled eyes. Comprehension was slow in arriving. As he hurried on with his plea she began to see clearly; her sound, level brain grasped the significance of this sudden decision on his part.

"There's no use waiting, dear. I'll never be more capable of earning a living than I am right now. I can go into the office with Brooks any day and I—I think I can make good. God knows I can try hard enough. Brooks says he's got a place there for me in the bond department. It won't be much at first, but I can work into a pretty good—what's the matter? Don't you think I can do it? Have you no faith in me? Are you afraid to take a chance?"

She had smiled sadly—it seemed to him reprovingly. His cheek flushed.

"What has put all this into your head, Freddy, dear?" she asked shrewdly.

His eyes wavered. "I can't go on living as I have been for the past few months. I've just got to end it, Lyddy. You don't understand—you can't—and there isn't any use in trying to explain the—"

"Will You Marry Me Tomorrow?"

"I think I do understand, dear," she said, quietly, laying her hand on his. "I understand so completely that there isn't any use in your trying to explain. But don't you think you are a bit cowardly?"

"Cowardly?" he gasped, and then the blood rushed to his face.

"Is it quite fair to me—or to yourself?" He was silent. She waited for a moment and then went on resolutely. "I know just what it is that you are afraid of, Freddy. I shall marry you, of course. I love you more than anything else in all the world. But are you quite fair in asking me to marry you while you are still afraid, dear?"

"Before God, I love no one else but you," he cried, earnestly. "I know what it is you are thinking and I—I don't blame you. But I want you now—good God, you don't know how much I need you now. I want to begin a new life with you. I want to feel that you are with me—just you—strong and brave and enduring. I am adrift. I need you."

"If you insist, I will marry you tomorrow, but you cannot—you will not ask it of me, will you?"

"But you know I love you," he cried. "There isn't any doubt in your mind, Lyddy. There is no one else, I tell you."

"I think I am just beginning to understand men," she remarked enigmatically.

He looked up sharply. "And to wonder why they call women the weaker sex, eh?"

"Yes," she said so seriously that the wry smile died on his lips. "I don't believe there are many women who would ask a man to be sorry for them. That's really what all this amounts to, isn't it, Freddy?"

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, wonderingly.

"You are a strong, self-willed, chivalrous man, and yet you think nothing of asking a woman to protect you against yourself. You are afraid to stand alone. Wait. Five minutes—yes, one minute before you asked it of me, Freddy dear, you were floundering in the darkness, uncertain which way to turn. You were afraid of the things you could not see. You looked for some place in which to hide. The flash of light revealed a haven of refuge. So you asked me to—to marry you tomorrow." All through this indictment she had held his hand clasped tightly in both of hers. He was looking at her with a frank acknowledgement growing in his eyes.

"Are you ashamed of me, Lyddy?" he asked. It was confession.

"No," she said, meeting his gaze steadily. "I am a little disappointed, that's all. It is you who are ashamed."

"I am," said he, simply. "It wasn't fair."

"Love will endure. I am content to wait," she said, with a wistful smile.

"You will be my wife no matter what happens? You won't let this make any difference?"

"You are not angry with me?"

"Angry? Why should I be angry with you, Lyddy? For shaking some sense into me? For seeing through me with that wonderful, far-sighted brain of yours? Why, I could go down on my knees to you. I could—"

He clasped her in his arms and held her close. "You dear, dear Lyddy!"

Neither spoke for many minutes. It was she who broke the silence.

"You must promise one thing, Frederic. For my sake, avoid a quarrel with your father. I could not bear that. You will promise, dear? You must."

His jaw was set. "I don't intend to quarrel with him, but if I am to remain in his house there has got to be—"

"Promise me you will wait. He is going away in a couple of weeks. When he returns—later on—next fall—"

"Oh, if it really distresses you, Lyddy, I'll—"

"It does distress me. I want your promise."

"I'll do my part," he said resignedly. "And next fall will see us married, so—"

The telephone bell in the hall was ringing. Frederic released Lydia's hand and sat up rather stiffly, as one who suddenly suspects that he is being spied upon. The significance of the movement did not escape Lydia. She laughed mirthlessly.

"I will see who it is," she said, and arose. Two red spots appeared in his cheeks. Then it was that she realized he had been waiting all along for the bell to ring; he had been expecting a summons.

"If it's for me, please say—er—say I'll—" he began, somewhat disjointedly, but she interrupted him.

"Will you stay here for luncheon, Frederic? And this afternoon we will go to— Oh, is there a concert or a recital—"

"Yes, I'll stay if you'll let me," he said, wistfully. "We'll find something to do."

She went to the telephone. He heard the polite greetings, the polite assurances that she had not taken cold, two or three laughing rejoinders to what must have been amusing comments on the storm and its affect on timid creatures, and then:

"Yes, Mrs. Brood, I will call him to the 'phone."

CHAPTER XIII.

Two Women.

Frederic had the feeling that he slunk to the telephone. The girl handed the receiver to him and he met her confident, untroubled gaze for a second. Instead of returning to the sitting-room where she could have heard everything that he said, she went into her own room down the hall and closed the door. He was not conscious of any intention to temporize, but it was significant that he did not speak until the door closed behind her. Afterwards he realized and was ashamed.

Almost the first words that Yvonne uttered were of a nature to puzzle and irritate him, although they bore directly upon his own previously formed resolution. Her voice, husky and low, seemed strangely plaintive and lifeless to him.

"Have you and Lydia made any plans for the afternoon?" she inquired. He made haste to declare their intention to attend a concert. "I am glad you are going to do that," she went on. "You will stay for luncheon with Lydia?"

"Yes. She's trying to pick up that thing of Feverelli's—the one we heard last night." There was silence at the other end of the wire. "Are you there?"

"Yes."

"I will be home for dinner, of course. You—you don't need me for anything, do you?"

"No," she said. Then, with a low laugh: "You may be excused for the day, my son. Your father and I have been discussing the trip abroad."

"I thought you—you were opposed to going."

"I've changed my mind. As a matter of fact, I've changed my heart."

"You speak in riddles."

She was silent for a long time. "Frederic, I want you to do something for me. Will you try to convince Lydia that I meant no offense last night when I—"

"She understands all that perfectly, Yvonne."

"No, she doesn't. A woman wouldn't understand."

"In what way?"

There was a pause. "No woman likes to be regarded as a fool," she said at last, apparently after careful reflection. "Oh, yes; there is something else. We are dining out this evening."

"You and I?" He Asked, After a Moment.

"You and I?" he asked after a moment.

"Certainly not. Your father and I. I was about to suggest that you dine with Lydia—or better still, ask her over here to share your dinner with you."

He was scowling. "Where are you going?"

"Going? Oh dining. I see. Well," slowly, deliberately, "we thought it would be great fun to dine alone at Delmonico's and see a play afterward."

"What play are you going to see?" he cut in. She mentioned a Belasco production. "Well, I hope you enjoy it, Yvonne. By the way, how is the governor today? In a good humor?"

There was no response. He waited for a moment and then called out: "Are you there?"

"Good-by," came back over the wire. He started as if she had given him a slap in the face. Her voice was cold and forbidding.

"Are you going?" she asked, steadily.

He turned toward her, conscious of the telltale scowl that was passing from his brow. It did not occur in him to resent her abrupt, uncompromising question. As a matter of fact, it seemed quite natural that she should put the question in just that way, flatly, incisively. He considered himself, in a way, to be on trial.

"No, I'm not," he replied. "You did not expect me to forget, did you?" He was uncomfortable under her honest, inquiring gaze. A sullen anger against himself took possession of him. He despised himself for the feeling of loneliness and homesickness that suddenly came over him.

"I thought—" she began, and then her brow cleared. "I have been looking up the recitals in the morning paper. The same orchestra you heard last night is to appear again today at—"

"We will go there, Lydia," he interrupted, and at once began to hum the gay little air that had so completely charmed him. "Try it again, Lyddy. You'll get it in no time."

After luncheon, like two happy children they rushed off to the concert, and it was not until they were on their way home at five o'clock that his enthusiasm began to wane. She was quick to detect the change. He became moody, preoccupied; his part of the conversation was kept up with an effort that lacked all the spontaneity of his earlier and more engaging flights.

Lydia went far back in her calculations and attributed his mood to the promise she had exacted in regard to his attitude toward his father. It occurred to her that he was smarting under the restraint that his promise involved. She realized now, more than ever before, that there could be no delay, no faltering on her part. She would have to see James Brood at once. She would have to go down on her knees to him.

"I feel rather guilty, Freddy," she said, as they approached the house. "Mr. Brood will think it strange that I should plead a headache and yet run off to a concert and enjoy myself when he is so eager to finish the journal—especially as he is to sail so soon. I ought to see him, don't you think so? Perhaps there is something I can do tonight that will make up for the lost time." She was plainly nervous.

"He'd work you to death if he thought it would serve his purpose," said Frederic, gloomily, and back of that sentence lay the thought that made it absolutely imperative for her to act without delay.

"I will go in for a few minutes," she said, at the foot of the steps. "Are you not coming, too?"

He had stopped. "Not just now, Lyddy. I think I'll run up to Tom's flat and smoke a pipe with him. Thanks, old girl, for the happy day we've had. You don't mind if I leave you here?"

Her heart gave a great throb of relief. It was best to have him out of the way for the time being.

"Well—so long," he said, diffidently. "So long, Lyddy."

"So long," she repeated, dropping into his manner of speech without thinking. There was a smothering sensation in his breast.

He looked back as he strode off in the direction from which they had come. She was at the top of the steps, her fingers on the electric button. He wondered why her face was so white. He had always thought of it as being full of color, rich, soft and warm.

Inside the door, Lydia experienced a strange sinking of the heart. "Is Mr. Brood at—" she began, nervously. A voice at the top of the stairway interrupted the question she was putting to the footman.

"Is it you, Lydia? Come up to my room."

The girl looked up and saw Mrs. Brood leaning over the banister rail. She was holding her pink dressing-gown closely about her throat, as if it had been hastily thrown about her shoulders. One bare arm was visible—completely so.

"I came to see Mr. Brood. Is he—"

"He is busy. Come up to my room," repeated Yvonne, somewhat imperiously.

As Lydia mounted the stairs she had a fair glimpse of the other's face. Always pallid—but of a healthy pallor—it was now almost ghastly. Perhaps it was the light from the window that caused it, Lydia was not sure, but a queer, greenish hue overspread the lovely, smiling face. The lips were red, very red—redder than she had ever seen them. The girl suddenly recalled the face she had once seen of a woman who was addicted to the drug habit.

Mrs. Brood met her at the top of the stairs. She was but half dressed. Her lovely neck and shoulders were now almost bare. Her hands were extended toward the visitor, the filmy lace gown hung loose and disregarded about her slim figure.

"Come in, dear. Shall we have tea? I have been so lonely. One cannot read the books they print nowadays. Such stupid things, ai—e?"

She threw an arm about the tall girl and Lydia was surprised to find that it was warm and full of a gentle strength. She felt her flesh tingle with the thrill of contact. Yes, it must have been the light from the window, for Yvonne's face was now aglow with the iridescence that was so peculiarly her own.

A door closed softly on the floor above them. Mrs. Brood glanced over her shoulder and upward. Her arm tightened perceptibly about Lydia's waist.

"It was Ranjab," said the girl, and instantly was filled with amazement. She had not seen the Hindu, had not even been thinking of him, and yet she was impelled by some mysterious intelligence to give utterance to a statement in which there was conviction, not conjecture.

"Did you see him?" asked the other, looking at her sharply.

"No," admitted Lydia, still amazed. "I don't know why I said that."

Mrs. Brood closed her boudoir door behind them. For an instant she stood staring at the knob as if expecting to see it turn—

"I know," she said, "I know why you said it. Because it was Ranjab." She shivered slightly. "I am afraid of that man, Lydia. He seems to be watching me all of the time. Day and night his eyes seem to be upon me."

"Why should he be watching you?" asked Lydia, bluntly.

Yvonne did not notice the question. "Even when I am asleep in my bed, in the dead hour of night, he is looking at me. I can feel it, though asleep. Oh, it is not a dream, for my dreams are of something or someone else—never of him. And yet he is there, looking at me. It—it is uncanny."

"An obsession," remarked Lydia, quietly. "He never struck me as especially omnipresent."

"Didn't you feel him a moment ago?" demanded Yvonne, irritably.

The other hesitated, reflecting. "I suppose it must have been something like that." They were still facing the door, standing close together. "Why do you feel that he is watching you?"

"I don't know. I just feel it, that's all. Day and night. He can read my thoughts, Lydia, as he would read a book. Isn't—isn't it disgusting?" Her laugh was spiritless, obviously artificial.

"I shouldn't object to his reading my thoughts," said Lydia.

"Ah, but you are Lydia. It's different. I have thoughts sometimes, my dear, that would not—but there! Let us speak of more agreeable things. Sit down here beside me. No tea? A cigarette, then. No? Do you forgive me for what I said to you last night?" she asked, sitting down beside the girl on the chaise longue.

"It was so absurd, Mrs. Brood, that I have scarcely given it a moment's thought. Of course I was hurt at the time. It was so unjust to Mr. Brood. It was—"

"It is like you to say that," cried Yvonne. "You are splendid, Lydia. Will you believe me when I tell you that I love you? That I love you very dearly, very tenderly?"

Lydia looked at her in some doubt and not without misgivings. "I should like to believe it," she said, noncommittally.

"Ah, but you doubt it. I see. Well, I do not blame you. I have given you much pain, much distress. When I am far away you will be glad—you will be happy. Is not that so?"

"But you are coming back," said Lydia, with a frank smile, not meant to be unfriendly.

Yvonne's face clouded. "Oh, yes, I shall come back. Why not? Is this not my home?"

"You may call it your home, Mrs. Brood," said Lydia, "but are you quite sure your thoughts always abide here? I mean in the United States, of course."

Yvonne had looked up at her quickly. "Oh, I see. No, I shall never be an American." Then she abruptly changed the subject. "You have had a nice day with Frederic? You have been happy, both of you?"

"Yes—very happy, Mrs. Brood," said the girl, simply.

"I am glad. You must always be happy, you two. It is my greatest wish."

Lydia hesitated for a moment. "Frederic asked me to be his wife—tomorrow," she said and her heart began to thump queerly. She felt that she was approaching a crisis of some sort.

"Tomorrow?" fell from Yvonne's lips. The word was drawn out as if in one long breath. Then, to Lydia's astonishment, an extraordinary change came over the speaker. "Yes, yes, it should be—it must be tomorrow. Poor boy—poor, poor boy! You will marry, yes, and go away at once, ai—e?" Her voice was almost shrill in its intensity, her eyes were wide and eager and—anxious.

"I— Oh, Mrs. Brood, is it for the best?" cried Lydia. "Is it the best thing for Frederic to do? I—I feared you might object. I am sure his father will refuse permission—"

"But you love each other—that is enough. Why ask the consent of anyone? Yes, yes, it is for the best. I know—oh, you cannot realize how well I know. You must not hesitate." The woman was trembling in her eagerness. Lydia's astonishment gave way to perplexity.

"What do you mean? Why are you so serious—so intent on this—"

"Frederic has no money," pursued Yvonne, as if she had not heard Lydia's words. "But that must not deter you. It must not stand in the way. I shall find a way, yes, I shall find a way. I—"

"Do you mean that you would provide for him—for us?" exclaimed Lydia.

"There is a way, there is a way," said the other, fixing her eyes appealingly on the girl's face, to which the flush of anger was slowly mounting.

"His father will not help him—if that is what you are counting upon, Mrs. Brood," said the girl coldly.

"I know. He will not help him, no."

Lydia started. "What do you know about—what has Mr. Brood said to you?" Her heart was cold with apprehension. "Why are you going away next week? What has happened?"

"No, I Shall Never Be an American."

Brood's wife was regarding her with narrowing eyes. "Oh, I see now. You think that my husband suspects that Frederic is too deeply interested in his beautiful stepmother, is that not so? Poof! It has nothing to do with it." Her eyes were sullen, full of resentment now. She was collecting herself.

The girl's eyes expressed the disdain that suddenly took the place of apprehension in her thoughts. A sharp retort leaped to her lips, but she suppressed it.

"Mr. Brood does not like Frederic," she said instead, and could have cut out her tongue the instant the words were uttered. Yvonne's eyes were glittering with a light that she had never seen in them before. Afterwards she described it to herself as baleful.

"So! He has spoken ill—evil—of his son to you?" she said, almost in a monotone. "He has hated him for years—is not that so? I am not the original cause, ai—e? It began long ago—long, long ago?"

"Oh, I beg of you, Mrs. Brood—" began Lydia, shrinking back in dismay.

"You are free to speak your thoughts to me. I shall not be offended. What has he said to you about Frederic—and me?"

THE GROWTH OF WESTERN CANADA

Increase in Railway Mileage, School Attendance and Population.

Some idea of the extent of railway construction in Western Canada can be derived from the fact that the railway mileage in the Province of Alberta has been doubled in three years. The present mileage is 4,097. In all of the settled districts there is ample railway privileges. The rates are governed by a Dominion Railway Commission, and in the exercise of their powers they not only control the rates, giving fair equality to both railway and shipper, but form a court to hear complaints of any who may desire to lodge the same.

In the matter of education no better instance of the advancement that is taking place can be given than that found in the information to hand that attendance at the University of Alberta has increased 1,000 per cent in five years, and is now thoroughly representative of all settled portions of the Province. The students in attendance are from sixty-one distinct districts.

Then as to the prosperity which follows residence in Western Canada, J. E. Edward of Blackie, Alta., gives splendid testimony. He writes, "In the spring of 1907 I first came to this locality from the State of Iowa, Cass County, and located on a quarter section of land near Blackie. Since coming here I have been engaged in mixed farming, which I have found to be more profitable than where I formerly lived. On coming here my worldly holdings were small besides having a family to care for. I now own three quarter sections, sixty head of cattle, twenty head of horses and forty head of hogs, without encumbrance.

"During the seven years I have not had a crop fail. My best crop of oats averaged ninety bushels per acre, with a general yield of thirty-five bushels and upward. My best wheat crop averaged forty-three bushels per acre. When I have had smaller yields per acre I have found that it has been due to improper cultivation. The winters here, although at times the weather is cold, I find as a whole are very agreeable. The summers are warm, but not sultry. The summer nights are cool and one is always assured of a good night's rest. My health has been much better, as I do not suffer from catarrh since coming here. I have no land for sale, and am not wishing to make any change, but would be pleased to answer any enquiries concerning this locality."—Advertisement.

EARLY RIVAL OF NEW YORK

Eastern Metropolis of the United States Might Have Been in Staten Island.

We are reminded that New York came mighty near being on Staten Island by the announcement that the famous Cubberly cottage, with all its furnishings, has been donated to the public by its owner, Dr. Nathaniel [illegible]. The structure is one of the [illegible] examples of the so-called "colonial" architecture extant, and it is in an excellent state of preservation. It has been satisfactorily determined that it was built not later than 1680, and most of its furnishings antedate that year. It was in all probability a finer rural residence at the time of its completion than any on Manhattan island. Now it stands at the intersection of New Dorp lane and Cedar Grove avenue. At the time when the builders put on the last coat of paint and told the Cubberlys to move in it was surrounded by tributary acres constituting a splendid estate, and the Dutch aristocrats of New Amsterdam, across the upper bay, followed the example of the original Cubberly promptly in establishing themselves upon the salubrious and picturesque hills of Staten Island. The Cubberly cottage was but the pioneer among many. In fact, as historical records show, the new settlement on Staten Island grew so rapidly at that time that some people thought it might outgrow New Amsterdam. The Cubberly cottage came into the possession of the Brittons in the year 1695, when it was deeded to Nathaniel Britton, an ancestor of the owner who has given it to the public as a historical relic. The cottage, with all its contents, will be kept open to the public under the charge of the Staten Island Association of Arts and Science.

Run Away From "Nerves."

No one can help feeling nervous at times in this age of rush and racket, but it is quite possible to put on the brake, as it were, and not let the nerves run away with us.

If people fret you, it is not necessary to be rude to them. Try, instead, to avoid them.

Don't read books that irritate you. Books are plentiful, therefore put away the offending volume and choose another.

Gown of Taffeta and Chiffon

If you are looking for an afternoon gown that will do service for almost any of the semidress occasions which enliven summer afternoons and evenings, and is really a triumph as a visiting toilette, combinations of silk with transparent fabrics deserve your attention. In the costume pictured here such a combination is shown, employing taffeta and chiffon with the happiest results. Voiles and laces, nets (and organdies when very sheer) suggest any number of combinations and great diversity in style.

The skirt in the costume shown is made of dark blue chiffon decorated with bands of the same shade in taffeta. It is straight and round and cut to extend several inches above the waist line on to the bodice. It is shaped to the figure about the hips and waist and to the lower part of the bodice by means of cords run in narrow tucks. These are drawn up, fulling the material and forming a shirred yoke at the top of the skirt, terminating in a frill above the waist line. This skirt is worn over a plain one of taffeta.

A dainty bodice of lace or net or any of the softly falling semitransparent fabrics, worn with this skirt, and a corsage ornament, makes a pretty dance or dinner frock of it.

The pretty, straight coat, with ample sleeves finished with chiffon frills, is open at the throat and finished there with an organdie collar decorated with a little fine embroidery. The sleeves are elaborated with a band of taffeta above the elbow, fastened down with silk covered buttons. But the touch of distinction which first catches the eye is the belt and hanging end of silk, decorated with an embroidered pattern of the smallest beads in many brilliant but harmonizing colors. They are put on with the intent of reminding one of the beadwork of the Indians, and are astonishingly effective. One may count upon a thrill of patriotism as a part of the satisfaction in wearing this gown, not simply because it is made of American fabrics, but because its decoration is an inspiration born in our own land. And notice how the idea is carried out in the long and splendid single feather for which the little hat is merely a support.

How to Make a Bureau

Take three or four boxes, nail them together and line inside with white paper. Take three yards white dotted muslin and felt and tack it around the top of the top box, cover top with towel or bureau scarf, and you have a very handy place to put things, as well as a very neat looking piece of furniture.

Breakfast Caps, Simple and Otherwise

Here are three of the latest breakfast or boudoir caps, one of them a familiar and simple type, and two others less simple, but having the charm of novelty as well as beauty to recommend them. None of these are too difficult to make for women who understand even a little of needlework, and the pretty cap of point d'esprit net, pictured at the left of the group, might be successfully made by any novice in sewing.

This cap is merely a circular piece of dotted net having a diameter of eighteen inches. The edge is turned up in the tiniest of hems—about one-sixteenth of an inch wide—and over this a narrow edging of val lace is stitched down. Two inches in from the edge of the lace, on the under side of the net, a narrow silk binding or bias tape is machine-stitched along both edges to the net. This forms a casing to hold an elastic band or cord that is run through it, gathering the net into a cap. A rosette of satin ribbon is mounted at each side. Or, if preferred, a small cluster of chiffon roses or millinery flowers may be used.

At the top of the group a cap is shown made of shadow lace over chiffon, edged with a scant ruffle of messaline ribbon about an inch wide. The crown and short cape are made of a strip fourteen inches long. At the front two triangular pieces are set on to form the turned-back points shown in the picture. These are about five inches deep. A short elastic cord is inserted in a casing across the back, and the fullness at the front of the cap is caught in the plain edges of the two-pointed pieces. Full rosettes of four-inch satin ribbon, with two ends, decorate this model at each side and finish a cap that is unusually becoming.

The third cap shown is made of a wide shadow lace, edged about the front with a narrow lace of the same kind. The scalloped edge of the wide lace forms a cape falling to the shoulders, and the narrower lace makes a frill falling about the face. An elastic band adjusts this cap also, and messaline ribbon, caught at intervals about the face, is finished with loops and hanging ends at the back.

Until you have experimented with different models in these pretty bits of feminine finery you will not know how becoming some of them are. Moreover, they are made of American laces, the filmiest and softest product of the looms that turn cotton fiber into fabrics to wonder at.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

To Make a Workbox.

Procure from a grocery store a cheese box, now from some carpenter shop get three pieces of wood three feet long and one inch thick and one inch wide, and have the outside edges rounded. Now take cheese box and nail it to the strips about one foot from the floor to all three strips. Then take the cover of the box and nail to top of the strips, sandpaper inside and out and stain with dark oak stain, then varnish. The wood in the box is very pretty finished like this, and you have a nice workbox with a very little cost.

Something to Do.

"What has become of the Cheerful Idiot?" asked the Old Fogy. "I haven't heard of him for months." "Why, he is busy with a get-rich-quick scheme," replied the Grouch. "What is it?" asked the Old Fogy. "Someone told him that a queen bee lays 3,000 eggs a day, and he is trying to perfect a cross between a queen bee and a hen."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SURPASS THE BIRDS

Aviators Fly Higher Than Denizens of the Air.

Records Show That Heights Reached by Man Are Far Above the Winged Creatures—Some Experiments of Interest.

It may be gathered from the war news that aviators in the war zone are making many spectacular flights, covering longer and still longer distances from the actual battle lines and giving indications that their aim in dropping bombs is improving. One wonders if the record of these flights is being kept for examination, reference and comparison when peace returns, so that they may be looked at side by side with the flight records made in calm and peaceful period before the nearly world-wide slaughter began.

Just before the outbreak of the war there was a season of recordbreaking in aviation, and especially by German airmen. July 9, 1914, Otto Linnekogel drove a monoplane up to 21,645 feet at Johannisthal, and July 10 Heinrich Oelerich, in a biplane, exceeded that height by more than 4,000 feet, going up to about 25,000 feet near Leipzig. That was almost 10,000 feet higher than Mount Blanc (15,782), and almost 5,000 feet higher than Mount McKinley (20,300), and the altitude attained by that biplane was nearly five miles above sea level.

It has been computed that if the height reached by Oelerich is not near the limit of biplane ascent, it must be near the limit of altitude at which a man can live. It is set forth in some of the older records of ballooning that April 15, 1875, Gaston Tissandier, H. T. Sivel and J. E. Croce-Spinelli made an ascension from Paris in a balloon which they called the Zenith, and that they got up to 27,950 feet, but only Tissandier came down alive. The others perished in the rarefied air, being dead in the basket when the balloon returned to earth.

James Glaisher, an Englishman, in a balloon ascension which he undertook from Greenwich observatory September 5, 1862, to make observations of the higher strata of atmosphere, reached an altitude considerably above 20,000 feet. He estimated, from the fact that the balloon was rising 1,000 feet a minute when he became insensible at 29,000 feet and was falling 2,000 feet a minute when he came to himself thirteen minutes later, that he reached an altitude of 37,000 feet. This conclusion was not accepted by the scientists at that time, but they allowed him an altitude greater than 29,000 feet. The material fact was that Glaisher collapsed at that height.

It has been said by those who have given particular consideration to the question of extreme height at which human life can be supported that no mountain-climber has ever reached 26,000 feet. Whymper's experiments show that above 18,000 feet the slightest exertion is painfully difficult, though it has been also recorded that the Duke of the Abruzzi climbed to 24,583 feet on Bride peak in the Himalayas and did not suffer from mountain sickness, and Filippi, the chronicler of that expedition, expressed the belief that with the equipment for mountain climbing now available a man might go still higher.

There was a more or less interesting experiment July 31, 1901, when, in a balloon ascension, a barometric reading of 34,000 feet was attained, but the aeronauts, although they carried with them and consumed a supply of oxygen, became insensible about the moment that altitude was reached.

Birds do not fly very high compared with the heights reached by man in balloons and aeroplanes. Gay-Lussac, a balloonist, in 1850 threw out carrier pigeons at heights above 20,000 feet, but these birds fell heavily toward denser air. The condor nests above the ten-thousand-foot level, and Alexander von Humboldt reported that he once saw this great bird soaring at a height which he estimated at 23,000 feet.

More airmen are steadily on the wing today than at any other time in the history of the race, but it is plausible that they are not wasting petrol and imperiling themselves and their machines at greater heights than to avoid shrapnel and too easy observation. Their object is to keep as close to the earth as they can, so that their reconnoissance may be the more accurate and complete, and if engaged in dropping bombs they may increase their chance of hitting the object they would destroy.

She Was Willing.

He walked timidly in and looked around in a hesitating manner. His wife, a large portly woman—towered over him. A lady from the desk came forward. The man spoke.

"This, I presume, madam, is suffrage headquarters?"

"It is."

"I came in to offer my services as a speaker for your cause. Are you looking for talent?"

"Yes, sir, we are. Every little helps. Thank you. So you are friends of the cause?"

The man's wife now spoke.

"Not exactly," she whispered. "I'm an anti—even if he isn't. But I approve, ma'am, I approve. If my dear little hubby here wants to speak in favor of suffrage, and you are willing, so much the better. As you say, every little helps—the antis."—Life.

Send Troops 42,000 Razors.

Referring to his previous appeal made at the request of the war office for spare razors for the use of our soldiers at the front, W. H. Ellis, the master cutler, writing from Cutlers hall, Sheffield, thanks the public for the generous response made forty-two thousand razors having been sent in, which, repaired and set by a staff engaged for that purpose, have been forwarded to the front. But further supplies are urgently needed, and Mr. Ellis begs everyone who possesses even one or two disused razors to send them in as soon as possible.—London Globe.

Wicked.

"I stole three bases today, pop," said the young hopeful proudly.

"Willie," interrupted his mother before the boy's father could express his appreciation of the feat, "you go and put them right back where you got them. I'll not have it said that any boy of mine is a thief."

And she doesn't understand to this day what made the male members of the family laugh.

Just Like Her.

"Well, Jane, dear," said Smithers, "I see that that little milliner up on Main street has joined the antis since you suffragettes adopted the 48-cent hat."

"Oh, well, what if she has?" retorted Mrs. Smithers. "Nobody's surprised at that. She always was a trimmer."

Stirring Up Discontent.

"There's no telling what this country will be in the future. Why, just look at it now!"

"That's what all the Republicans are saying and I fear they mean to reflect on the Democratic administration."

Men.

"The women most successful and most popular with men are not the beautiful ones, but the wise ones."

The speaker was Francis Wilson. He added:

"Wise women are those who know that men are only babies with beards."

COULDN'T BE WELL ARRANGED

Esther Would Very Willingly Have Obliged Employer, but, Under the Circumstances, You Know.

A southern family employed a very skillful cook, called Esther. She had been with them about ten days, when she announced that she would have to leave, as she was about to be married.

The mistress received the news with consternation.

"You've been with me only a few days, Esther," she said, "and you remember you told me you would stay."

"I knows it, ma'am, an' I'se awful sorry," said Esther mournfully, "but I don't see how I kin help it. The gentleman wants de weddin' to be on Tuesday, ma'am."

"Don't you think you could get him to put it off, Esther?" asked the mistress, "just a little longer—until I could get another cook?"

"'Deed, ma'am, I'd like to oblige you," said Esther, earnestly, "but, to tell you de trut, I ain't well eneff acquainted with de gentleman to ax him to do dat, ma'am."

Some Wind.

Two old Scotchmen were one day disputing as to who remembered the windier day.

"I mind it bein' sic a win'," said one, "that it took the craws three 'oors to fly hame frae the dominie's field, an' that's nae mair than a mile."

"Hoot, mon!" the other replied, "I've seen it that windy that the craws had to walk hame!"

"Doesn't that stand for free on board?"

8. If you see the red flag drive with care and go slow. Safety First.

If any person does not care to comply with these rules or is found breaking one of them, he will kindly be requested to drop out of the party.

Mr O. M. Spink, the sheriff, will be the Marshal of the day.

Persons having machines wishing to join the party are invited to do so providing they comply with the rules made by the Committee. All persons planning to go should notify the Committeeman in their Community or County Secretary Donnan, Mr T. D. Morley, Mentor, or Mr. Chas Lucas, of Perry.

SUNDAY MEETING

Sunday afternoon the last of the series of meetings conducted by the County Association will be held in Painesville at the M. E. Church. These meetings have created much interest in the different townships and it is earnestly desired that many men from the township be present.

A speaker has been secured for this meeting that many people know and will want to hear.

There is no school money to pay the last two weeks' salary of the school year just ended, and there will be no money next autumn to pay teachers in Chardon township, unless funds are borrowed. The situation of the village schools is acute.

STICK TO YOUR HOME MERCHANTS

The Herald believes in sticking to home merchants and in view of this fact it proposes to wage a vigorous educational campaign against mail order houses upon the grounds that mail order houses do nothing to maintain our schools, our churches, good roads or help the sick, the needy, and a hundred and one other things that Painesville merchants have to bear.

The habit (because it is a habit pure and simple) of buying from mail order houses is formed on the theory that one can buy for less money. The idea is as erroneous as Aesop's fables. One may buy a few things cheaper of mail order houses than he can buy at home, but they are few and it is a well known fact that quality is not really expected from the far-off stores of Chicago, New York or Philadelphia. Ninety times out of a hundred the same goods could be bought of the HOME MERCHANT FOR THE SAME MONEY AND OFTEN TIMES FOR LESS MONEY IF YOU GIVE THE LOCAL MERCHANT A CHANCE to figure with you.

Take this joke of a grocery order which is being solicited broadcast nowadays by a certain mail order house. They tell you they will sell you 100 pounds of sugar at a saving of one-half cent a pound if you will give them an ORDER FOR TEN DOLLARS worth of other STUFF. They proceed then to load you up with spices, pepper, baking powder, condiments, etc., enough to last an average house wife for ten years, and upon which there is a profit so large that on the whole bill they make in the neighborhood of $3.

NOW ANY GROCERYMAN IN PAINESVILLE would be tickled to death to sell you the same kind of an order, WITH THE CASH LAID DOWN ON THE COUNTER FOR HIM, as you have to do with the mail order house.

It is the same way with clothing, hardware, drugs, furniture, millinery, shoes, tinware—with everything. So would it not be a good plan for you to STOP—THINK—INVESTIGATE—before you send your money away, never to be returned, and give the merchant a chance WHO WILL TRUST YOU WHEN YOU ARE SICK, HELP PAY FOR YOUR MINISTERS, HELP YOU KEEP UP YOUR SCHOOLS, GOOD ROADS, etc.

In order that you may INVESTIGATE, the Herald for the next three months proposes to publish a list of articles which you may buy at home, BY MAIL IF YOU WISH, under a department to be known as "The Herald's Buy-in-Painesville Department," and it will pay you to read it through each week as it will contain certain bargains in merchandise you cannot afford to miss.

The Lake County Herald Will Take Up the Fight Against Mail Order Buying. Watch For the Stories.

REFERENDUM ELECTION ON LIGHT PLANT BONDS NEXT TUESDAY

Believed That Proposition to Issue Bonds will Carry by Large Majority, Provided the Voters Understand the Question

Tuesday, June 22, will be election day in Painesville and on that date the voters of the city will say whether the municipal electric plant is to be enlarged, improved and brought up-to-date or whether the thousands of dollars already invested by the taxpayers shall be charged up to profit and loss and the valuable light and power contract given to some private corporation.

The city council has voted to issue $35,000 worth of bonds, provided the voters consent, and with this sum they plan to put the electric plant in such condition that it will be able to care for the increasing business and will produce an income that will more than meet the interest and principal of the bonds.

The present plant is not to be abandoned. It is a valuable one, all right in its day, but not large enough to care for the needs of this growing city today and totally inadequate for the needs of the bigger, better Painesville of tomorrow. What the council plans to do is simply to add another power unit to the plant.

In 1908, when the municipal plant started the power house was equipped with a 100 k w generator directly connected to a 150 H P engine. This was used only for street lighting. Later a 225 K W generator was added and connected directly to a 380 H P engine. These are all in good condition as are the boilers.

The number of users of light and power has increased steadily every year. Formerly it was possible to take care of the day current with the small generator and engine, using the large machines for the night work, and being able to make minor repairs on the machines when idle. But the load increased until last winter it reached a demand of 290 K W, and the plant with both machines running and nothing in reserve in case of accident is only rated at 325 K W, leaving a bare margin of 35 K W to come and go on.

If the people vote "yes" on the bond issue a 500 K W generator and a suitable engine will be installed and this alone will be able to take care of the heavy night load leaving the smaller machines for use in the day time or at night in case of emergency. To install this new machine and engine an addition to the building will have to be made as the present machines will not be disturbed—they can't be—they are running day and night.

Principal and interest of the bonds is NOT to be paid by general taxation but out of the earnings of the municipal plant, so much money being set aside each year. Can the plant make this sum over and above expenses? Those in a position to know answer YES. The current sold last year alone amounted to $23,044.92, and more customers could have been secured had the plant been able to carry the load. Last year $7,880.99 was expended for extensions of lines and services, meters, transformers, etc. Out of the $35,000 the council is asking for it is planned to extend the lines to all parts of the city where the people are ready for the service and the amount thereafter to be expended for extensions will be small. If the plant could make enough to pay nearly $8,000 for betterments this year what is to prevent it from making enough to pay interest and principal on the bonds after all extensions are in?

And then comes the increase of business and the added revenue from that source. With plenty of machinery at the plant it will be easy to add many new customers; they are coming even now, 78 having been added during the past year. The income of the plant for the past five months has been $12,417.85; a gain of $2,376.32 over the same five months a year ago and showing a probable gain for the year of at least $5,000.

As the number of customers increase the price of current will deminish as current is one of the many things that can be sold cheaper in large quantities than in small. The cost of producing current for the past five months was .0159, exclusive of interest and depreciation. Last year the cost for the year was .0171, showing a reduction in cost of .0012 per K W hour.

The C. P. & E. has kindly (?) offered to furnish juice at .0186 per K W hour, this price being based on a still larger estimated output. If the demand should reach the estimate of the traction people, the cost of production at the municipal plant would drop to .015 per K W hour or even lower.

Copies of the bond ordinance and the argument in favor of its approval have been mailed to every voter in the city and should be read thoroughly between now and next Tuesday morning.

TALK TO HEALTH LEAGUE

Prominent Men and Country Nurse Speak at Meeting at Court House

The Lake County Public Health league held its regular meeting at the court house on Saturday afternoon. Miss Routledge, the County Public Health nurse reported 21 cases visited during May, 7 patients suffering from tuberculosis and 14 from other diseases. One patient was sent to hospital and one patient died. During the month 112 visits were made. Ten schools were visited and 484 children inspected.

The Rev. Mr. Watkins of Perry gave an interesting report of the annual meeting of the Anti-Tuberculosis society held in Columbus on June 7. Dr Hatfield of the National Anti-Tuberculosis society, and Dr. McCampbell of Columbus were the principal speakers. Dr. Hatfield stated that over 50 million Red Cross seals were sold in the United States last year and that $475,000 was able to be used in the fight against tuberculosis. He emphasized the point of "education" of the people by means of public health nurses rather than by the erecting of more hospitals and sanatoria.

Dr. McCampbell estimated that there were over 35,000 people with tuberculosis at the present time in Ohio and that 75 per cent of these were preventable.

There are in Ohio 66 organizations and 109 nurses working for the prevention of tuberculosis, and urged the need for arousing more public sentiment in the work.

CHICKENS TO BE SCARCE

Late Spring Will Reduce the Crop of Chickens. Prices May be High

A well known poultry raiser has made the following statement concerning the chicken proposition this summer.

A moment's thought, will disclose the fact that our spring this year is very late. Farm work, when it can be finally done, must be done as rapidly as possible. Thus, without question, there will be fewer chicks hatched this spring than usual. The winter has been so long and stormy and the sun has shone so little that there is a small percentage of chicks hatched at this time as compared with former seasons. And the fertility, owing to the necessity of setting the birds in their houses, has run considerably lower than any season for years. The atmosphere all winter has been so damp and heavy that the birds have not been in the best of condition. These are some of the reasons why our chicken crop will be smaller this season.

"This leaves us but one conclusion and that is—the person spending the necessary time to hatch chicks, plenty of them, is going to reap a splendid price for his product. I most earnestly urge all breeders of utility and fancy birds to make an especial effort to get all the chicks possible. The individual having a nice lot of early pullets hatched will have a very profitable income from them early next fall when eggs are high, as these pullets are bound to lay before cold weather commences."

Price-Ferron Nuptials

Probably the prettiest wedding of the season was that of Miss Anna Elizabeth Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Price of Morse avenue and a very popular young lady of this city, and Owen P. Ferron, well known local real estate dealer, celebrated at St. Mary's church, Thursday morning. The church was filled to overflowing with friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The mass was celebrated by the bride's brother, Father John Price of St. Columbkill's church, Cleveland. The deacon of the mass was the pastor of St. Mary's, Rev. William Gallena, D. D., and the sub-deacon was ...

COUNTY Y. M. C. A.

AUTO TRIP

The Lake County Y M C A auto trip proved to be one of the best and biggest things that have taken place in Lake County for some time. There were fifty-three machines in the parade and two hundred and fifty boys. Not an accident happened to mar the pleasure of the trip and the boys and men thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the time. The boys were very much interested in the places that were visited and many expressed a desire to remain longer and ask questions. After the party visited the Cleveland Crane Co. at Wickliffe, they lined up in front of the machines and Mr. Provo took a picture of the crowd.

Every one along was impressed with the system and order throughout the day and also the gentlemanly conduct of the boys. Our prominent minister of the County who accompanied the party said that he did not see a boy all day smoking or hear an oath. He was very much impressed by this.

During the past year the County Association has been doing some things that have done more good among boys than any other institution in the County. In fact, it is the ...

CZAR'S TROOPS ARE FIGHTING FURIOUSLY

Trying to Drive Back the Austro-German Armies Along the Entire Eastern Battlefront---Other War News.

London, England.—Along the entire eastern battle front Russia, with shortage of ammunition a thing of the past, is fighting furiously to drive back the Teutonic armies.

Following advices from Petrograd which said that 20,000 Austro-German troops had been slain or routed, a German official report regarding the same fighting announced that 16,000 Russians had been captured in a general attack of Gen Mackenson's army along a 45 mile front between Czernlawa and Sieniawa, in Galicia.

The Italian eastern army, which has forced its way across the lower Isonzo, capturing Monfalcone, is pushing forward along the Gulf of Trieste towards the city of Trieste. Further progress was made Sunday, says a dispatch from Lugano. The next immediate objective is the town of Nabresina, on the gulf nine miles from Trieste. Occupation of the Corinthian town of Valentina is announced by Rome.

While the Germans report a victory north of Arras the French communique declares attacks at the same point were repulsed. The French statement indicates that the artillery struggle at several points has been severe.

The Turkish war office announces that attacks of the allied forces against the right wing of the Turks were repulsed and that the attackers were thrown back to their original positions with heavy losses.

A dispatch from Athens to the Havas News Agency says the candidates of the party of M. Venizlos, the former premier, who gave up office on account of his policy in favor of war on the side of the allies, were elected in Athens and that elsewhere through the kingdom his partisans were successful.

DEMANDS SAFETY FOR AMERICANS

New United States Note to Germany Asks Cessation of Submarine Warfare Upon Neutral Vessels.

HOLDS KAISER MISINFORMED

Declares This Country Has Positive Proof That Lusitania Did Not Carry Guns or Cargo Prohibited by Laws of the United States.

Washington, D. C.—The United States, in its latest note to Germany, just made public, formally asks the imperial government for assurances that measures hereafter will be adopted to safeguard "American lives and American ships" on the high seas.

Germany is given no alternative but to cease its submarine warfare upon neutral vessels and safeguard American lives if it desires to continue on friendly relations with this country.

Repeats First Demands.

The note reiterates the demands upon the German government made in the first note—that the lives of Americans must be held sacred wherever they may be. It declares that Germany's contentions in its reply to the first note—that the Lusitania was armed and that the passengers had been warned—are without force as excuses for the killing of hundreds of non-combatants.

It declares that the United States has positive proof that the Lusitania did not carry guns and that she did not carry cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States.

It declares that no nation has a right to sink unarmed merchant vessels without first exercising its right of search and without giving the passengers and crews of such vessels ample opportunity to escape before ...

... government of the United States would have been bound to take official cognizance in performing its recognized duty as a neutral power and in enforcing its national laws. It was its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action, that she was not serving as a transport, that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States, and that if in fact she was a naval vessel of Great Britain, she should not receive clearance as a merchantman, and it performed that duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials. It is able, therefore, to assure the imperial German government that it has been misinformed.

If the imperial German government should deem itself to be in possession of convincing evidence that the officials of the government of the United States did not perform these duties with thoroughness, the government of the United States sincerely hopes that it will submit that evidence for consideration.

Whatever may be the contentions of the imperial German government regarding the carriage of contraband of war on board the Lusitania or regarding the explosion of that material by the torpedo, it need only be said that in the view of this government these contentions are irrelevant to the question of the legality of the methods used by the German naval authorities in sinking the vessel.

Principles of Humanity.

But the sinking of passenger ships involves principles of humanity which throw into the background any special circumstances of detail that may be thought to affect the cases, principles which lift it, as the imperial German government will no doubt be quick to recognize and acknowledge, out of the class of ordinary subjects of diplomatic discussion or of international controversy. Whatever be the other facts regarding the Lusitania, the principal fact is that a great steamer, primarily and chiefly a conveyance for passengers, and carrying more than a thousand souls who had no part or lot in the conduct of the war, was torpedoed and sunk without so much as a challenge or a warning and that men, women and children were sent to their death in circumstances unparalleled in modern warfare. The fact that more than 100 American citizens were among those who perished made it the duty of the government of the United States to speak of these things and once more with solemn emphasis to call the attention of the imperial German government to the grave responsibility which the government of the United States conceives that it has incurred in this tragic occurrence, and to the indisputable principle upon which that responsibility rests. The government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privileges of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity, which every government honors itself in respecting and ...

TO EACH HIS TASK

His Own Life to Live, His Own Task to Do, His Own Message to Speak.

There is one point in which all men are alike, and that is that they are different. There is one quality which is everywhere present in human life, and that is the quality of inequality. Human lives are infinitely different, presenting an endless series of patterns. It is true that human life is a unity, but it is equally true that each person is unlike every other.

There are elements in human life that are simple and universal, but the form these elements will assume in each individual is unique. "Like produces like!" so declares a law of biology. But that state is generally but not precisely true. No matter how fully and thoroughly you may know the parents, it is never quite possible to predict the exact characteristics of the progeny. The new life is a fresh combination of two series of personal forces. Just what combination of these two groups of forces the new life will express no one can accurately prophesy. That is the truth there is in Oscar Wilde's admonition that people should not be treated as the rule but all of them as exceptions.

Each Man a New Creation.

"As like as two peas," we say of the baby twins. But more careful scrutiny makes it evident that both peas and babies differ in many particulars. Jacob and Esau were twins, but they were unlike. God, it would seem, has gone to infinite pains to make the difference between human beings not as few but as many as possible. The Heavenly Father is fond of variation ...

OUR SCRAP OF PAPER

And so we, too, tear up our scrap of paper. True, the Bryan arbitration treaties have not been ratified However, they have been negotiated They have been accorded the sanction of the administration They have been vindicated by the best thought and judgment of the nation. They are morally binding They constitute a real obligation. And we tear them up. And unlike Germany we cannot even make the plea of "military necessity."

As was to have been expected, that portion of the American press that has for months been pro-British, which has for months been serving as the mouth-piece of the American jingoes, turns with bitterness upon William Jennings Bryan. No term of condemnation is too strong for the organs that today rejoice in the fact that, in order to "be firm," we have consigned treaties to the waste paper basket.

If one were to take the first outbreaks of the American press as being typical of the attitude of the American people, William Jennings Bryan would stand today as a dishonored, incompetent man, who has attempted, because of personal pique, to deal his country a telling blow in an hour of need But as time goes by facts will emerge from the present murk, and the world at large will realize what the ex-secretary of state tried to do to preserve the people not only of this nation, but of the world.

The one great question which has been facing Mr Bryan and has been facing the administration resolves itself into this

Is Germany entitled to the protection of arbitration in case of a serious dispute?

It must be remembered that Germany is a friendly power, that, as far as we are concerned, she has accepted the principle of arbitration Even though it were urged that Germany were a criminal among the nations, that she had placed herself outside the pale of the law of nations, she would be entitled to a hearing, she would be entitled to call witnesses Then after the hearing had been held, after the witnesses had been heard, after the facts had been established, it would devolve upon us to take whatever measures might be necessary. The individual criminal is restrained. If we were to establish the fact that Germany is a criminal among nations, it might become our duty to restrain her, but we have no right, under the arbitration principle, to constitute ourselves the sole judge and render a decision solely upon the basis of evidence in our own hands.

It must be remembered that the administration allowed itself to be committed to the arbitration principle. The former secretary of state was known in Europe only as the man who had negotiated peace treaties, who had contended for a full hearing in case of any serious dispute. For him to have committed himself to a course that repudiated arbitration would have been not only to dishonor himself, but to dishonor the very office he occupied. The moment President Wilson decided to disregard Germany's acceptance of the arbitration idea that moment Mr. Bryan's position in the cabinet became untenable.

What the result of the Wilson note will be is of course a matter that is in the laps of the gods. Germany begirt by enemies, may choose to be conciliatory, even to the point of humiliation. It is to be hoped that her diplomats will find some way by means of which they can avoid an open rupture.

But when all is said and done the propositions made by Mr. Bryan stand out as eminently safe and sane:

WARN AMERICANS TO KEEP OUT OF THE WAR ZONE.

PROHIBIT THE CARRYING OF PASSENGERS ON SHIPS THAT CARRY MUNITIONS OF WAR.

ARBITRATE THE DIFFERENCES THAT ARISE.

These were the things that Bryan plead for, and had such a course been followed a rupture with Germany would have been as improbable as a rupture with Mars.

SYNOPSIS.

—9—

In the New York home of James Brood his son, Frederic, receives a wireless from him. Frederic tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancee, that the message announces his father's marriage, and orders Mrs. Desmond, the housekeeper and Lydia's mother to prepare the house for an immediate home-coming. Brood and his bride arrive. She wins Frederic's liking at first meeting. Brood shows dislike and veiled hostility to his son. Lydia and Mrs. Brood met in the jade-room, where Lydia works as Brood's secretary. Mrs. Brood is startled by the appearance of Ranjab, Brood's Hindu servant. She makes changes in the household and gains her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia away. She fascinates Frederic. She begins to fear Ranjab in his uncanny appearances and disappearances, and Frederic, remembering his father's East Indian stories and firm belief in magic, fears unknown evil. Ranjab performs feats of magic for Dawes and Riggs. Frederic's father jealous, unjustly orders his son from the dinner table as drunk. Brood tells the story of Ranjab's life to his guests. "He killed a woman" who was unfaithful to him. Yvonne plays with Frederic's infatuation for her. Her husband warns her that the thing must not go on. She tells him that he still loves his dead wife whom he drove from his home. Through her Yvonne, Yvonne plays with Brood, Frederic and Lydia as with figures on a chess board. Brood, madly jealous, tells Lydia that Frederic is not his son and that he has brought him up to kill his happiness at the proper time with this knowledge. Frederic takes Lydia home through a heavy storm and spends the night at her mother's house. His wavering allegiance to her is strengthened by a day spent with her. Yvonne, over the phone, rouses Frederic's infatuation for her again. Lydia goes to beg Brood not to tell Frederic of his unhappy parentage, but is turned from her purpose.

Lydia resolved to take the plunge. Now was the time to speak plainly to this woman of the thing that was hurting her almost beyond the limits of endurance. Her voice was rather high pitched. She had the fear that she would not be able to control it.

"I should be blind not to have observed the cruel position in which you are placing Frederic. Is it surprising that your husband has eyes as well as I? What must be his thoughts, Mrs. Brood?"

She expected an outburst, a torrent of indignation, an angry storm of words, and was therefore unprepared for the piteous hunted expression that came swiftly into the lovely eyes, bent so appealingly upon her own, which were cold and accusing. Here was a new phase to this extraordinary creature's character. She was a coward after all, and Lydia despised a coward. The look of scorn deepened in her eyes, and out from her heart rushed all that was soft and tender in her nature, leaving it barren of all compassion.

"I do not want to hurt Frederic," murmured Yvonne. "I—I am sorry if—"

"You are hurting him dreadfully," said Lydia, suddenly choking up with emotion.

[illegible]

... am thinking of, Mrs. Brood, but of Frederic. Why have you done this abominable thing to him? Why?"

"I—I did not realize what it would mean to him," said the other, desperately. "I—I did not count all the cost. But, dearest Lydia, it will come out all right again, I promise you. I have made a horrible, horrible mistake. I can say no more. Now, let me lie here with my head upon your breast. I want to feel the beating of your pure, honest heart—the heart that I have hurt. I can tell by its throbs whether it will ever soften toward me. Do not say anything now—let us be still."

It would be difficult to describe the feelings of Lydia Desmond as she sat there with the despised though to be adored head pillowed upon her breast, where it now rested in a sort of confident repose, as if there was safety in the very strength of the young girl's disapproval. Yvonne had twisted her lithe body on the chaise longue so that she half-faced Lydia. Her free arm, from which the loose sleeve had fallen, leaving it bare to the shoulder, was about the girl's neck.

For a long time Lydia stared straight before her, seeing nothing, positively dumb with wonder and acknowledging a sense of dismay over her own disposition to submit to this extraordinary situation. She was asking herself why she did not cast the woman away, why she lacked the power to resent by deed as well as by thought. Life, marvelous, adorable life rested there on her breast. This woman had hurt her—had hurt her wantonly—and yet there came stealing over her, subtly, the conviction that she could never hurt her in return. She could never bring herself to the point of hurting this wondrous, living, breathing, throbbing creature who pleaded not only with her lips and eyes, but with the gentle heartbeats that rose and fell in her throat.

After a long time, in which there was conflict, she suddenly pressed her warm lips to Yvonne's. Then in an abrupt revulsion of feeling her arms fell away from the warm sweet body and almost roughly she pushed Yvonne away from her.

"I—I didn't mean to do that!" she gasped.

The other smiled, but it was a sad, plaintive effort on her part. "I knew that you would," she repeated.

Lydia sprang to her feet, her face suddenly flaming with embarrassment. "I must see Mr. Brood. I stopped in to tell him that—" she began, trying to cover her confusion, but Yvonne interrupted.

"I know that you could not help it, my dear," she said. Then, after a pause: "You will let me know what my husband has to say about it?"

Citizen Used Dishonorable Methods to Prevent the Putting Up of Strawberries.

"I want you to do me a favor," said a citizen as he entered a crockery store the other morning with an anxious look on his face.

"Anything within reason, of course," was the reply.

"It is rather a family affair," said the first.

"Oh, I can keep a secret."

"It isn't much of a secret, but the strawberry season will soon begin."

"Yes, I know."

"You keep fruit jars of course?"

"Thousands, of course."

"My wife was telling me this morning that she proposed to do up at least three bushels of strawberries this summer, and she'll be around here to ask the price of fruit jars. I want you to tell her that, owing to the war, they have gone up to $15 a dozen."

"Oh, my!" gasped the crockery man.

"I have got a dealer to lie to her about the price of berries by the bushel, and a grocer to tell her that sugar has gone up 400 per cent, and if you only will do your part not a dorned old strawberry will be laid away for winter."—Providence Journal.

Noble Dissatisfaction

It is said that Tennyson was 17 years in writing "In Memoriam." He wrote the little song, "Come Into the Garden, Maud," 50 times before he published it. The wife of a distinguished painter said: "I never saw my husband satisfied with one of his productions." Self-dissatisfaction lies at the root of our noble achievements. What is true generally is particularly true as a condition of growth in the divine life. Even if we have been kept from outward and disgraceful sin, how we came short of the glory of God! Never yield to discouragement, never admit that failure is a necessary part of your life, never abandon your quest for the highest! Remember that Christ is just in front! His Clever Wife

He was deeply in love with his wife, but awfully careless about money matters. He started away on a long business trip, leaving her short of money, and promising to send her a check—which he forgot to do. The rent came due and she telegraphed:

"Dead broke. Landlord insistent. Wire me money."

Her husband answered:

"Am short myself. Will send check in a few days. A thousand kisses."

Exasperated, his wife replied:

"Never mind money. I gave landlord one of the kisses. He was satisfied."—New York Times.

Better Than None

One day, while Willie and Henry were playing in a field they disturbed a bumblebees' nest, and began running with the bees after them.

When they had run for a few yards, Harry breathlessly panted: "Willie, we ought to pray while we are running!"

To which Willie replied: "I know it; but I can't think of but one prayer."

And Willie, thus admonished, called out between gasps: "Oh Lord, for what we are about to receive, make us truly thankful!"—Natural Monthly.

WITNESS HAD NO STANDING

Defendant's Unqualified Condemnation of Man Prepared to Testify Against Him.

A correspondent of the New York Sun recalls the case of the "Rev. James Johnson" of New Jersey, who was indicted years ago as the chief of a band of chicken thieves that had plundered the farmers near New Brunswick. The testimony was something like this:

"Now, Mr. Johnson, these chickens, as evidence shows, were found in your possession. Did you steal them?"

"No, sah. I got 'em from one of mah fr'en's."

"Did you know where he got the chickens?"

"I didn't ask him, sah."

"Did you believe them to be lawfully his to give?"

"I didn't ask no questions, sah, I jus' tuck 'em."

"What did you do with them?"

"I sold 'em to the market man."

"What did you do with the money?"

"I kept some and divided the rest with mah fr'en's."

"Now, Mr. Johnson, be truthful. Did you, or did you not, believe these chickens to be honestly yours?"

"Sure I knowed they wasn't mine. I jes' tuck 'em."

"And you used them to benefit yourself, by passing them on to other people?"

"Yes, sah. They was very good chickens."

"Now, Mr. Johnson, here is a witness who says these chickens belong to him, and proves that they were stolen from his farm, at night, by men in your employ. What have you to say to that?"

Witness (pointing)—Is that the man over there?

"Yes."

"Dunno him at all. He don' belong to our conference! He's an onregenerate sinner, an' he ought to go to hell!"

Dirt Cheap.

The bibliophile was showing his treasures.

"Now, here," he said, holding up a battered volume, "is a first edition of Dante's 'Inferno.' I picked it up at a second-hand bookstore for three-fifty. How's that for a bargain?"

"Great!" replied his cynical friend. "Why, the germs you got with it ought to be worth that much alone."

We Don't Believe It

"So you've moved to the country. How do you like it?"

"Great! Beats a stuffy old flat all hollow. And the best of it is, we get fresh eggs and vegetables almost as cheap as we could get them in the city."

The Difference.

"Times have changed. People used to go to Europe because they wanted to be in the swim."

"Well?"

"Now they stay home because they don't want to be."

Color Scheme

"So the Germans are using green gas."

"Yes, I suppose by way of putting the allies in a blue funk."

COUNSEL AND GUILTY CLIENT

Man's Right Seems to Be Determined by Court and Not by His Lawyer.

Ought an advocate to defend a prisoner whom he believes to be guilty? Mr. Justice Darling, in a recent case in which a solicitor was the plaintiff, made some observations on this familiar problem which ought not to go unrecorded. He protested, says the London Globe, against the notion that a lawyer, whether barrister or solicitor, was under an obligation to cease to conduct a case which he realizes to be bad.

"If an advocate in the course of a trial for murder, comes to recognize that his client is guilty, is he," asked the learned judge, "to say to the court 'Hang my client'?" Judges have seldom asked about the ethics of advocacy in open court. It was, however, in a considered judgment in the court of exchequer that Baron Bramwell made his famous contribution to the discussion.

"A man's rights," said the baron, "are to be determined by the court, not by his advocate or counsel. It is for want of remembering this that foolish people object to lawyers that they will advocate a case against their own opinions. A client is entitled to say to his counsel: 'I want your advocacy, not your judgment. I prefer that of the court.'" Mr. Justice Darling, in the jargon of the courts, concurs.

Laymen have usually been readier than lawyers to discuss the ethics of advocacy. "What do you think of supporting a cause you know to be bad?" Everybody knows Doctor Johnson's reply when Boswell asked him this question: "Sir, you do not know it to be good or bad till the judge determines it."

Less generally known is Sydney Smith's contribution to the discussion: "Justice is found experimentally to be most effectually promoted by the opposite efforts of practiced and ingenious men presenting to the selection of an impartial judge the best arguments for the establishment or explanation of truth. It becomes, then, under such an arrangement, the decided duty of an advocate to use all the arguments in his power to defend the cause he has adopted and to leave the effects of those arguments to the judgment of others." This was said in an assize sermon the famous wit preached at York in 1824, to which—a characteristic touch this!—he gave the disturbing title of "The Lawyer That Tempted Christ."

General Pau's Cap.

A correspondent of the Associated Press tells the following incident of the daily life of General Pau, the commander of the French army in Alsace, who lost an arm during the Franco-Prussian war.

A dozen mud-spattered French infantrymen rested in a drizzling rain under some dripping trees. Suddenly the corporal stood erect and made a hasty salute. Through the fog and rain one of the three great leaders of the French army had appeared.

"Why do you not wear your cap?" asked General Pau.

"I have lost my cap, general."

"Where did you lose it?"

"When we were attacked in the woods this morning. A branch knocked it off, and I was too much in a hurry to go back and get it. It is gone."

"Take my cap."

The corporal hesitated. He feared that he would be punished for losing his cap.

"Take it, I tell you, and wear it," said the general.

And the humble corporal did as he was told, and became resplendent in the cap with the golden oak leaves. Since that day the corporal has marched along the country roads to the frontier, proud in the cap of General Pau.

"The general himself told me to wear it," he says to those who protest. "I obey the general's orders, and the cap stays on my head."

The general knows his soldiers, and the world may understand why the tired, bedraggled and weary army goes on marching, and fighting, and dying for its commanders.—Youth's Companion.

Artful Sergeant.

A good story is told about the smart sergeant of a crack British cavalry regiment. Whenever he had occasion to punish any of his men, he invariably concluded the sentence by exclaiming: "And you are another." Every victim noticed this strange remark, but none could understand the meaning of it, and naturally they were afraid to ask. But one day a newly promoted sergeant determined to solve the mystery. He said to the sergeant:

"Sergeant, there is one thing I should like to ask you. I've often heard you say, after inflicting punishment on a man, 'And you are another.' What do you really mean by that remark?"

"Well," said the sergeant, smiling, "I will tell you. I know that whenever I am obliged to punish an evildoer the victim always says to himself: 'What a stupid ass that sergeant is!' I get even with him by saying, 'And you are another.' Keep it dark."

Errors of Dramatists.

The early English dramatists (before Shakespeare) were led to form an erroneous conception of tragedy. In order to secure for it its due importance and the greatest possible effect they exaggerated the tragic element to such a degree as to make it hideous and horrible, and to accomplish this they had recourse to the most forced situations, to the delineation of coarse outbursts of passion and to a diction which was unnatural, forced and bombastic.

Why Married Men Leave Home.

"John, did you lock the back door?"

"Yes."

"Did you wind the clock?"

"Of course."

"And put the cat out?"

"Sure."

"Did you raise the window?"

"Yes."

"Well, get up and close it."

MANY MEN ACT LIKE THIS

Old Bill Shiftless Has His Counterpart in Many Localities Throughout the Country.

"Old Bill Shiftless dropped into town last Saturday," the Osborne Farmer reports. "Bill went into one of the stores and asked for some crepe tissue paper. His wife had asked him to get some so she could make a few little ornaments to improve the looks of the front room. She wanted two colors and Bill found that he would have to take two rolls, as the merchant would not cut it. They cost 10 cents a roll. Bill refused to take it, saying it was too darn much money to pay for such useless stuff. He then bought a dollar's worth of chewing tobacco and a half dollar's worth of cigars and went out to see what the chances were for chipping in on a consignment of Kansas City jug house booze. Bill wants to go to the San Francisco exposition. His trip to St. Louis did him so much good that he thinks he owes it to his health to take this trip. Mrs. Shiftless would like to go, but Bill says he can't see how she can get away, as there would be no one at home to look after the stock."—Kansas City Star.

Tail Wild, at Least.

A timid little girl stood looking out of the nursery window and called to her mother: "Mother, mother! Here is a wild dog."

Her mother went to the window.

"Oh, no, that dog is not wild; he belongs to the man who works across the street, and is a nice dog," she said.

After a moment's thought the child, unaccustomed to dogs, replied: "Well, his head may not be wild, but his tail is awfully wild."—Woman's Home Companion.

Long on That.

"It says here that the longest sentence in the English language contains 140 words," observed the old fogy.

"That's wrong," replied the grouch. "The longest sentence contains only one word."

"What is that?" asked the old fogy.

"Life," replied the grouch.—Answers.

HOW WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio—"My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side, and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 1568 Constant St., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hanover, Pa.—"I suffered from female trouble and the pains were so bad at times that I could not sit down. The doctor advised a severe operation but my husband got me Lydia E. It Costs No More to Buy Shoes Fitted Right to Your Feet

Your success in life depends largely upon your health and state of mind.

Your health and state of mind depend, more than you realize, perhaps, upon the condition of your feet.

The condition of your feet depends almost entirely upon how your shoes are fitted.

A shoe, to be comfortable, must be proportioned to correspond with the proportions of the foot. Not only must the shoe be of the proper length and width, but it must also be made on a last which conforms to the shape of the foot to which it is fitted.

There was a time when men and women bought their shoes without trying them on, and in some cases this method is still practiced regardless of the fact that it has come dangerously near resulting in a nation of distorted and deformed feet.

The progressive shoe store of today is a place where people can be fitted correctly with shoes that will overcome the ill effects caused by wearing shoes which have not been properly fitted.

Such a store is here for you. We specialize in the proper treatment of worn out feet.

See your shoes and try them on before buying.

Dependable Advice

There are many ways to greatness, but only one to wealth—saving money. All men who have "made good" have saved money. They have advised others to save money.

Men may differ in birth, religion, politics and profession, but all men agree on the duty and the wisdom of saving.

Save where your savings are safe. This bank has more depositors than any other in the State of Ohio. It has unusual policies for protecting its depositors. One dollar opens an account that draws 4% interest.

ADMINISTRATION STRONGLY ENDORSED BY THE VOTERS OF PAINESVILLE

Municipal Ownership of Light and Power Contract Is Assured When Citizens Vote Nearly Three to One in Favor of Bond Issue.

After one of the stiffest campaigns of recent years, in which the partisans of the C. P. & E. used every possible means to discredit the city administration, the voters of the city went to the polls Tuesday and by a vote of 646 to 270 declared that they approved of the administration and its plan to build up the municipal light and power plant.

So many false statements were made by the opposition that the people evidently became suspicious of the whole matter and decided to cast their votes in favor of municipal ownership rather than take a chance with the traction franchise breakers.

The majority of nearly three to one is a splendid endorsement of the administration. Director of Service Martin A. Tuttle, one of the hardest working officials the city has ever had took charge of the fight for the approval of the bond measure and presented the facts to the voters in such a manner that they could not possibly be misunderstood. And now that the people have approved the bonds Server Tuttle will get busy and see that the municipal plant is brought up-to-date and light and power furnished to the people of the city at the lowest possible price, in any quantity desired.

Mayor Declines to Sign

At Monday evening's meeting the plumbing code ordinance was returned unsigned by the Mayor with the statement that "it was too large for the size of the city." Efforts will be made to cut down the size of the ordinance without leaving out any necessary features.

South street is to be paved from Liberty to State street, and the work will be completed during the present season if possible. All but four property owners signed a petition for the improvement. It was originally intended to pave through to Wood street but the west end of the work will not be tried this year.

Walnut street is to be paved from St. Clair to State, and the C. P. & E. will be compelled to construct seven feet of pavement along the street.

Council will hold an adjourned meeting next Monday evening.

New School Building

Fred Bain of Willoughby is inspector for the new Wickliffe school. The work on the building is progressing rapidly and aside from some criticism of the brick work in the early stages, the design and construction of the building is giving general satisfaction.

To Be Married Saturday

Miss Margaret Moore, whose marriage to Mr. Fred Clark will take place Saturday, June 26, at the summer home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Moore, West Mentor, O., has been guest of honor at a number of affairs and will be entertained at an attractive series of luncheons and dinners planned for these days immediately preceding the wedding.

Fertilizer Experience

A. F. Grant, prominent Lake county farmer, has the following to say regarding the difficulties of purchasing fertilizer this year:

"By ordering early I have been enabled to get potash at $60 a ton, which, though more than $20 more than the usual price was, by far, preferable to paying $100 or more a ton, to which price that mineral rose later. I was obliged to buy in the proportion of one part of nitrogen and seven of phosphoric rock to every two of potash in the unmixed chemicals. If a farmer wished to make any increase in the amount of potash he buys he would have to buy more of the other materials, whether he needed them or not. I believe that buying the unmixed chemicals is generally much more satisfactory than buying commercial fertilizer, as it is not only cheaper but the farmer is thereby enabled to suit the amount of each chemical used to the needs of the soil and crop. One year I experimented with two pieces of wheat side by side, applying on one my own mixture and on the other a good grade of commercial fertilizer. The wheat on the first field looked better and yielded better at a cost of about fifteen cents less a ton for fertilizer. Not as much fertilizer is needed for spring sown crops as for fall sown ones."

CHAUTAUQUA OFFICIALS

Some Fine Attractions Booked For Annual Event in July

According to the official program of the Painesville Chautauqua, July 25-July 31, G. C. Detrick is to be superintendent, Dr. C. C. Mitchell of Providence, R. I., morning hour lecturer, and Miss Mary C. Fruin, children's worker.

Mr. Detrick is a well known Ohio school man and during a recent term in the Ohio Legislature was able to embody into a new school code some of the principles which he has gained through many years of practical experience. He is thoroughly familiar with the many angles of Chautauqua work and this city is assured a platform manager who is thoroughly competent and agreeable.

The morning lecturer, Dr. Mitchell is a native of Pennsylvania and was educated in Michigan and Chicago. He has lectured in thirty-four states. If the railroads should carry him by weight they would lose money as the measure of this man is his hat band, not his waist band. He is a scholar, a humorist and a keen student of men and events. It is said that he speaks in a language that the bootblack and the President can appreciate.

Special prominence will be given this season to children's work. Miss Fruin will arrive on the second day of the Chautauqua and her program calls for a series of Indian, Russian, Scandinavian, German, Japanese and English folk tales and dances, as well as daily singing games and games of action. On the fourth or fifth day she will appear before the afternoon audience for a lesson on the art of story-telling.

The 1915 Chautauqua program, with such features as Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, Strickland Gillilan, The Ben Greet Players, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, Packard, the cartoonist, Ferullo's Band, Atty-Gen'l Basker of Missouri, Harry F. Atwood, Chaplain O. L. Kiplinger, Marcus A. Kellerman, dramatic baritone, is worthy of the enthusiastic support which it is sure to receive in Painesville.

PUSH SHIP CANAL PLANS

Signing of Bills by Pennsylvania Governor Gives Impetus to Project

The signing of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal bills by Governor Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania, has given renewed impetus to the canal project, and the indications point to active work being done from now on by civic and other bodies in bringing the matter to a successful end in the not far distant future.

The important thing now to be considered, is the getting before the voters of the several counties the bond-issue question in a convincing, business-like manner. If the bond issue should pass at next fall's election, and Ohio and West Virginia should vote in favor of the canal the year following, the canal could be opened for traffic by 1921, the time set for the completion of the Ohio River Improvements.

"By that time, too, the New York Canal will have been opened, after having more than $175,000,000 worth of improvements put upon it. That canal, which extends from Buffalo to Albany, was begun in 1825 and has been improved, or reconstructed four times. It was originally only 25 feet wide and four feet deep, with a capacity for carrying only 50-ton boats. When its present improvements are completed this canal will be from 180 to 200 feet in width, 12 feet deep and with a capacity for carrying boats of from 3,000 to 4,000 tonnage. Think what New York's canal has done for the Empire State! Before it was opened, Philadelphia had a greater population than New York City. The State of New York was fourth in population. Now it is first, and New York City is the metropolis of the Western Hemisphere.

"The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal can do as much for this section as the New York Canal has done for the Empire State, if not more, for New York State has not the natural resources that Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia have.

Group Plan for Andrews

A group of stately buildings will crown the hill across the river from Willoughby on the Andrews estate, if the group plan now being considered by members of the Andrews institute board of trustees is finally carried out. The plan of grouping the buildings after the manner of several of the country's largest seminaries was discussed at length at the adjourned meeting of the board Tuesday evening and the committee, consisting of Representative H. I. Emerson, Mayor W. J. Carmichael and S. S. Wilson, was discharged after it had submitted a favorable report on the proposition. No action was taken, however, except to go into the matter further at another adjourned meeting to be held June 25.—The Willoughby Delta.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the Masonic Lodge, also the Christian Church and all friends and relatives for the deep sympathy, kindness and beautiful floral offerings in our recent bereavement in the loss of our uncle, Robert Filmer.

Mr. and Mrs. David Quincy.

The fellow who was going to convert the McMillan flats into a golf links seems to have fozzled his approach, as they say up at Willoughby.

There is some talk of a new Nickel Plate depot for Painesville. There has certainly been talk enough about the old one.

THE UP-TO-DATE STORE NOW HAS A HOME OF ITS OWN

Company Purchases Big Three-Story Block on Main Street and Will Make Many Changes and Improvements to Provide for an Increasing Trade.

One of the important real estate deals of the year was the purchase of the Curtiss block on Main street by the Up-to-Date Department Store Co., which occurred last week, almost on the anniversary of the twelfth anniversary of the company.

The Up-to-Date Co. has hundreds of friends scattered all over this and adjoining counties who will rejoice in the success of this, their favorite Painesville store. Starting in a small way a dozen years ago the company has grown by leaps and bounds until it has become one of the leading mercantile enterprises of this section of the state. The late R. Rottenburg was one of the organizers of the company but since his death the business has been carried on very successfully by A. Abramson who has been ably assisted by his sons, Ralph and Arlie.

Now that the company has secured a permanent home it is expected that extensive repairs will be made on the building, making it in fact an up-to-date store.

Reading for Prisoners

In a letter to the newspapers of the state the chaplain of the Ohio penitentiary makes the following appeal:

If I may again utilize your columns I would once more appeal to your readers in behalf of the library of the Ohio penitentiary. During the past eighteen months the people of the state have made many donations of magazines and illustrated papers which have gone a long way in keeping our growing population informed as to the important current events.

It is the policy pursued here to occupy the minds of men and women, during leisure hours, with healthy, interesting, instructive reading matter and thanks to the thoughtfulness and generosity of our citizens, this has been largely accomplished.

We do not wish to take any backward steps in this matter, for education and advancement along all desirable lines move in unison with the indeterminate sentence law.

Men have now, if never before, the opportunity for self-culture and it is desired to assist in every way possible to this end.

Every good citizen would disclaim a lack of interest in these matters, and so it is that to all our state's people I again appeal for donations of discorded magazines and books.

We can read what you read and I will pay freight charges on what you see fit to send us.

T. O. REED,
Chaplain.

Ohio State Penitentiary, Columbus, O., June 18.

"See America" First

The second season of triangle tours aboard the steamer Majestic of the Northern Navigation Company's fleet promises to afford pleasure for thousands of Americans and Canadians residing in the middle west if inquiries received by the officials of the steamship company are a criterion. Many reservations already have been made for the weekly voyages from Cleveland and Detroit to Mackinac Island and Sault Ste Marie and through the Thirty Thousand Islands and the Georgian Bay district.

The Majestic will leave Cleveland every Saturday at 8 P. M. and Detroit every Sunday at 11 A. M. throughout the summer beginning June 27 and continuing through the week of August 28.

The Majestic is admirably suited to this cruise, being comfortable, modern, staunch and well equipped. There are comfortable, ventilated berths in outside staterooms, and the dining service equals that of the best metropolitan hotels.

Misther Finnigin

The "Hoo's Hoo Today" department which appears in many of the big dailies, recently contained the following happy tribute to Strickland Gillilan, the "fun man," who is to be in Painesville, July 31:

"Who piped a careless bit of rhyme, nor thought again of same, until one morning he awoke inside the Hall of Fame? Who told a tale of choo-choo that got off and on again—and has not had to fret about his three square meals since then? Who sang anent a lowly kink who penned a message—Bing!—that put the spots—for punch—upon that veni-vidi thing? Who's shown since then among the gents "we have with us this eve," and tickled—at so much per tick—a world that's wont to grieve? Who thanks the day he mixed the verse on Misther Finnigin that landed him on Easy Street? That Strickland Gillilan.

Willing to Work Cheap!

James Ward, farmer, who lives near Warren, O., was presented the other day by a farm hand, who had worked for him a year, with a list of things the farm hand thought the boss should put up for him to retain his services for another year. Here they are: House, rent free; garden for truck; eight loads of manure; six hundred eggs to set; half of young chickens raised; half of eggs produced; half of milk from eight good cows; half of butter from eight good cows; 100 pounds of flour per month; twenty bushels of apples; forty-eight gallons of cider; apples for apple-butter; seven tons of coal, three of this fall's pigs or four spring pigs to be fed and fattened free; one-third of the calves when old enough to veal and twenty dollars a month salary. That's all.

Lake Currents Amaze

Vesselmen wondered at the whims of Lake Erie's currents after the body of James McGarvey, 33, 1432 E. 66th-st, had been found one mile off shore near Willoughby late Tuesday afternoon.

McGarvey's body was found not far from the spot where he is believed to have drowned when his rowboat capsized during a storm June 13. The body of Fred Schneider, 10728 Morison-av N. E., drowned in the same accident, was carried eastward ten miles and was recovered Monday off the Cleveland harbor entrance.

The two men, plumbers, had set out to fish shortly before the storm broke.

Father's Day

In Japan they observe a Boy's day by hanging out carp flags and giving the little fellows plenty of toy soldiers; also a Girl's day when each little miss is presented with a Japanese doll. Here in America we have a Mother's day. Cartoonists draw sentimental cartoons about her; the preacher makes some mention of home without a mother, and the tired business man, if he thinks of it, brings home a dollar's worth of cut flowers. Without wishing unnecessarily to add to our list of holidays, we suggest a Father's day, with a program somewhat as follows: Dad will be allowed to lie abed until 10 o'clock, reading the sporting sheet and smoking cigarettes, after which time a "mawnin's mawnin" followed by buckwheats and steak will be served. The phonograph will then play "What's the Matter With Father" and "Here Comes My Daddy Now," while the daughter of the house will recite "Father, dear Father." This ceremony concluded, presents will be bestowed on father, in the following order: Ten boxes 25 cent cigars, case of club soda, sterling silver bottle opener, case of Scotch or rye, sterling silver cocktail mixer, 1 dozen pairs of silk hose, 1 smoking jacket, 1 humidor, ½ dozen made-to-order shirts, 1 pair slippers, annual pass to baseball park. At 2 p. m. accompanied by several cronies, he will set out for the ball park in an automobile. Here a double-header will be played. The evening will be given over to five cent ante, and at midnight a lunch will be served consisting of Swiss cheese sandwiches, hot dogs, goose-liver sausages, pate de foie gras, rye bread and beer. The guests will leave at 3 a. m., and the day following will be Sunday.

Loomis—McCarthy

Miss Catherine Maud Loomis and William McCarthy, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Gallena at St. Mary's parsonage, Saturday evening, at 7 o'clock, June 19. Miss Loomis was attended by her sister, Miss Blanche Loomis, while David McCarthy, a cousin of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony the bridal party were driven to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Norman J. Loomis, 315 Book street, where dainty refreshments were served to the immediate family of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy left later for an extended auto trip.

Landphair Reunion

The second annual reunion of the H. D. Landphair family was held at Mentor township park, Monday, June 21, 1915. The day was perfect and the attendance was truly remarkable, there being every one of the sons and daughters present, together with all the grandchildren and great-grandchildren save one. A beautiful dinner was served in the grove, after which a business session was held at which F. H. Landphair was re-elected president and Lida Leonard retained as secretary and treasurer. A delightful program was then enjoyed by all and sports and visiting ended a happy day. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Landphair, Mrs. Holcomb, Mrs. Lora Bird and son, Mrs. Ethel Lorenz, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. H. Newell Landphair, La Crosse, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Landphair, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. MERCHANTS OF CITY ENDORSE THE HERALD'S CAMPAIGN

The Herald's campaign against the mail-order evil will start next week and continue for at least three months. Each week strong arguments will be published clearly showing the fallacy of mail-order buying and how money can be saved by trading with the merchants of our home city—men whom you know, men who pay taxes to support the town and contribute liberally to all good works; men who have invested thousands of dollars in merchandise in order that they may fill your orders and men that will give you your money's worth or your money back.

Merchants of Painesville are more than pleased with the plans outlined for the Herald's campaign and advertisements of all the leading firms in the city will be found next week under the heading "Buy In Painesville." Consult these ads next week and every week thereafter, as they will be changed regularly, and learn how and where to obtain bargains right at home.

Quality is remembered long after the price is forgotten and you will have no regrets after spending your dollar with the Painesville merchant instead of kissing it goodbye forever and sending it to Chicago, New York or some other city.

NEW PEACE MOVE IN U.S. LAUNCHED

Aims to Promote League of Nations With View to Preventing Wars.

ORGANIZATION FORMED IN PHILADELPHIA

Former President Taft Is Elected Permanent Chairman—Ex-Ambassador Herrick and Mayor Baker of Cleveland Also Honored

Philadelphia, Pa.—In historic Independence hall June 17—the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill—there was formed an organization whose object it will be to promote the creation of a league of nations with a view to preventing wars or, at least, to lessen the possibilities of armed conflicts. The name adopted by the organization after some debate was "League to Enforce Peace, American branch."

Taft Heads Organization.

Former President Taft who presided over the conference for a part of the time was elected permanent president and, in addition, a long list of representative American citizens were named as permanent vice presidents. A permanent executive committee was selected with instructions to take all measures necessary to promote the objects of the league.

Myron T. Herrick was chosen one of the permanent vice presidents and Mayor Baker of Cleveland was named to a place on the resolutions committee.

In moving the adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions which embodied the objects of the league, the former president of the United States expressed the hope "that out of this historic building may come a message that shall again help the world."

The conference was not an assemblage of what one participant termed "pure peace" men but a gathering of those who for the most part believed in trying to bring about peace even though they had to use force to do it.

Resolutions Are Adopted.

The resolutions declared it the sense of the meeting that it would be desirable for the United States to join a league of nations binding the signatories to the following...

German Air Scouts Report Russians Have Fallen Back On Last Line of Defenses Protecting Capital.

London, England.—While Austro-German advices Monday continued to claim successes in the fighting around Lemberg, advices from Petrograd seemed to indicate that Petrograd was preparing the public mind for an announcement of a Russian evacuation of the Galician capital.

A Petrograd dispatch said the Austro-German attempt to force a way through the Russian lines north and south of Grodek, in the battle for Lemberg, apparently has not yet been successful, but regarding the approaching crisis the Bourse Gazette of Petrograd said: "If in view of the continued German reinforcements in Galicia the situation forces us to choose between retaining Lemberg and preserving the freedom of our operations, it is possible we shall have to make a sentimental sacrifice and abandon the Galician capital."

A further success in the Austro-German drive was announced by the Berlin war office, which declared that the town of Rawa Ruska, 32 miles northwest of Lemberg, had been captured from the Russians. German air scouts report that the Russians have now fallen back on their last line of defenses protecting Lemberg, which is nine miles west of the city.

Emperor William, it was also announced by the German war department, was present at the battle of Beskid for possession of the Grodek line. These Russian positions are west of Lemberg, the Galician capital.

Further successes in northwestern France, to the north of Arras, as well as in Lorraine and in the Vosges, were reported Monday by the French war office. In Lorraine the capture of the German first line positions for a distance of nearly a mile is claimed. The fighting here was of unusual violence and it is said the German trenches were filled with dead.

Regarding the Austro-Italian campaign a dispatch from Udine says that after the severe storms of Saturday and Sunday the general attack on the Austrian positions...

SPOUSE OF ILLINOIS PEN WARDEN SLAIN

Woman's Body Found in Bedroom On Third Floor of Administration Building.

COVERED WITH ALCOHOL AND IGNITED

Crime Is Committed Within Remarkably Short Space of Time—Negro Trusty Held as Suspect, but He Declares His Innocence.

Joliet, Ill.—Mrs. Edmund M. Allen, wife of the warden, was murdered in her bedroom on the third floor of the administration building of the state penitentiary in the morning. It is believed that an attempt was made to attack Mrs. Allen before she was struck down. Then, when she was either dead or unconscious, her body was placed on the bed, a quantity of wood alcohol poured over it and the bed clothing ignited.

The crime was accomplished within a remarkably short space of time, as the electric buzzer by which Mrs. Allen made her calls for the convict who acted as house servant in the warden's private quarters had sounded but a few minutes before two other convicts, who had not been able to find the houseman, made their way to the third floor of the building to answer the call and found smoke emptying into the hall and the room aflame.

Victim Presses Call Button.

Mrs. Allen was a young and very handsome woman in robust health, but evidently was cowed into a state bordering upon helplessness when she divined the purpose of the convict who entered her bedroom. Her first impulse was to press the button at the side of her bed and summon a "trusty" to her aid. The buzzer sounded sharp calls in rapid succession and then was quiet. It is possible that her hand was at the button when she was attacked.

The murder of Mrs. Allen is a crime without parallel in this state and has elements of mystery of a new and baffling nature to criminologists. The man who slew Mrs. Allen, who was the only woman in that part of the prison structure known as the "men's quarters," was an inmate of the institution...

Ninety-nine of 104 Prisoners Sent to Hospital Addicted to Tobacco Habit.

RECORD OF ONE MONTH IS SET FORTH

Of Those Men Sent Up for 'Repairs' Only 83 Had Been Victims of Strong Drink, While 'Dope' Users Showed Small Percentage

Special Columbus Correspondent

THE festive cigaret, which has had to battle for its existence every time a legislature has met in Ohio during the last quarter of a century promises to have company for consolation if the new Ohio penitentiary records are to be credited. The latest figures tend to "show up" tobacco as a whole. For during the last month were not 99 of the 104 prisoners received at the prison hospital addicted to the tobacco habit? Yes, verily. In other words, all but five of the men sent up for "repairs" during the last 30 days were users of tobacco in some form. Not even the alleged evil of liquor seemed to have the direct bearing on prisoners as tobacco, for of the same 104 prisoners that found their way to the hospital only 83 had been addicted to the habit of strong drink. And the evil of harmful drugs showed itself to be particularly angelic, for in only one instance out of the 104 did "dope" reveal itself. Of course, the argument is that more men use tobacco than liquor and that more, far more use both than habit forming drugs, but the figures at first flush are nothing short of alarming. And the proponents of tobacco get around the whole case by saying that since cigarets are classed as tobacco there is no telling how many of the 99 that used tobacco used it in the form of "pills." Anyway, be all that as it may, the pen hospital figures on the whole show a rather healthful condition of affairs within the prison. For even though many of the prisoners when they are received are in a much weakened physical condition the average number of deaths annually out of approximately 1,600 men has been less than 10. Rigid health precautions...

Won't Be 'Militant.'

Is the new Ohio branch of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage going to be "militant?" The answer was sought of Miss Mabel Vernon of Wilmington, Del., who has issued the call for the organization of the Ohio body in Columbus next Friday. It was a short and decisive "No!" "We are not here to make war on anybody," Miss Vernon said. "We are here in the most peaceful state of mind. Our sole purpose is to get more co-operation in Ohio for the work of the Congressional Union, and the purpose of the Union is to get congress to adopt the Susan B. Anthony amendment for nation-wide woman suffrage." Many reports of the work of the members of the Congressional Union had been misrepresentations, Miss Vernon said. They had not "heckled" anybody. They had not been overpersistent with the members of congress or the members of the cabinet or with the president. "We already have branches in about 10 states," the representative of the Congressional Union continued. "We have come to Ohio to aid in the suffrage work already going on. First, we are going to see all the members of congress here who voted with us last January, and we are going to thank them and ask them to be with us again. Then we are going to see the others, the ones who didn't vote for us and the new ones and ask for their support. We will not 'heckle' them in the slightest degree. We will not even ask them to say 'yes' or 'no' to us until the time comes to vote in congress. Surely that will not be troubling them. And it is all we are going to do."

Industrial Commission Reports

There is a net surplus of $284,206.06 in the funds of the industrial commission of Ohio, after all regular and special deductions have been made, according to the figures in the report just made public. The surplus sum is left after all regular charges for claims pending are made, and after the special catastrophe fund had been deducted and set aside to cover disaster claims. The helpful co-operation of employers in the prevention of accidents is commended. There are assets of $6,313,919.34 in the compensation fund, excluding the fund for the protection of public employes. Premiums received amount to $4,802,592.78; premiums in course of collections are $386,521.32. Interest...

WORKMAN LOSES FIGHT

Important Decision Expected to Save Workman's Law—Would Have Broken Down to Cover

Western Newspaper Union News Service

Columbus, O.—With all justices but one—Judge R. M. Wanamaker—concurring, the Ohio Supreme Court has decided that occupational diseases are not within the scope of the elective workmen's compensation law of 1911. As the elective act of 1911 is, in respect to the classification of those who are to be received for "injury received in the course of employment," identical with the present compulsory act which became effective January 1, 1914, the dispute finally is settled. The decree of the Court of last resort overturned the judgments of the Hamilton County Court of Appeals and Common Pleas Court, which awarded to David Brown, a Cincinnati workman, a judgment for $85.25 for injury received while at work. His complaint, contracted during his employment, was "lead colic." The decision of the Court is to be reported, but the opinion has not been written.

VALUATION IS INCREASED

Ohio Electrics Are Increased Over $1,000,000 On Valuation.

Columbus, O.—An increase of about one and one-third million dollars has been made in the taxable value of the Ohio Electric Railway properties, according to unofficial figures. The figures have not yet been made public by the State Tax Commission. Last year the property was valued for taxes at $13,003,440. The company made a strenuous fight last year to have that value reduced, but was unable to secure it. The value of the Union Gas and Electric properties of Cincinnati has not yet been fixed. Officials of that company were before the Tax Commission protesting against the tentative figures that have been made. The value of the property has not been made public. Officials of the Cincinnati, Covington and Newport Railway Co. were here trying to explain some items in the valuation of their company and secure a reduction of the tentative figures. The Cincinnati, Milford and Lebanon Railway value has been fixed at $406,030, the same as last year, and there was no increase made in the value of the Cincinnati, Georgetown and Portsmouth from last year, when the value was $669,805. The Scioto Valley Traction Co., with headquarters in Columbus, was fixed at $1,777,270, the same as last year. The Ashtabula Waterworks Co. was fixed at $468,480. The Northeastern Ohio Gas Co. had its value fixed this year at $405,000, which is a raise of only $5,000 from last year.

$50,000 FIRE IN MIDDLETOWN.

Middletown, O.—Fire broke out in the new warehouse of the Warlow Thomas Paper Co. The loss is estimated at $50,000, of which $12,000 is on the building. The warehouse was erected two years ago and was filled with stock consisting of paper, ropes, bagging and other supplies, and owing to the headway that was gained by the fire before the department arrived is a total loss.

UNIVERSALISTS ELECT OFFICERS

Marion, O.—The State Woman's Missionary Alliance of the Ohio Universalist church elected Mrs. Flora B. Corning, Cleveland, president; Mrs. F. B. Bishop, Columbus, vice president; Mrs. Sarah L. A WORLD IN PAWN

Will Europe ever pay its war debt? The aggregate debts of the Powers a year ago were about $18,000,000,000. By the end of this year they will aggregate about $75,000,000,000. So quickly does a war of this sort put the world in pawn. In fact, should the conflict continue two or three years the annual interest on national debts would amount to as much as the debts themselves amounted to before the war. And even then the burden was so great that society had become intolerant of it.

A sort of confiscation, instead of direct repudiation, might be accomplished by a graduated income tax, although many of the national bonds are guaranteed against taxes of any kind. It is reasonably certain that the principles of democracy will receive a great impetus if Germany is defeated, and repudiation might not be unpopular to an electorate. A yoke may, in time, become too burdensome for a people to carry.

A world in pawn! Who will take it out? Or will it remain in pawn for generation after generation, until debt and evidences of debt, wealth and poverty, our whole economic system and our civilization have been thrown into the discard?

THE LARGEST BATTLESHIP.

The statement that the Arizona launched at Brooklyn yesterday, the largest battleship built or projected so far as known, is the thirty-ninth built for the United States since the beginning of the battleship program in 1890, is correct but misleading. We do not have 39 effective modern battleships. Of these 39, six, the Indiana, Massachusetts, Oregon, Iowa, Kearsarge and Kentucky have passed or are approaching the age limit, 20 years. Two others, the Mississippi and Idaho, were recently sold to Greece. According to the Navy Year Book, the official publication of the Naval Intelligence Office at Washington, we have eight dreadnoughts built and four building, not including two to replace the Idaho and Mississippi, and 22 pre-dreadnoughts. This is contrasted with Britain's 20 built dreadnoughts and 16 building, Germany's 13 built and seven building, France four built and eight building, Japan two built and four building, and with Britain's 40 pre-dreadnoughts, Germany's 20, France's 18, and Japan's 13. To these must be added Britain's ten battle cruisers, Germany's eight and Japan's four, while neither France nor the United States have any.

The United States is now ten battleships behind the program advocated by the Navy General Board in 1903, which figured on a maximum of 48 battleships for this country by 1919, to be obtained by a program of two new vessels each year and a third every three years to replace the obsolete. With the demonstration that dreadnoughts can be built here within 15 months instead of double that time formerly required, Congress will probably take steps at the coming session to regain lost ground.

THE POWDER PUFF

Verily the days of our most sacred institutions are numbered. All flesh is as grass, with the lawn mower coming over the hill. The latest cry is "Down with the powder puff!" Think of it, girls! You whose shiny noses, under the protection of the powder puff, have been turned up in derision at wind and sun. You who have made surreptitious journeys under the automobile lap-robe or the overhanging table-cloth to the place of mystery where reposed the little first-aid to beauty. You who cling with a drowning grip to the little wad of down and powder with which you daintily cover your freckles and deny Time's determined efforts. What will you do when the dread law-maker takes away your powder puff, and forces you to appear unpowdered and unprotected before a gasping and unfeeling public? But, perhaps, it won't go that far! Braver men than mere law-makers have quailed before your powder and puff ball. The health commissioners, so far, are but demanding that you stick to your own puff, on the ground that "Neither borrower nor lender be, for loan oft loses both powder puff and your good complexion." But beware! The ... [illegible]

VICTORY FOR BIG BUSINESS

The lower court's decision in favor of the United States steel corporation, in the dissolution suit under the anti-trust law, may be somewhat staggering but it is not final. The government may carry the case to the United States supreme court on appeal. Yet the decision, being the unanimous opinion of four judges, is a victory for big business and it will hearten big business to an extraordinary degree. The feeling will be very strong that if the able government counsel could not divide the judges of the lower court, they will be unable to secure even a 5-to-4 decision in favor of the government in the supreme court. Whatever the outcome may be, recent court decisions in other cases, such as that in the suit against the United shoe machinery company, have been so strongly on the side of the large corporations that the impression must now become widely prevalent that the "harassment of business" is virtually ended.

VACATION TYPHOID

It will not be long, now, before "vacation typhoid" will have a familiar and ominous sound. Summer outings even if they have no more duration than a day, sometimes bring sequence of suffering merely because proper caution is not taken as to the water that is drunk.

There is no need to go into explanations on this point. Everybody knows now that the bacilli of typhoid fever often lurk in the clear and sparkling water of farmyard wells and wayside springs and streams. And many a man and many a woman, for disregarding this well known fact, has paid dearly for a few hours away from the city in the open.

No way has yet been adopted to prevent the pollution of springs, wells and streams in the country, the people upon whose land they are being convinced that they are pure and suffering no ill effects from their use because they have become indurated to the germs in them. About all that can be done at present to protect people from the city whose digestive organs have not adapted themselves to the fighting of the bacilli in impure water, is to warn them.

A good suggestion is made in this connection by the Pennsylvania state commissioner of health. He advises automobilists, even if they are only on a day's trip, to carry a supply of pure water with them.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy

This is a remedy that every family should be provided with, and especially during the summer months. Think of the pain and suffering that must be endured when medicine must be sent for or before relief can be obtained. This remedy is thoroughly reliable. Ask anyone who has used it. Obtainable everywhere.

Uncle Sam and Wilson

(Edmund Vance Cooke in the Philadelphia Record.)

Yes, sir, I was "all het up" and pretty near to boilin';
Seemed as if some thoughts inside of me were close to spoilin';
They were bad and they were bitter,
and if I had spoken hasty,
I might have mentioned something which was rather tart than tasty.
There I was a-chewin' papper-grass and chile sauce and mustard
And wishin' I could catch some cuss and beat him to a custard.
And then I looked at Wilson and—he wasn't even flustered.
Yes, sir, there was Woodrow Wilson
going steady as a clock,
With an eye as soft as Heaven and a chin like Plymouth Rock,
With a calmness all commendable,
And sanity unendable.
So says I, "Well, I'm for Wilson.
Woodrow Wilson the Dependable!"
I don't like women being killed and babies fed to fishes.
It makes me feel like callin' names and smashin' all the dishes.
And with all the world gone loony
and a-cuttin' crazy capers,
The Ten Commandments gone to pot,
among the scraps of papers,
I felt like cuttin' loose myself. Yes,
sir, I most was ready
To jump into the whirlpool and to flounder in the eddy,
But there was Wilson speakin'—and his voice was calm and steady.
Yes, sir, there was Woodrow Wilson,
sitting tight and looking solemn,
As clear-eyed as a prophet and as clean-cut as a column.
Woodrow Wilson, the dependable;
The candid and commendable.
Yes, sir; to-day I'd almost say, he's Wilson the God-sendable!

Bilious Attacks

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter. Obtainable everywhere.

CHAPTER XV.

A Mother Interposes.

Long past midnight the interpreter of Fredericksburg, Virginia, was in his bedroom, Colonel Lydia, who had fallen asleep, awoke with a start and put back quickly to the door. Some imagination broke out all over her body. She was born back into the room.

"What?" three charging said when she reached the door, "Is anyone there?"

"Hush!" her mother was another. Mrs. Demand stared in amazement at the girl's figure.

"What is it, mother? Tell me what has happened? Is he—"

"Hush! I have to speak to you. He is in his room. I—I—" His voice sounds very queer.

"The girl opened out of bed and held to the telephone.

"Don't go away, mother—stay here—she cried as she sped past the white ghost figure in the doorway. Mrs. Demand fastened herself against the wall as the girl sped by, and then, turning in alarm, she saw her mother pass faced in the daughter's room.

"Mrs. Fredericksburg!—he is—Lydia. What is it, dear?" Her voice was high and shrill.

The voice seems joining over the girl's shoulder, and Lydia saw that she were in anticipation of the blows her body held.

"I'm going to church now," he said, saying, "but I feel bad to call you goodbye." The words were disjointed, as he forced them from his lips one word at a time, as if each effort at utterance was a struggle.

"Yes, you—it's all right. I don't—I feel bad. I'm sick and I'm tired."

"I want you to release me from my promise."

"Yes mama—the promise—I'm. Fredericksburg—I'm sick—I'm tired—I'm well. Be your—no matter what happened, no matter—"

"Oh, Lydia!—oh—he's dead! it's the other—the promise to say nothing for my sake—"

"Dead!" she sighed weakly, a cart of relief. "Dead—he's dead—he's gone—he has left me! Impossible for me to go on without—"

"What are you, Fredericksburg?" asked, in sudden alarm.

"Oh, I'm—I'm—I'm—I shan't go home, you may be sure of that. Tomorrow I'll—I'll—I'll—"

"Where are you? Speak, Lydia—"

How can I speak you to Hampton—" Her voice was sinking down. He put his ear to that, that's all. It might as well be handed over to me. The boy's dead. Your father is certain. Now, don't look at me, mother, don't look at me. Fredericksburg, I've—I've had enough from this! I can't stick to my promise much underneath—I can't stand it! I'm tired you and bored your dear mother—I'm tired of our entire life, you know, your mother I'm sorry. Good-bye, mother—"

"Fredericksburg, I'm—I'm—you mean what still I—Lo?" He had hung up the phone. The hours the wife of his years wire.

There was little comfort for her in the news held out to her mother. Mrs. Demand was not long in the discovered the possibilities of the day near at hand. She could see nothing but disaster, and she could think of nothing but her own inescapable wisdom in withholding from the economical that which were made its present affliction. Her husband was in bed, sick at the situation, however, prepared strike a calmer attitude for Frederick. Her son had kept over his grievance which, after all, she argued, was doubtless less exaggerated than provided for or with Lydia to see James Brand in the circumstances. Her son was a man, and he was not the man to lay down his money, no matter what transpired. The girl, at that instant as going over to see him that night, notwithstanding the hour, and was discussed only after the most earnest opposition.

It was four o'clock before they went back to bed and long after five before they could sleep.

Mrs. Demand, Colonel Lydia's mother, was the first to awake. She glanced at the clock on her dressing table and gave a great start of consternation. It was long past nine o'clock. While she was dressing, the little maid knocked at the door and announced breakfast. Mrs. Demand, in her anxiety, ordered the maid to bring her breakfast to her room. She was in no condition to face the family at breakfast. Her mind was in a state of stress, bewildered, and she was consumed with a mystery.

Feeling that she might be too late, she rushed to and rattled the door knob of Brandt when she entered the hall. She was surprised to find it locked, and she knocked with a trembling hand. Her son was in the habit of leaving the house precisely at eight every morning, and with one accord proceeded to drive Colonel Lydia's mind, resulting in one voice their intentions to the other, and they have been locked ever since.

"It's dear of you," she said, but she was not thinking of the bread a peer. Why not come over to my room and have breakfast with me?"

Mrs. Demand's voice interrupted her thoughts. "Lydia, I'm—I'm—I'm—"

"Hush! I have to speak to you. He is in his room. I—I—" His voice sounds very queer.

"The girl opened out of bed and held to the telephone.

Stopping abruptly in front of the other woman, she exclaimed: "Mrs. Demand, I'm—I'm—I'm—

"Yellow Tickets"
Mean Markdowns at Grant's

A new policy has been adopted which will mean the ultimate abolishment of the periodical clearance sale.

Here's the idea.

Instead of offering markdowns only at certain times, as is the case wherever the clearing sale method is used, we will have attractive markdowns here for you at all times.

Whether you come in today, next week or a year from next week, it will stand you in hand to look for the "YELLOW TICKETS," for wherever you find a "YELLOW TICKET" you will find a mark-down. Something that is a special value at the price.

The fact that we have had no sales since our February sale of white goods has left almost every department in an unusually heavy condition. We're glad of it, because it will give you such a splendid opportunity to find out what the "YELLOW TICKET" means. BUT—we firmly believe that the "YELLOW TICKET" is going to lighten these stocks and keep them light by being constantly "on the job."

So—come in and get acquainted with the "YELLOW TICKET" as soon as possible. It's an acquaintance you'll like to cultivate.

"The Star Spangled Banner."

"The Star Spangled Banner" will be sung all over the United States at noon on the 4th of July, according to plans of the committee which is arranging for a national celebration of Independence Day in Philadelphia. Governors of all states, and mayors of cities throughout the country have been requested to issue proclamations asking the people to join in the observance of this feature.

Oh say can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming!
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.
Oh! say does that star spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On the shore dimly seen thro' the mist of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected, now shines on the stream
'Tis the star spangled banner, O long may it wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Oh! thus be it ever when free-men shall stand,
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation,
Blest with victory and peace may the heaven rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation!
Then conquer we must when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto "In God is our Trust."
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

JUNIOR CONTESTS
Favored by Governor Willis at Piqua

Governor Willis was principal speaker at the Corn Boy's Reunion, Piqua, Ohio, Saturday, June 12. Addressing a large crowd he came out strongly in favor of the Junior Contest work as promoted by the Agricultural Commission. He declared that any rumors to the effect that he was opposed to this work were absolutely false. That he favored and encouraged some before he was Governor and that he still urged and encouraged them. When he was Congressman he had himself offered and paid the expense of the boy who had grown the most corn on one acre in his district. Governor Willis took active part in the state spelling contest which was one of a series of contests for Ohio boys and girls this year. The Governor urged boys to get into the game and try to win a victory at some game worth while.

PAINESVILLE MEN KILLED?
Thought That Three Brothers Lost Lives When Torpedo Sank Liner Armenian

It is believed that three Painesville men, Arthur, Sylvester and Samuel Millwood, were on board the liner Armenian which was sunk by a German torpedo Monday night.

The three are sons of Mrs. James Allen of 207 Latimore street, Painesville. They left here in April for Richmond and the last letter received was dated June 10 and stated that they would sail from Newport News with a cargo of horses for the British government.

The Armenian sailed from Newport News and carried a cargo of horses and mules.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TO THE HOMES OF LAKE COUNTY

"Go out and get some Herald subscriptions," remarked the boss and we went. It isn't a good plan to stand around and argue in a case like that and besides, in our mind's eye we could see the green woods, the babbling brooks, the fruit-laden cherry trees and the wild strawberries along the roadside, and all at once the office seemed close and stuffy.

Getting out the little Buick which, by the way, has been christened "Theodore" because it is such a rough rider, we gave the "self-commencer" a few twists, loaded in the best long-winded salesmen in the office, and started over the hills and far away.

They say that it takes all kinds of people to make a world and we found most of them. There was one dear old soul who didn't want to take the paper "because her neighbors told her all the news," and a man who admitted that the only thing he ever read was novels. There was the farmer who wanted us to come back some rainy day and talk it over and the woman who didn't dare spend ten cents without her husband's permission. They were those who closed the door in our faces and those who pretended they were not at home; but the large majority received the representative courteously, listened to his story, and either handed over the dollar for a year's subscription or promised to do so in the full when the crops were sold.

And, speaking of crops, things certainly look fine in the country. [...] asked, "Say, where can I find the lady of the house?" "Guess I'm the one you are looking for," replied the weeder as she made frantic efforts to make a straw hat and a pocket handkerchief hide about thirty inches of overalls. The salesman was too rattled to more than hand her a sample copy of the paper and bid her good-day.

On the next road we found a man busy in his peach orchard and stopped to admire the straight rows of low-headed trees. No disease, no winter killing here and a big crop of peaches is expected. We skipped the next place as there was a large, open-faced bull dog on guard.

Skimming along the country roads one could not help but notice the difference in the appearance of the homes. Some with their close-cropped lawns, flower beds and general air of prosperity while many looked like the breaking up of a hard winter. At one neglected looking place we stopped to give the machine a drink and found a lady over eighty working at the weeds in a small garden. Bent with age, her face careworn and wrinkled, she toiled away. She spoke kindly of the children who had grown up, married and left the old home nest, leaving her alone and nearly helpless with nothing to cheer her but memories of the past. She would have liked the paper, but a dollar! Why, a dollar meant all she would spend for groceries in a month.

On the Lake road we noticed the [...]

CONCEDES POINTS TO U. S. SHIPPERS

Britain's Memorandum On Its Orders In Council Is Given Out in Washington.

DECLARES NO UNDUE INTERFERENCE

Refuses to Deal With Individual Shipments and States All Future Cases Must Be Handled by English Prize Courts.

Washington, D. C.—Great Britain, in a memorandum on its orders in council, transmitted to the United States and made public here and in London Thursday, asserts American citizens have no just ground for complaint on account of the treatment accorded their cargoes, but nevertheless makes certain concessions to American shippers.

To Minimize Inconvenience.

The memorandum recites at length its efforts to minimize inconvenience to neutral commerce resulting from the order in council against trade with Germany, Austria and Turkey, but makes no attempt to answer the principles asserted in the American note of March 1 protesting against the order in council and insisting upon the right of neutrals to carry on legitimate commerce with each other and to trade in non-contraband with civilians in belligerent countries.

A flat refusal is made to deal with individual shipments, and the memorandum states all future cases in dispute must be handled by the British prize courts.

Another Note to England.

Another note to Great Britain is in course of preparation at the state department and is expected to be dispatched as soon as the negotiations with Germany over submarine warfare have been cleared up. While this communication probably will make reference to the latest British memorandum, it is understood that the manner of enforcing the order in council will not be treated as relevant to the question at issue, whether there is any warrant in international law for the powers that Great Britain and her allies have assumed to exercise over the commerce of the world.

The most important concession made to American shippers reads:

"In deference to the renewed representations of the United States ambassador his majesty's government have given further directions that in all such cases as may have been specially submitted through the British embassy at Washington or to his majesty's government direct on or before the 15th of June and passed, the goods shall be allowed to proceed without interference if shipped from a neutral port on the conditions already laid down, notwithstanding the fact that shipment may not have been made before the 15th of June.

Special Consideration.

"His majesty's government will also be prepared hereafter to give special consideration to cases presented to them and involving particular hardships if the goods concerned are required for neutral governments or municipalities or in respect of works of public utility and where payment can be shown to have been made before the 1st of March, 1915."

The memorandum contends that the sums paid for cargoes passed upon by the prize courts all are considerably in excess of the amounts realized by the British in sale of the goods in question.

The memorandum says that only 27 vessels now are being detained in British ports. Of these eight are discharging cotton cargoes that the government has agreed to pay for. Seven are free to depart when the items listed by the prize courts are discharged from the ships. Twelve only, three of which are American, are being detained for inquiry as to suspicious consignments in the cargoes.

GEORGIA LEGISLATURE PASSES RESOLUTIONS URGING THE PRESIDENT TO ACT.

Atlanta, Ga.—Resolutions urging President Wilson to use every means in his power—"diplomatic if possible, retaliatory if necessary"—to prevent further interference by Great Britain with American commerce to neutral nations, were adopted by both houses of the Georgia legislature Monday.

Among other things the resolutions set forth that since March 1 "Great Britain has illegally seized" many vessels, thus depriving cotton producers of Georgia a certain market.

Eight Killed in Crash.

Gettysburg, Pa.—Eight persons are reported to have been killed and fourteen injured in a head-on collision between the Blue Mountain express and a Baltimore local train on a bridge spanning a ravine on the Western Maryland railway at High Bridge, near the Mason and Dixon line. Charles Cook, an engineer, Charles R. Fritz and John Hays, firemen, are among the dead. A Mrs. Chipchase of Baltimore and her son and two or three other passengers were killed by being thrown into the ravine.

WOMAN USES FISTS ON BUCKEYE BLACKHANDER

Refuses to Be Frightened or Stolen After Threat Letter Had Been Received by Her Husband.

Sandusky, O.—"Leave $500 under the Birmingham bridge or I'll steal your wife," was the text of a Black hand letter received by Charles Kubach, farmer living near Birmingham, 20 miles east of here.

Kubach refused to be frightened. The money was not "planted" as the letter, received several days ago, demanded, and late Thursday evening, according to notification received by Sheriff William H. Lundy of Erie county Friday morning, an effort to steal Mrs. Kubach was made.

Mrs. Kubach was not disposed to be stolen, however, and when a man pounced upon her from a clump of bushes while she was driving a cow home from pasture through a lonely lane she put up a fight and sent her assailant scurrying to the woods a half mile away.

Mrs. Kubach says that as the man wearing a handkerchief over his face leaped toward her he exclaimed:

"I got you this time."

She says she replied:

"You haven't got me yet," and putting up her fists in true pugilistic style, started after him.

"I tried to tear the mask from his face to get a look at the fellow or to tear away a piece of his clothing so that I could identify him in event of capture," said Mrs. Kubach.

"I didn't succeed, because he outran me and not because he outfought me."

Deputy Sheriff Fred Staffler and a posse of farmers searched the country around Birmingham, but the assailant still is at large.

WILL ASK FOR MORE SUBMARINE VESSELS

Officers of Naval Advisory Board Think United States Should Have as Many Undersea Boats as Germany.

Washington, D. C.—The naval construction program which will be submitted to the next congress will call for the construction of a submarine fleet equal to that of Germany, in the opinion of high officials of the navy department. Coincident with the appointment by Secretary Daniels of a new "advisory council," which is to aid him in working out the problems confronting the navy, it was learned that the concensus of opinion among the officers chosen for the task is that the United States should have at least 52 submarines, the number which Germany is generally estimated to have in commission.

Naval experts are agreed that for defensive purposes the submarine is supreme. Invasion of these shores would be impossible, in their opinion, if the United States had a sufficient number of submarines to cover its extremely long coast line.

The experts of the department have been watching with the greatest attention the developments in naval warfare brought out in the present war.

Girl Wallops Father.

Toledo, O.—When Michael Smorowski sought to battle with his wife he reckoned lightly with her reserve, neighbors say. Smorowski, according to people living nearby, struck the woman over the head with a poker, cutting a gash in her forhead. She ran screaming into the yard. Instantly appeared half a dozen other women, who ran to her aid. These women grabbed Smorowski and thrust him into a tub of water. While he was thus held captive a daughter rained blows over his head with the poker.

11,000 Get Wage Boost.

Toledo, O.—An increase of 5 per cent in the pay roll of 11,000 employes of the Willys-Overland Automobile Co. has been made voluntarily, Harry L. Shopler, general superintendent, declared the officials were moved entirely by the loyalty of the workmen. According to Mr. Shopler the increase will mean an addition of $525,000 to the pay roll of the company the first year, which is now estimated at $1,000,000 a month. One year ago they reduced working hours from 10 to 9 with no wage decrease.

TEUTON ARMY STILL PURSUES RUSSIANS

Drives Czar's Forces From Every Position They Held on This Side of Dniester.

ARTILLERY DUELS IN WESTERN ARENA

Italians Make Further Important Advances at Both Extremities of Austrian Frontier, Fighting Taking Place in Passes.

London, England—The Austro-German army of Gen. von Linsingen has driven the Russians from Halicz, won control of all the crossings of the Dniester and now threatens to cut off the Russian southeastern armies from those operating around Lemberg. Halicz, north of Stanislau, was the last Russian foothold on the south bank of the Dniester. For almost a fortnight the Russians had held their ground, despite violent and continuous assaults by great masses of Austro-German troops. Driven from every other position they held on this bank, the Russians retained their grip on Halicz until the great Krupp guns were brought up. Their positions, shattered by tons of iron hurled into them in a heavy and continuous bombardment, they were forced to give way. They retreated across the river in some disorder, losing more than 6,000 prisoners. On the other side of the Dniester their retreat continued. They are now making in the direction of the Gaita Lipa, about 80 miles from the frontier.

Terrific Artillery Duels.

Terrific artillery duels are being fought all along the western battle front from the Aisne to the sea with a recklessness which bespeaks utter disregard for the mooted shortage in munitions. Infantry fighting on these sectors is of a purely local character. On the heights of the Meuse, in the region of the Calonne trenches and near Metzeral, German counter attacks delivered with great ferocity were repulsed by the French, while in the Argonne the Germans claim to have administered a like check in an action in which the French sought to retrieve a section of lost trenches. Aerial activity on the eastern end of the battle line is reported in both German and French official statements. Paris chronicles the bombardment of the Zeppelin hangar at Friederichshafen. Eight bombs were dropped on the hangar, according to the Paris report, which adds that the aviator was forced to land because of motor trouble, but was able to reach Swiss territory at Rheinfelden. The Berlin report says two aeroplanes of the French corps were brought down by the fire of the German artillery and landed across the border in Switzerland. In an aerial battle between German and French machines north of Schlucht pass and at Gerardmer two French aeroplanes were shot down by the German aviators, says Berlin.

Italians Make Advances.

Rome, Italy.—Italian infantry forces effectively supported by their artillery, have made further important advances at both extremities of the Italo-Austro front. South of Riva at the northern extremity of Lake Garda, the Alpine troops, fighting through narrow passes, some of which are banked by mountain walls rising to the height of 5,000 feet, have penetrated to within six miles of Riva. As a result of a series of sanguinary engagements in the Plava sector the Italians along the Isonzo have forced a passage of the river between Sagrado and Gorizia and have entrenched themselves on the eastern bank at some places within hailing distance of the Austrians. Gen. Cadrona reports that the Italians are maintaining their positions everywhere and are advancing steadily.

GERMAN REPLY TO U. S. NOTE TO BE FAVORABLE

This Is Indicated in Advices Received at State Department From Ambassador Gerard in Berlin.

Washington, D. C.—A favorable reply by Germany to the last American note on submarine warfare is indicated in state department advices from Berlin. The advices came from Ambassador Gerard and were notably the first of a definite nature received since the American note reached the German foreign office. The exact nature of the ambassador's message was not divulged for obvious reasons, and it did not become known whether he revealed any indication of the trend of the forthcoming German reply.

The ambassador's dispatch was of sufficient detail, however, to put officials in an optimistic attitude.

Poughkeepsie, N. The spurt of the Leland Stanford crew in the last half mile of the race was most thrilling. The Stanford crew was four lengths behind Cornell and about two lengths behind Syracuse at the 3½ mile point, then the spurt began.

U. S. DEMANDS PROMPT PAYMENT FROM KAISER

Holds That Germany Has Violated Treaty Obligation by Destroying William P. Frye, an American Vessel.

Washington, D. C.—In a note to Germany, just made public by the state department, in the case of William P. Frye, the American vessel destroyed by the Prince Eitel Friedrich, this government maintains that Germany has violated a treaty obligation by destroying the vessel and demands prompt payment from Germany. The following direct statement of the attitude of the United States is made by Secretary of State Lansing, who signed the note:

"The real question between the two governments is what reparation must be made for a breach of treaty obligations and that is not a question which falls within the jurisdiction of the prize court."

Secretary Lansing points out to Germany that she previously admitted, under the treaties of 1799 and 1829, her responsibility for the sinking of the Frye. He tells Germany that she now justifies the sinking under those two treaties and that because the treaties don't provide a way for paying indemnities the German foreign office has decided that the case must be referred to a prize court.

In reply to these two positions of the German foreign office Mr. Lansing asserts that the treaties don't justify the sinking of the Frye and denies "that the German prize court has any jurisdiction over the question of the amount of indemnity to be paid by the imperial German government on accounts of its admitted liabilities for the destruction of an American vessel on the high seas."

The state department declares that it will not be bound by any decision of the German prize court and reiterates that this "is a matter for adjustment by direct diplomatic discussion between the two governments."

Officials who have read the note say that it is the strongest document that has yet been sent across the water in the assertion of the rights of American commerce.

The statements of the present note are direct. They deny point blank the validity of the new contentions of the German foreign officers and put the question on the high plane of violation or non-violation of a solemn treaty between the two governments.

MINES CLOSE, MEN IDLE

THE PITS AND STORES IN OHIO ARE SHUT UP, OPERATORS CLAIMING NO PROFIT.

Columbus, O.—Mines and stores of the Sunday Creek Coal Co. in the Hocking valley are being closed. The mines are being put in care of a pumper to keep out the water. The contents of the company stores are being boxed and shipped to West Virginia.

The Sunday Creek company is the largest operator in the Hocking valley. The closing of its mines and stores leaves the miners without means of employment and in many cases without a place to make purchases. The company has its headquarters here. It was stated by its officers the step was taken because it was impossible to mine coal in Ohio and sell at a profit. The company will operate in properties in West Virginia and wait until fundamental conditions in Ohio were improved, it was added.

Panama Canal Tolls $4,000,000.

Washington, D. C.—A total of $4,000,000 in tolls was collected for the use of the Panama canal in the period of time between the opening of the waterway for traffic in May last year up to June 6 last.

During April the tolls for the first time were greater than the cost of operation and maintenance of the canal by $84,112. The total for the month was $442,415 and the cost of operation $358,303, the latter being the least for any month since the opening of the canal.

HUERTA IS HELD BY U. S. AUTHORITIES

Former Dictator Charged With Conspiracy to Incite a Revolution.

GEN. OROZCO FACES SIMILAR ACCUSATION

Ex-Provisional Head of Mexico, With Remnants of Villa Forces, Had Planned to Launch New Uprising, It Is Asserted.

Gen. Victoriano Huerta, ex-president of Mexico, landed in New York April 12, 1915, after making affidavit that he was on a "pleasure trip" and would not "involve the neutrality of the United States" by fomenting a Mexican revolution. His stay was set at 90 days.

Half an hour later Capt. Ruiz Nunez, a Huerta aide, said: "Now watch us go back to Mexico. To h—l with pledges."

El Paso, Tex.—Charges of conspiring to incite a revolution against a friendly country were filed Sunday against Gen. Victoriano Huerta, former president of Mexico, who was placed under arrest earlier in day at Newman, N. M., by federal officers.

Similar charges were filed against Gen. Pascual Orozco, who was arrested at the same time. Huerta was released later on $15,000 bond. Orozco's bail was fixed at $7,500 and he also was released.

Gen. Huerta, after his arrest, was taken to Fort Bliss and guarded pending investigation by the department of justice in Washington of what his journey to the Mexican border meant.

Gen. Huerta, since his arrival in New York, April 12, from Spain, has been living quietly in a Long Island suburb of New York. It was not until Saturday night that it became publicly known that he had left New York for the Mexican border.

Huerta Believed on Trip to Expo.

It was announced by his secretary in New York that he was on his way to the Panama-Pacific exposition, but Carranza and Villa news agencies in Washington reported he was on his way to the seat of his former dictatorship, there to resume power, possibly by taking over the Villa forces and adding to them a number of his own followers, who had been secretly pledged to serve at a given signal.

Federal officials, accompanied by a squad of American troopers, met the Mexican party at Newman, N. M., Sunday morning and escorted Gen. Huerta to the federal building there, where he conferred with representatives of the United States department of justice.

The transfer to Fort Bliss was made upon the request of the mayor of El Paso because of the crowd which had gathered about the federal building when the news spread abroad that the Mexican leader and his party were there.

As Gen. Huerta walked from the federal building to his automobile to start for Fort Bliss he was greeted with handclappings and cheers by hundreds of Mexicans in the crowd.

Detained with Huerta was Gen. Pascual Orozco, who with Maj. Luis Fuentes, a son-in-law of Huerta, had gone to Newman, N. M., by automobile to meet Gen. Huerta.

U. S. Frustrates Dictator's Plans.

Washington, June 28.—The United States government has frustrated for the time an attempt by Gen. Victoriano Huerta and his associates to launch from American territory a new revolutionary movement in Mexico. Detention of the former Mexican dictator, with Gen. Orozco and others at El Paso followed nearly three months of espionage by government agents. The department of justice had instructed United States Attorney Camp of the western district of Texas to take into custody these men, who seemingly were engaged in violations of American neutrality laws, which forbid the recruiting of men, the purchase of supplies therefor and the organizing of a military expedition on the soil of the United States to be used in operations against a people with which this country is at peace.

Mr. Camp was ordered to place before a grand jury at El Paso immediately all the evidence in his possession in order that indictments may be returned against anyone guilty of an intent to violate American neutrality laws.

Apart from any considerations of policy which the Washington government may have in mind for the settlement of the Mexican problem, the department of justice has the full sympathy of the department of state in enforcing the neutrality laws, irrespective of the individuals concerned.

When Assistant Attorney General Warren called to the attention of Secretary Lansing the fact that Gen. Huerta and his supporters appeared to be ready to set afoot an armed expedition into Mexico, Mr. Lansing indicated that this was a subject for the department of justice to handle, and the arrests were ordered forthwith.

STUDY TEETH AND MOUTH DISEASES

Research Institute of National Dental Association Incorporates.

MEANS DEFINITE SYSTEM OF WORK

Buckeye State Is Now Legal Home of Nation-Wide Movement to Study Oral Ailments—Other News From Ohio Capital.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

ORGANISMS that find lodgment in the human mouth and from there wage disease upon other parts of the body faced a formidable enemy when the Research Institute of the National Dental association began a corporate existence in Columbus. The institute is going to study mouth and tooth diseases in their relation to general systematic derangements and therefore is going to build up a closer affiliation between the dentist and the doctor. Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state and thus made Ohio the legal home of the nation-wide movement to study oral ailments. The institute has been in existence but was not hitherto incorporated. Its incorporation means a more definite system of work. Already the sum of $54,000 has been raised among dental organizations to carry on laboratory investigation. In future the institute will be conducted along lines followed by the Rockefeller institute and Carnegie foundation, but will devote its efforts to dental and oral problems instead of general medical research. The incorporators, Ohio men acting for the 27 members of the research commission of the National Dental association, are Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland, noted among American surgeons; Dr. Homer C. Brown of Columbus, ex-president of the National Dental association and member of the state board of health; E. A. Petrequin of Cleveland, president of the Petrequin Paper Co.; H. J. Crawford, attorney, of Cleveland, and Dr. Weston A. Price of Cleveland, who is chairman of the executive board of the research commission.

Dissents From Turner's Stand.

Malcolm Jennings, secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' association, who first raised the question as to the right of the state tax commission to compel corporations to answer queries relating to their tax value as going concerns, has written to the commission another and final letter protesting against the latter's legal right to insist upon answers. Mr. Jennings holds that the recent opinion of the attorney general was a partial setback for the taxing authorities in that it held they could compel answers to such questions only in verifying returns and not in original inquiries. However, the secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' association dissents from the stand of the attorney general regarding the propriety of any and all questions regarding going value of corporations even though in the verification of returns.

Want Old Fashioned Fourth.

There is uncertainty here as to whether the echoes of war in Europe are going to spoil the "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebrations in Ohio. This uncertainty is pertinent for the reason that many cities seem bent on the old fashioned way of observing Independence day in the face of all peace preachings. It will be recalled that prior to a half dozen years ago the United States had developed an unenviable record in the way she permitted her citizens to maim and kill themselves on every Fourth. And Ohio didn't take last place in the ranks of killed and injured either. Then came the "safe and sane" idea of celebrating Fourth of July and fires, accidents and deaths dwindled to almost nothing. Is the present military sentiment, borrowed by not a few citizens from across the ocean, going to spoil all the good work? That's the question. Gov. Willis has said he should prefer to have the Fourth observed peacefully in Ohio, and most mayors of cities are of the same mind.

Five Referendums on Horizon.

The expectancy of referendums against recently enacted laws is growing hourly. Just now there are five referendum movements on the horizon whereas one week ago it was hardly safe to predict more than two. Today three prospective laws are certain to be submitted to popular approval or disapproval at next fall's election, and they are the congressional gerrymander, the Gallagher bill amending the Green coal miners' wage law and the agricultural decentralizer. The two others that are likely to be referred to popular sanction or veto are the civil service measure and the McDermott bill, which revised the state liquor license law. At the present moment all other new laws seem safe from public reference.

To Take Up New Duties.

Howard Klepinger of Dayton, appointed to the new position of deputy superintendent of public works, came to Columbus lately to arrange to enter upon his new duties. He will take over the work of two division engineers, whose places will be abolished. He is former surveyor of Montgomery county. He was appointed by John I. Miller, present superintendent, who will retire a month from now. Frank R. Fanver of Elyria, who will succeed him, was one of the original Willis men.

Arranging for Referendums.

Ex-Speaker Charles L. Swain of Cincinnati is to direct the work of getting signatures for a referendum on the agricultural ripper. The backers of the proposal closed with him for this in Columbus a few days ago. Close to 70,000 signatures will be necessary to get up a referendum, and these must be secured before July 21 or else the measure will become a law. If the necessary number of signatures are obtained the old law will remain [illegible]

Seeks Higher Honors.

Lieut. Gov. "Jack" Arnold has let it become known informally that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for vice president of the United States. He has permitted his friends to say that he had practically entered the race and to aver that he had had promises of support in various parts of the country. Speaking at the annual outing during the afternoon of the Junior Order United American Mechanics at Olentangy park, Mr. Arnold publicly pronounced the platform of principles of that order and privately declared that these principles were adequate for his vice presidential aspirations. By his friends the lieutenant governor was touted as a candidate for governor in the event that Gov. Willis should seek higher honors next fall. In such an event the race for the vice presidency would be forsaken for the leadership in Ohio, it was said. The Arnold address at the Olentangy outing constituted an iteration of the various things for which the Junior Order U. A. M. stand. They included, the speaker said, restriction of undesirable immigration, the continued separation of church and state, the teaching of the Bible in the schools and the establishment of the schoolhouse with its flag and Bible as the standard of "liberty and progress."

Sugar Beets Worth $1,500,000.

Something has been growing so unpretentiously in Ohio that in some quarters it has almost escaped notice. But now it is becoming such a giant of a thing that it no longer can claim obscurity. It is the common, everyday sugar beet. Even the members of the state agricultural commission are beginning to sit up and notice the development of the youngster—are so impressed with it that they are thinking about conducting an educational campaign to let the people generally know of the way the modest beet has been stretching toward the very skies. During the year 1914 there were grown in 14 northwestern counties of Ohio sugar beets that were worth $1,084,000. And the crop this year is so exceptionally promising that already more than $1,500,000 worth of them have been sold by contract in advance. These figures have been given out by the field secretary of a domestic sugar growers' association, J. A. Brock. Last year there were 2,712 beet growers in the state, harvesting 20,000 acres and producing a crop of 219,000 tons. This year the number of growers has increased to nearly 4,000, planting 33,000 acres and expecting an income of $55 an acre. The story of the production of beet sugar is interesting. There were 21,000 tons of it produced last year and most of it was the product of the three factories in the state that were closed, but only temporarily, as a result of the new tariff. The three factories employ 1,000 men paying them nearly $1,000,000 in wages.

Has New Internecine Troubles.

When it comes to internecine troubles few cities in Ohio have anything on Hamilton. The latest investigation, demanded by certain officials of Hamilton, involves the civil service commission of that city, as well as the mayor. The Socialist regime in Hamilton is the object of attack. The state civil service commission, which next Tuesday will send a deputy to Hamilton to do some probing, has been told in formal charges that the civil service commission has been trying to oust its secretary for political reasons, and that the mayor did oust the police inspector for similar reasons. Observers here do not recall anything in the state to compare with the present situation in Butler county's seat. The other parties here blame the Socialists and the Socialists blame the other parties, saying they are envious of a third party getting full control of a large town.

Does Some More Slashing.

State Auditor Vic Donahey is on the warpath again with an extra big stick, and this time the object of his official wrath are the five members of the state dental board. The board had a meeting in Columbus a few days ago and later presented claims for expenses. Among the expense items the auditor espied some $2 and $2.00 meals. He got busy at once with a paring knife and slashed about $22 off the total, which had aggregated about $200. Then he issued a general ultimatum to the effect that the state will not hereafter pay for "eatings" which total more than $1.50 at one sitting. "The man or woman in the state employ who can eat more than $1.50 worth at one and the same time can pay for it," says the dictum, and Donahey says it's the last word on the subject.

Occupational Diseases Not Injuries.

Occupational diseases are not injuries received in the course of employment under the workmen's compensation law, so it was held by the supreme court in the case of David Brown of Cincinnati. Six of the seven judges concurred in the decision, Judge Wanamaker dissenting. The decision was on a suit brought under the first compensation law, but the section under which the suit was brought was not changed in the 1913 law as it stands today.

Won't Commit Himself.

United States Senator Warren G. Harding has failed to commit himself on the question of women suffrage. The Congressional Union for Women Suffrage, venturing for the first time in Ohio, has formally and officially put the suffrage question before him. It might not be wholly fair to say that the senator failed to say what he thought about suffrage, for he did express some views about it, but he did not indicate how he would vote when the senate should consider next winter the question of submitting a nation-wide suffrage amendment.

Willis Cancels Western Trip.

Gov. Willis Monday night canceled all arrangements for the trip to California he and his party had planned to start on Tuesday. In explanation of the change he said investigations in state institutions required his attention and made mandatory his presence in the state. He declined to say in what institution the investigations were being made. He said the transfer of patients to the new Lima State hospital was a pressing need in view of the congested conditions in other institutions.

TAX ISSUE WILL REACH COURTS

ASSESSORS' RIGHT TO PROBE A GOING CONCERN—VALUE OF THEM TO BE TESTED.

SECRETARY QUESTIONS RULING

Takes Issue With a Portion of Opinion Given by State's Attorney General.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—Right of district tax assessors to require corporate officers to furnish information for the purpose of ascertaining the unit or going concern value of the corporation may be tested in the courts. The secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association, in a letter to the state commission, took issue with that portion of Attorney General Turner's opinion that upheld the right of the district assessors to obtain the unit value provided they proceeded to deduct therefrom good will and other nontaxable elements before appraising the property of the corporation.

The attorney general sustained the contention of the secretary that it was optional to answer questions on the tax commissioner's blanks about stock valuation, bonded indebtedness, surplus, etc., but held the district assessors could compel these questions to be answered verbally by summoning an officer of the corporation. The state tax commission, in a letter, says the attorney general's opinion that it is optional to answer questions on the blank forms sent corporations, on which to make their returns, "substantiates exactly the position which the commission has taken in regard to the question at issue."

HIGHWAY COMMISSIONERS

Dinner Is Attended by Hundreds of Road Boosters.

Cincinnati, O.—More than 300 of Cincinnati's representative citizens, members of its leading civic, commercial and social organizations, gave a dinner at the Business Men's Club to Harry L. Gordon and George W. Harris, Dixie Highway Commissioners from Ohio. Besides local men and those from nearby Kentucky cities Colonel S. B. Stanbery was host to a party of up-state business men. With former Congressman Ralph D. Cole of Findlay, were Frank A. Zimmer of Urbana, Dudley Foster of Columbus, and Beeman J. Dawes of Marietta, brother of the former United States Comptroller of the Currency. Mr. Gordon paid high tribute to the committee sent by the Queen City to Chattanooga to urge the commission to build the highway through Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI TO GET MEETING.

Lima, O.—Cincinnati will entertain the 1916 convention of the Women's Home Missionary Society, Western Ohio Conference, which has been in session in Trinity M. E. Church. This was practically decided when no opposition was offered to the Queen City. Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, of Sidney, was re-elected president, and Mrs. Noah Yount, of Troy, was chosen secretary.

DEATH ENDS YEAR'S SLEEP.

Columbus, O.—Henry C. Mankey, a veteran of the Civil War, who has slept almost continuously during the last year, died here. He was 75 years old. One year ago Mankey went to his room at the usual time to retire. Since then he had never left his bed and with the exception of a few minutes at different intervals, had been asleep. Throughout his illness Mankey was unable to speak and at no time did he recognize the members of his family.

FIND WHITE ROBIN AT HOME.

Troy, O.—A rare specimen of the bird family, a white robin, has been found at the home of W. K. Jones, who resides a mile north of Laura. A few days ago one of Mr. Jones' sons was shaking a small tree when two small robins fell from the nest. At the time the color of one of the birds attracted attention and both were replaced in the nest. Since then they have grown but the feathers of one are perfectly white.

MEET AT FINDLAY NEXT YEAR.

Zanesville, O.—A rousing mass meeting at Memorial Hall marked the closing sessions of the Ohio State Sunday School Association Convention. Findlay was chosen for next year's meeting.

OHIO SUGAR BEET GROWERS.

Columbus, O.—Sugar beets worth $1,084,000 to farmers of fourteen northwestern Ohio counties were grown in 1914, and one and one-half times that amount of beets already has been contracted for this year, according to a report made to the agricultural commission by J. A. Brock, field secretary of a Domestic Sugar Producers' association. The agricultural department has been considered making a special investigation of beet sugar growing in Ohio.

TWO BABIES WITH ONE SPINE.

Bellaire, O.—Twin girls that were joined together like the famous Siamese twins, were born near here. The babies lived only three hours, although they were perfectly formed. Physicians in attendance said that the bodies were joined back to back, from the shoulders down. There were two heads, four arms and four legs. Each head had a separate neck. There was but one spinal column, however, for the two bodies. Photographs of the twins were taken.

THIS HAPPY DAY

Cleveland, O.—Victims of hay and rose fever are rejoicing over the receipt by Cleveland physicians of a vaccine that is said to provide immunity from annual attacks. Physicians say the new discovery is a boon for victims. The serum administered to patients is gathered from common grasses, weeds and flowering plants. Ten to fifteen injections of the serum given during the four to six weeks preceding the hay fever season are necessary to ward off the attack.

PROHIBITION IS ENDORSED

Federation of Adult Classes Will Be Organized—Committees Report.

Zanesville, O.—The men's parade in connection with the State Sunday School Association was the greatest religious pageant ever witnessed in any Ohio city. There were more than 7,000 marchers, five bands, several drum corps and many of the delegations sang hymns while the parade was passing down Main street. Many of the delegations in the parade were uniformed in some special manner, but the Red Cross was the dominating emblem. It was a fitting prelude to the men's meeting in Memorial Hall, at which a wet and dry debate by Chautauqua speakers was considered the uplifter for the wet and dry campaign in Ohio. Anti-Saloon League officials were here from Cleveland and Columbus, gathering literature and data for the coming campaign.

The convention passed a resolution by acclamation indorsing state-wide prohibition, and just before adjournment of the session, the nominating committee made its report and the report of the committee was adopted.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Dayton, O.—Dayton won over Cincinnati for the 1916 convention of the Western Ohio Conference of Women's Missionary Societies, which closed its sessions in Lima, Ohio. The following staff officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, Sidney; first vice president, Mrs. E. E. McCammon, Toledo; second vice president, Mrs. W. J. Boren, Dayton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Daniel M. Bailey, Ottawa; treasurer, Mrs. Geo. O. Marsh, Lebanon; recording secretary, Mrs. Noah Yount, Troy.

BUCKEYE BREVITIES

Port Clinton, O.—Petitions asking for a referendum vote to rule out the Whiteway proposition for lighting the city failed.

Shawnee, O.—Ed Daugherty, aged 26, son of John Daugherty of New Straitsville, was killed by a train near the clubhouse on the Hocking Valley Railroad.

Gallipolis, O.—[illegible] Mars, engineer at Ohio river dam No. 14, was run down and drowned by the steamer Odd Fellow while he was riding in his motor boat.

Sandusky, O.—A monument is to be constructed at Niles, Ohio, by the Junior Order United American Mechanics in memory of former President William McKinley.

Dayton, O.—Orville H. Wright, the aeroplane inventor, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science at the 89th commencement at Trinity college at Hartford.

Cleveland, O.—Knocked down and caught beneath the feet of the horses of a city sprinkling wagon this afternoon 5-year-old Louis Kestilite was tramped to death within sight of his home.

Warren, O.—Duetler Till, of Niles, was drowned in the Mahoning river near Leavittsburg while he was canoeing. His boat was swamped by the waves from a motorboat and he sank before help arrived.

Columbus, O.—Announcement was made that the Carnegie Steel mills in this city, idle for two years past, will open at once. Immediate employment will be given to 800 men and within a short time it is planned to give work to the usual number of workers with the plant going at its normal capacity.

Nelsonville, O.—The last of the nine mines operated by the Sunday Creek Co. was closed and the officials state the time of suspension is indefinite, and the miners were advised to look for work elsewhere. The company employs about 2,200 men. As there has been very little work since the long suspension last year large numbers of the miners' families are destitute.

Springfield, O.—With about 100 delegates from Columbus, Xenia, Cedarville, Clifton, Reynoldsburg, New California, Sugar Creek and Jamestown, the annual convention of the Xenia Presbytery, United Presbyterian church was in session at the First U. P. church here.

Bellaire, O.—John Rennie, 40 years old, died as a result of wounds inflicted when shot by Charles Fogle, Jr., son of a Deputy Sheriff. Fogle's father was trying to arrest Rennie when the latter resisted and flashed a revolver.

Lima, O.—Harry Geisey, of Lancaster, was instantly killed and William Rosier, of Mansfield, seriously injured when Rosier drove his motorcycle into a fence and then rebounded in the path of Geisey's machine during the first race at the Ohio motorcycle convention here.

Columbus, O.—Charged with having defrauded the government out of oleomargarine taxes amounting to more than $2,000,000, four officials of the Old Capital City Dairy company of Columbus, were placed on trial.

LAW FREES SAILOR

Seaman's Bill Is Hailed as Wise Legislation.

Sure to Lead to the Establishment of a Merchant Marine and a Navy Worthy of the Country—Its Provisions.

"The seaman's bill, which became a law at the last session of congress, means more to the sailors of America than most landlubbers can understand," observed H. A. Grubb of Boston in an interview at Washington. "It will mean that in the future American boys will be glad to go to sea and that we may hope for an American merchant marine and a greater navy. Under the existing law—the seaman's bill does not go into effect until November 4—sailors cannot leave their ship without being caught like runaway slaves and returned to it.

"The new law makes the sailor a free man. There is now no law saying how long a sailor shall work and he may be called to work at any hour. Under the new bill he will work four hours on and four hours off when at sea, with a total working day of 12 hours, and when his vessel is in port he will have a working day of only nine hours."

RECOGNIZE HIS GOOD WORK

Tennessee Bankers in Convention Acknowledge Their Debt to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

The efforts and accomplishments of the secretary of the treasury, William G. McAdoo, in relieving the condition of financial depression and distress in the United States, and especially in the South, which resulted from war conditions in Europe, were the subject of appreciation of the Tennessee Bankers' association at its convention at Nashville.

Resolutions adopted read:

"Whereas, during the recent period of financial depression and distress that came to the country at large, and especially to the South, Hon. William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, devoted all the lawful powers of his office and his splendid talents to give us relief.

"Resolved, That this association hereby expresses its sincere appreciation of his valued services and its pride in his distinguished ability and his patriotic devotion to duty."

Those "Subordinate Employees."

If the administration wants to give proof of its earnest desire, so frequently professed, to encourage business, it will now accept the unanimous decision in favor of the United States Steel corporation by the circuit court. It will do so without deference to the feelings of subordinate employees in the department of justice who started this foolish suit and would appeal it to the Supreme court of the United States to save their silly little vanity. When an administration feels that it is in the business of helping a nation's business, there is nothing it can do more effectively than to leave that business alone.—Wall Street Journal.

The "subordinate employees" in question were William H. Taft, president of the United States, and George W. Wickersham, attorney general.

Steel Trust Decision.

The steel trust decision mainly rested on the fact that, since its organization in 1901, the business done by the Steel corporation had increased in a smaller ratio than the business of its independent competitors. This established fact, and the equally known fact that the corporation has never employed toward its competitors the oppressive methods of the Standard Oil and the American Tobacco, have stood it in good stead in this first judicial test, and may quite possibly win its case before the highest court. But it should be carefully observed that even this present decision is very far from vindicating all the previous practices even of the Steel corporation.—New York Evening Post (Ind.).

Efficient Post Office Service Now.

The fact that the parcel post is now operating on a generous and nation-wide scale is sufficient justification for increased expenditures, even though they had not been made necessary by the growth of the country.

The post office department has never been self-sustaining, but the people of the country have been quite ready to pay the bill so long as efficient service was rendered. They are now getting more for their money than ever before, and the comparatively small excess in expenditures, especially in view of the depression in postal revenues following the war, is an evidence that there has been no waste or duplication.

Strenuous Job.

"No president since Abraham Lincoln has had to deal with so many grave problems as Woodrow Wilson," said an old Democrat. "There has been scarcely a president who has not had some troublous experience. Cleveland's second administration was anything but a bed of roses; but Wilson has had little resting time since inauguration day, and the strenuosity of his office has increased with the passing day. If any official ever earned his salary it is the president of the United States."

Praise for War Secretary.

The secretary of war is not only a man of infinite zeal, but one of ideas and courage. He learned his duties quickly and has shown uncommon capacity to accept the advice of competent officers in the army. He is a man of great reserve force and all his qualities are solid. He has the army spirit, as witness his excellent address to the graduating class at West Point. It would be well not to disturb Hon. Lindley M. Garrison in his task of reorganizing the army.

THE BRITISH REPLY

It is because the British Ultimatum to Germany is spurious that these breaches have arisen. It is not true blockade of Germany. It is over particularly no evidence upon the United States. The much-vaunted British sea power does not close the ports of Germany. It is attempting to accomplish that purpose in an easier way by denying to the American people the freedom of the seas to undertake to deal with the commerce of the great Republic peacefully or deny with that of the four small and neutralized States of Europe. It suffers to pay. But it never otherwise contemplated it.

We have no other objection to the World that strikes at the heart of the American Republic and undertakes to dictate to her, judge for her, family, so to speak, and evidently, if carried over another, as we thought for all time, may as well be attempted to Dick. We want to war with Great Britain a century ago for a cause in more glorious.

If the United States—united and equal—in great Britain, and commanded to be to hope for consideration in American.

WILLIS CAUSES SURPRISE

The more the dispatches speculate the deeper grows the mystery of why Secretary Lansing, Mr. Wilson—recently that supposed Presidential aspirants—to be so suddenly dismissed by President Wilson. The President's plan of stepping Mr. Lansing has been a surprise to no friends and has aroused only the curiosity and matter of his critics, who are at least and even in minor attitudes the affairs of State are accounted unsatisfy and there is nothing in sight but a few apparently trivial reasons made that keeps the Secretary of home.

Two there are charges against the head of the Department Secretary Lansing and two hands are in a matter as to which shall have the management of a new State Department for the reason that is shortly to be opened at home, but rather is a suitable for the Department as authority to break up the France Jesuit.

"When I look at the flag, it seems to me as if the white stripes were strips of parchment upon which are written the rights of man, and the red stripes the streams of blood by which these rights have been made good. They in the blue blue forever meet in the corner have sewing out the stars of the Union of the American Union. So it is, as it were, a part of forming charter that has come down to us from Sunnymede, when men said, 'We will and we demand we will be a people, and we will and we can be a people.'"—Woodrow Wilson.

In the famous resins of the Confederate cruiser Alabama, the good civil war, Captain Semmes said 32 vessels, between 300 and 400 officers of them—and did not kill a people was unknown or neutral. The record should be of interest to Germany, especially since the confidence at the time of his operations was predicated a Bismarck sentiment to Bismarck, one Germany is approaching, and which she alleges is justification for her submarine methods.

SYNOPSIS.

—11—

In the New York home of James Brood, his son, Frederic, tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancee, of a message announcing his father's marriage. Brood and his bride arrive. She wins Frederic's liking at first meeting. Brood shows dislike and veiled hostility to his son. Lydia and Mrs. Brood meet in the jade-room, where Lydia works as Brood's secretary. Mrs. Brood makes changes in the household and gains her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia away. She fascinates Frederic. She begins to fear Ranjab, Brood's Hindu servant, in his uncanny appearances and disappearances, and Frederic, remembering his father's East Indian stories and firm belief in magic, fears unknown evil. Brood tells the story of Ranjab's life to his guests. "He killed a woman," who was unfaithful to him. Yvonne plays with Brood, Frederic and Lydia as with figures on a chess board. Brood madly jealous tells Lydia that Frederic is not his son, and that he has brought him up to kill his happiness at the proper time with this knowledge. Lydia goes to beg Brood not to tell Frederic of his unhappy parentage, but is turned from her purpose. Frederic at dinner with Dawes and Riggs is seized with an impulse of filial duty, and under a queer impression that he is influenced by Ranjab's will hunts up his father, who gives him the cut direct. Brood tells Frederic the story of his dead wife and the music master.

"It was made in Vienna," interrupted Frederick, not without a strange thrill of satisfaction in his soul, "and before you were married, I'd say. On the ...

... heard her scathing remark. "Sometimes I have felt a queer gripping of the heart when I was harshest toward him. Sometimes his eyes—her eyes—have melted the steel that was driven into my heart long ago, his voice and the touch of his hand gently have checked my bitterest thoughts. Are you listening?"

"Yes."

"You ask what I have done to him. It is nothing in comparison to what he would have done to me. It isn't necessary to explain. You know the thing he has had in his heart to do. I have known it from the beginning. It is the treacherous heart of his mother that propels that boy's blood along its craven way. She was an evil thing—as evil as God ever put life into."

"Go on."

"I loved her as no woman ever was loved before—or since. I thought she loved me. God, I believe she did. He—Frederic had her portrait up there to flash in my face. She was beautiful—she was as lovely as— But no more! I was not the man. She loved another. Her lover was that boy's father."

Dead silence reigned in the room save for the heavy breathing of the man. Yvonne was as still as death itself. Her hands were clenched ...

WOMEN CAN HARDLY BELIEVE

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere.

The growth of the crop during the past week was very satisfactory. Rain fell in many places during the early part of the week, followed by warmer weather, which has been most beneficial to the grain. Breaking and summer-fallowing were well under way, and conditions generally were most promising.

The following reports have been received by the department from the various centers: Denholm—A little rain needed in the northern part to start late grain; remainder of district plenty of moisture. Davidson—Ideal growing weather; a few farmers harrowing grain to conserve moisture by breaking crust formed since last rain. North Battleford to Prince Albert—Good growing weather; crops looking well. Slight damage near North Battleford from cutworms; recent rains beneficial. Kindersley—Crops looking fine and prospects good; plenty of moisture, with prospects of more rain. Every slough in this country is full. Prince Albert—Crops in fair condition, though cutworms and light frosts have done damage in some sections. Have had moderate quantity of rain.

An Old-Fashioned Idea.

THE FLAG ADOPTED.

Let the sons of the patriots glow in the pride
That is theirs by the right of succession!—
I sing of the aliens born far and wide
Who of love for the flag make confession.
We've seen them in action with Mauser and Krag,
And surely they saw in the fluttering flag:
Stars of hope!—'Tis not only a banner, but shield!
Stripes of merit!—A guerdon from many a field!
Old Glory! Old Glory!
In song and in story
Forever you're flying before us!—
The red of our blood!
The white of our good!
And the blue of the sky that smiles o'er us!

We are brothers and sisters by rule from above.
We're all of us lovers of freedom.
Our daddies ne'er fought for the flag that you love—
But their sons are right here when you need 'em!
And it isn't our fault (Mr. Dooley I quote)
That we're sons of "the fellows who missed the first boat."
So brothers and sisters, this message I bring:
Our hearts are attuned when we help you to sing:
Old Glory! Old Glory!
In song and in story
Forever you're flying before us!—
The red of our blood!
The white of our good!
And the blue of the sky that smiles o'er us!

Planning for Revenge

"Mother, dear, do you really mean that I can marry Jack DeMutt?" exclaimed the fair maid in surprise.

"I do," answered the mother. "You have my unqualified permission."

"But only yesterday," said the dear girl, "you forbade me to even see him again!"

"Well, I have reconsidered the matter," explained the mother. "I still have a bitter grudge against him, and for that reason I am anxious to become his mother-in-law. See?"

Advice to Donald.

Father—Ay! Tell Donal' that if he comes ower yon German waiter that gied us a bad saxpence for change when we had a bit o' dinner in London a while syne tell him—tae—tak—steady aim.—London Punch.

Bix—I bought a new teethbrush today.

Dix—Why "teethbrush?" One doesn't say "shoesbrush."

Bix—No, because he brushes but one shoe at a time.

Dix—Is that so? Well, how about hairsbrush?

Of Course Not.

"Beauty is only skin deep."

"That's enough. You only want to kiss a peachy cheek. You don't want to bite it."

Cyclone Was Playful.

The great atmospheric freak that has hit California for many months struck the walnut grove on the Phillips ranch west of Pomona. It took the form of a small cyclone and played a remarkable prank.

In one spot eight English walnut trees were uprooted. The eight formed almost a perfect circle and the ninth tree, which stood directly in the center, was left standing, although the ground around it shows that the roots were torn loose from the earth.

Forty-three mature walnut trees were uprooted in the Phillips grove by the same storm. The twister also lifted the cap from the manhole on top of the Phillips ranch house, and a few miles farther west it passed through a big walnut groove, uprooting every tree in one row and not turning a leaf on any of the others.—New York Sun.

Seeing Is Believing.

"What be that air gosh dinged masheen?" asked Uncle Abner of Pumpkinville, as he witnessed the working of a fire engine for the first time.

"Why, uncle," replied his city nephew, "that is a machine for putting out fires."

"Well, dart my picktur," exclaimed the old man, "ef I hedn't seed it with my own eyes I never wouldr believ'd thet pesky leetle teakittle could hev held so much water, b'gosh!"

TOWNSHIP PARKS

Proved Popular Places on Sunday and Monday

A visit to Painesville, Mentor and Madison township parks Sundoy and Mondey showed them well patronized and the people well satisfied with their "breathing spots."

All three perks are under new management this season and a change for the better seems to be noticeable. Madison park especially has made a great advance over former years and Manager F. E. Moren is to be congratulated on the spick and span condition of buildinge and grounds and on the quality of the goods sold. The new electric lighting plant at Madison is also a great improvement.

Willoughby's big Fourth of July failed to draw a large crowd, on account of bad weather and many counter attractions. The Midway showe and games were of about the usuel order and there were some fair free acts. The music was good. Willoughbeach park wes also largely attended by Painesville people.

Odd Bits of News

Fremont, O.—While Lester Pawsey was automobiling Sunday, a bug flew into his ear. The services of two physicians end the aid of chloroform were necessary to remove the bug.

New York, N. Y.—When Mrs. Lena Reaven went to buy some things from Marino Castragivani, a peddler, he asked her for a kiss. She refused and the Italian picked up a stick and struck her over the head, cracking her skull.

Pueblo, Colo.—A patient at the state asylum is suffering from the hallucination that the wireless stations of the world are drawing their electricity from him and sapping his strength. He wants to form a union to abolish aerial communication throughout the world.

Elko, Cal.—Austin Bassett, a bachelor of New York, Cal., recently received a baby by parcel post from Seattle, Wash. He says he is ignorant of the mother of the child, and is advertising for her to put a stamp on herself and follow the baby.

Amsterdam, Holland.—A workman employed at Dusseldorf in the manufacture of ammunition for the German army, has averaged 17 working hours a day for 28 days. This is considered here a world's record. The man's total earnings for the time were $89.50, about 18 cents an hour.

Evansville, Ind.—"I never use love powders, I simply win them. Men are easy to get." So says Mrs. Polly Anna Weed Strodes, seventy years old, who is seeking a divorce from her thirteenth husband, Harrison Strodes, 82 years old. Mrs. Strodes says as soon as she gets her divorce she will wed her fourteenth husband.

St. Louis, Mo.—Blissless and kissless is the way Mrs. Eugenia Koch Anderson, 19 years old, describes her married life with Arthur R. Anderson, pastor of the Central Christian Church of Granite City. Two kisses in the last two months and $20 in seven months, according to Mrs. Anderson, make a good recipe for a love extinguisher.

PAINESVILLE

Is To Be Destroyed By Great Earthquake According to Evangelist Lindsay

Painesville is doomed. The prettiest little city in the United States is to be rent asunder with a mighty earthquake and left a mass of crumbled ruins, probably in the next few years. Surely in this generation.

This is the assertion of Evangelist R. S. Lindsay conducting an evangelical campaign in Cleveland, who will speak from the band stand in Painesville's public park, next Sunday afternoon at 3. Friends of the noted evangelist invited him to speak here and secured a permit for his address from Public Service Director Martin A Tuttle. Pastor Lindsay will speak on the last great war, called in the Bible, "Armegeddon." He preaches nothing but the Word of God and claims the dreadful calamities before the inhabitants of Painesville, Cleveland and all the cities of the world are prophesied in the Bible and are to be fulfilled in this generation.

Pastor Lindsay created a sensation in Cleveland a month ago when he prophesied from the word of God that Cleveland would be destroyed by earthquake and fire; that there would be a literal rain of sixty-pound hail stones that the waters of Lake Erie and the Cuyahoga river would be turned to blood; that men would be scorched with a burning heat from the sun; that they would suffer grevious sores and afflictions and would run through the streets cursing God for their afflictions and that the Turks would be dirven from Constantinople into Asia and bring about the last great war of the world. He also says the present war is a forerunner of Armegeddon.

"The assertions I made concerning Cleveland are applicable to Painesville," said Pastor Lindsay yesterday. "I make these statements directly from the Bible and not one of them is my own. These dreadful things are going to happen because the people have turned away from God. God will not bring them about but will suffer them to happen. The Bible says the devil will bring them to pass. God will allow them because He has said His spirit will not always strive with men.

"We are living in the last days. The seven last plagues predicted in the Book of Revelation are about to fall on the people. This terrible war is a sign of the end of the world and the soon coming of Jesus Christ. The people should repent and turn to God and prepare to met Him when He appears for He said that He went to prepare a place for each and every one of us and that He would come and get us that where He was we may be also.

"Following the end of this war will probably be what the people will call a time of peace though in reality it will simply be a breathing spell in which the nations will prepare more diligently than ever for the last great war, Armegeddon. The Bible says men will cry "Peace, peace," when there is no peace and sound a safety cry also.

"The battle of Armegeddon will be fought in the valley of Megiddo which is near Jerusalem. The United States will take part in it as will every heathen nation on the face of the globe. There will be 200,000,000 horsemen alone fighting, to say nothing of the infantry. The battle will end when the great hail will be poured out from heaven and the soldiers will become so perplexed they will slay each other."

One thousand persons attended the opening of Pastor Lindsay's new tent tabernacle at Franklin avenue and W. 58th street, Cleveland on the night of July 4. Efforts are being made to have him conduct a series of meetings in Painesville.

Insane Man Captured

Edward Huff, who escaped from the State Hospital at Cleveland, Tuesday, was captured near Perry and has been taken back to the institution.

Huff undoubtedly took a freight train out of Cleveland and in unloading fell and bruised his knees badly. It was when he was taken to Dr. J. N. Hlack's office for treatment that his unsound mental condition was discovered.

On Summer Schedhle

The Northern Navigation Company announces that all its steamers are now being operated on summer schedule.

There are six special cruises made by the seven passenger ships of the Northern Navigation Company's fleet, each boat being particularly adapted and fitted for its special voyages.

The leviathan and palatial steamers Noronic, Huronic and Hamonic leave three days each week from Sarnia for Duluth via the Soo, Port Arthur and Fort William, with stop-over privileges and side trips. A sight-seeing trip at Duluth is one of the features of the voyage.

These three ships also make weekly voyages from Duluth to Sarnia, stopping at Fort William, Port Arthur and the Soo. The side trips include Kakabeka Falls, Kaministiquia River, Thunder Cape and other beautiful spots, the same places of interest as are visited on the northern cruise starting from Sarnia.

On the Georgian Bay and Mackinac cruises the boats leave Collingwood and Owen Sound on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The steamers leave the Soo on Thursdays, Sundays and Tuesdays.

Trips are made daily, except Sunday, in the Thirty Thousand Islands and Scenic route between Penetang and Parry Sound. This is a 60-mile trip.

The Triangle tours of the Northern Navigation Company start from Cleveland and Detroit and include a six-day cruise through the Georgian Bay via the Soo, Kagawong, Little Current, Killarney, Perry Sound and Collingwood. This cruise is featured with side trips and shore picnics and a trip through the Thirty Thousand Islands.

Keep Your Eye Peeled

Watch out for the man who is trying to take the joy out of life. Ten to one he is a reformer for revenue only, who is trying to make things appear worse than they really are, in order to make a place for himself at the public pie counter. He'll get up an organization to fight something that gives pleasure to others—whether its dancing, such as the young folks enjoy, or playing cards, which mayhe some of the matrons like, or billiards, or baseball, especially on Sunday, or any other enjoyment in which normal, healthy human beings indulge. The first thing such a man does is to go to the capitol to prevent the passage of a bill by which people will get some enjoyment. He will try to have things prohibited. He is always trying to prevent something. Did you ever see this kind of reformer trying to have a bill passed that would enable people to enjoy life. Never! His sole idea is to force through the legislature or the city council a blue law to make other people live according to his ideas, or to prevent the passage of laws introduced by other people who may want to live differently. The world is sad enough without losing our pleasures. There is no place in these red-blooded days for blue laws. The pastry-faced complexion has gone out of style and the ruddy glow of health tells that we are living the right way. The healthy man and woman, who loves life and the good things he can get from it, is a better citizen by far than the dyspeptic and selfish reformer who is reforming for a living or to make other people as miserable as himself.

LAKE COUNTY FAIR

Will be Open to the World This Year—Many New and Novel Features

The Lake County Fair will be thrown open to the whole world according to the terms of a resolution passed by the board of directors at their meeting Tuesday evening. Some time ago the board decided to limit the exhibits to Lake County, the foot and mouth disease being the cause. Today authorities state that there is not a case of the disease in the state and the bars against foreign exhibits have been taken down.

Although the night fair has never proven a success financially, the directors will try it again this year, and believe that with any kind of good weather they will at least make expenses in the evenings. Many town and city people patronize the shows at night and the dance tent is usually crowded. Fireworks at night will probably be omitted and some other attraction provided.

And, speaking of attractions, Manager Tom Kilcuwley certainly is lining up a nice lot of amusements. There will be a motordrome, Ferris Wheel, Ocean Dip, Merry-Go-Round, and probably a first class show besides animal shows and other smaller exhibitions. Somebody wrote in for a price on an "African Dip" concession. Tom didn't know whether an "African Dip" was a new fangled ice cream concoction or just an ordinary chocolate drop. A little inquiry showed that the scheme was to have a colored gentleman seated over a tub of water and given a ducking when a ball was properly thrown.

The society will erect and manage its own dance hall this year and hope by another season to be able to put up a permanent building for a dining room and dance hall.

Contracts for Culverts

At the meeting of the County Commissioners Tuesday, Rose & Faulkner of this place were awarded the contract for building three culverts on the South Ridge road in Perry township and Gottleib Keener of Madison secured three culverts on the Call road.

Jessee Richardson was awarded a contract for the repair of the court house roof.

Mrs. Cook and one son, W. W. Cook, former district tax assessor, survive with two sisters, Mrs. Laura Von Ness of Perry and Mrs. Emma Fisher of Los Angeles.

The funeral services were held Sunday, July 4, at 3p. m., Eastern time, from the house.

ERNEST GORMAN.

Mr. Potts came to this section with his parents when very young, and spent many years of his life in Leroy. At his country's call he enlisted as a private, serving three years before honorably mustered out.

Funeral services will be held at the family residence Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

WHEN YOU'RE FEELIN' BLUE

JUST TRY A CHEW OF ALFALFA

Don'be be crabby. Chew alfalfa.

Sure thing, y'know. Regular alfalfa, the grass the western farmers grow. Chew it when you fel blue, feed it to the boss of a hot afternoon when the home team has lost, keep it with you all the time. It's invalueble. It'll cure indigestion, too, and stimulate your uppetite just like——

Why, just like that ante-prandial cocktail. Best of all, your wife won't smell it on your breath. At least this is what you moy believe is you accept the statement of Dr. Alexunder L. Blackwood, made at the annual convention of the American Institute of Homeopothy.

Use of alfalfa, according to Dr. Blackwood, is accompanied by a delightful feeling of well being, an increase in appetite and a general stimulation of all mental functions that knocks the blues galley west.

Of course, the remedy cannot be known to the medical profession merely as alfalfa. How absurd that would be. So the profession will know it as medicago sativa; but perhaps when it becomes another standby of the soda fountain clerk along with bromo selzer it will be hailed under the original name. Dr. Blackwood has administered it as a tincture. He describes its properties.

"During the past year observations were made of the action of alfalfa on seventeen persons," he said. "All noted they became ravenously hungry. Their minds were clear and bright and all functions were alert."

And so, when you can't shake off that brain fag of the night before, why, just paddle around to the seed store and get some alfalfa. It will stimulate your whole being and—well, you won't go home with a jag.

Commissioner Williams Dies

Edward H. Williams, county commissioner of Lake county, died at his home on Euclid avenue, Willoughby, Thursday morning at 5 o'clock, after a long illness of a complication of diseases. The attack, which was the direct cause of his death, began last Decoration day, when he collapsed while motoring with county officials. He was taken to the home of Col. Spaulding in Mentor and later brought to his home here, but his condition never improved and his death, while a great shock to his friends, was not unexpected.

Mr. Williams was about 65 years old and had served about four years as county commissioner. He had also been re-elected to another term of two years, and would have been re-installed next September.

His reputation as a contracting builder was recognized by the many commissions he executed on public buildings, notable among them being the new Lake county courthouse.

Mr. Williams resided most of his life in and around Willoughby. He spent his boyhood on the old Williams' homestead on Chardon road, Kirtland township.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Helen Hilborn of Kirtland and Miss Mildred, high school student here, and a son, Jener Williams, also of Kirtland.

Sunday School Reunion

The eleventh annual reunion of Mrs. Clara Phelps House's Sunday School class, formerly of Little Mountain, was held Friday at Mentor Park.

After greetings were exchanged the lunch baskets were unpacked revealing the toothsome edibles for which these cooks are noted. The business meeting was called to order by Mrs. Ada Hine, the vice-president. The secretary's report showed the finances to be in excellent condition. No deaths, one marriage and one birth were reported. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Ada Hine; vice-president, Mrs. George Sweet; secretary and treasurer, Mildred Rayl.

The time for the next reunion was set for the 4th Friday in June, 1016, at the residence of Mr. H. B. Rayl at Mentor.

Twenty persons were present, as follows: Mrs. Gertrude Sweet, Miss Marian and Mildred Traxler, Mrs. Bart Markell and son, Paul, and Josephine Markell; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hart and sons, Charles and Arthur; Mr. and Mrs Charles Beal and son, Kendall Choles, Mrs. Frank Hine and son, Clyde; Mrs. William Reynolds; Mrs. Samuel Rayl and daughter, Virginia, and Messrs. Lester and Harry Rayl and Miss Mildred Rayl.

Field Mice

Every farmer in the country is more or less acquainted with field mice. Other common names for these rodents are meadow mice, pine mice, moles, bear mice, buck-tail mice, and black mice. Where numerous, they are decidedly injurious to farm crops. A very few of the rodents will cause serious injury to lawns, young orchards, gardens, and nurseries.

In lawns and gardens the rodents may most successfully be combated by trapping. The guillotine type of in their runs. Persistent trapping mouse trap should be carefully placed will usually exterminate them. Other methods of combating them are poisoning, frequent cultivation of the soil, and the protection of their natural enemies. Among the latter are foxes, racoons, opossums, skunks, weasels, hawks, owls and crows.

Farmers' Bulletin 670, which may be secured free from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., describes the habits and methods of destroying field mice and discuss the value of protecting their natural enemies.

At a regular meeting of the Leroy Grange on Saturday evening, July 10, at 8 o'clock, Prosecuting Attorney George C. von Beseler will talk on the question of an additional levy of two mills for school purposes, to be voted on at the November election. Everybody invited.

FAINTS FROM HUNGER

Wickliffe Man Collapses From Lack of Food

The following from Thursday's Cleveland Leader is of more than passing interest to HERALD readers, as Mr. Rochelmeyer was for some years the HERALD correspondent at Wickliffe.

Henry F. Rochelmeyer's fifteen months' search for work was abruptly halted yesterday when he collapsed in the State-City Free Employment bureau in the city hall. District Physician D. S. Lowe found him weak from lack of food and sent him to his home, 9818 Bessemer ave. His collapse followed a twelve-mile tour of the city's industrial plants in a vain search for work.

Rochelmeyer has a wife and two children, Esther, six years old, and Stanley, three. His invalid sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Patterson, also lives with him. An agent of the Associated Charities visited the home and promised to provide temporary relief.

Ever since he lost his place as timekeeper at the Wickliffe plant of the Cleveland Crane and Engineering Company in April, 1914, the little family has been living scantily on the earnings of Rochelmeyer at odd jobs and what his wife could earn cooking. He is almost a physical wreck from two serious operations several years ago due to lead poisoning from his old occupation as house painter.

Rochelmeyer, who is 33 years old, was born in Germany and did not learn English until he was twenty. Without schooling he learned to play the piccolo, flute and snare drum, but he cannot get a job in a band or orchestra because he lacked the money to buy a new instrument and pay union dues. The family has been struggling for some years to buy the home they live in. Rochelmeyer practically had starved himself yesterday morning that his children might have food and his long and fruitless tramp was too much for him.

Results From Fertilizers

The publication in this paper a few weeks ago of a short article on commercial fertilizers has aroused a great deal of discussion. In the article referred to the question was asked, "Do commercial fertilizers pay?" This inquiry has caused a large number of people to report the good results which they have obtained by the use of fertilizers. One of the strongest examples of this fact which has been cited is the following: During the past twenty years, the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster has grown crops side by side to test the value of fertilizer. In a rotation of corn, oats, wheat, clover, and timothy, a moderate application of fertilizer was made to one set of plots while no fertilizer what ever was given to the other set. The result has been that the fertilized plots have yielded more than the unfertilized plots beside them by the following amounts: corn, 16 bushels; oats, 15 bushels; wheat, 13 bushels; clover, ⅓ ton; timothy, ⅓ ton. These figures apply to plots where complete fertilizers were used and give the aver- Everyone enjoys a tea at Mrs. Gales. experiment seems to indicate that when properly chosen fertilizers are of considerable value.

In order to help farmers throut the state in choosing the fertilizer best adapted to their land, the College of Agriculture has arranged for soil specialists to visit farmers during August and September. To secure a visit from one of these men, which is free, readers of this paper should write to Clark S. Wheeler, Townshend Hall, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

BATHTUB SLAYER IS SENTENCED TO DIE

Man Charged With Murdering Three Wives to Secure Insurance Found Guilty.

GAINED NAME OF MODERN 'BLUEBEARD'

Two of the Accusations of Killing Are Thrown Out of Court by Judge in Giving His Charge to the Jury Hearing Case.

London, Eng.—A verdict of guilty was returned against George Joseph Smith, who was charged with murdering three of his wives to secure their insurance. He was sentenced to death. The verdict of guilty was based upon the murder of Beatrice Mundy.

Two of the charges of murder against Smith, who has been on trial here on a charge of having killed three wives in a bathtub were thrown out of court by Judge Scrutton in giving his charge to the jury. The court told the jurors that they would not be asked to consider the guilt or innocence of the defendant as regards the deaths of Alice Burnham and Margaret Lofty.

Called Modern "Bluebeard."

Smith gained the name of a modern "Bluebeard" by his connection with the case. In the deaths of his first two wives Smith obtained $15,000 in insurance, and in the last case he was about to collect $4,000 insurance when his arrest for falsifying a marriage record led to a discovery of the tragic coincidence under which the three women met their death. Because of this fact his trial was nicknamed the "Brides in Bath" murder case.

Smith's marital record, according to the prosecution, was as follows:

Jan. 17, 1898, under the name of George Oliver Lodge, he married Beatrice Thornhill.

July 30, 1909, under his own name, he married Edith Mabel Pegler.

Aug. 26, 1910, under the name of Henry Williams, he married Beatrice Constance Annie Mundy.

Nov. 4, 1913, under his own name, he married Alice Burnham.

Sept. 15, 1914, under the name of Oliver Charles James, he married Alice Beatrice Reavil.

Dec. 17, 1914, under the name of John Lloyd, he married Margaret Elizabeth Lofty.

Alleged Wives at Trial.

Mrs. Lodge, as she thought her name was, the first wife, went from Canada to London to confront her husband at the trial. Miss Reavil, the fifth wife, did not appear in court but was stated by the prosecution to be still living. Miss Pegler seemed his favorite. She is still living.

Smith was described as 43 years old, foppish in dress, of medium height and weight, with dark hair thickly streaked with gray, and with a ruddy complexion, which frequently paled to white with rage when he interrupted witnesses in court who were testifying against him, to denounce them as "liars" and "criminals."

He became hysterical with anger when the landlady from whom he rented a room on the day he married Miss Lofty testified that immediately after murdering her, as the prosecution charged, he went downstairs and for several minutes played lively tunes on the organ.

Smith's career, as outlined by the attorney for the crown, was amazing for the power of fascination which he exerted over women and for the cold-blooded daring with which he is alleged to have committed the murders.

GEN. PORFIRIO DIAZ EXPIRES IN FRANCE

Former President of Mexico Had Been in Failing Health for Long Time.

FLED VOLUNTARILY FROM NATIVE LAND

Longed to See Peace Re-established in Country He Once Ruled—Family of Old Spanish Stock With Infusion of Indian Blood.

Paris, France.—Gen. Porfirio Diaz, former president of Mexico, died at 7 o'clock Friday morning. Gen. Diaz's wife, Senora Carmen Romero Rubio Diaz, and their son, Porfirio Diaz, Jr., and the latter's wife were at the bedside when the end came. Diaz had been in failing health since reaching Europe in 1911, after his resignation.

The revolution led by Gen. Francisco I. Madero, Jr., had brought about the aged president's reported pledge early in 1911 to resign his office in a bargain for peace, but on May 24, the day on which the resignation was expected, it was not forthcoming. Riots occurred that day in Mexico City during which many persons were killed.

The National palace was stoned by mobs shouting "Viva Madero," and demanding to know why Diaz did not resign. The next day he read his letter of resignation to the chamber of deputies.

The minister of foreign affairs, Francisco Leon de la Barra, was immediately chosen provisional president and Diaz, of whom for 35 years all Mexico had stood in awe, left the capital secretly the next day to embark at Vera Cruz for Europe. Since then he had lived virtually an exile in Paris and other European cities.

He longed to see peace re-established and was often quoted as having urged President Huerta to quit to prevent a foreign war.

Diaz was born in 1830. His family were of old Spanish stock with an infusion of Indian blood. Left fatherless at the age of three, he was educated at the expense of the bishop of Oaxaca, with the intention of becoming a priest, but he eventually turned to law, and then, at the outbreak of the war with the United States, turned to a military career.

He served throughout that struggle in a militia company which he helped to organize, and after peace was declared he made a special study of military science.

Diaz and one other were the only two in the country who dared openly oppose the continuation of Santa Anna's dictatorship. His execution was ordered, but he escaped and joined Herrera's revolt. He speedily made a reputation as a soldier, and as a brigadier general he was the chief thorn in the side of the French forces when, taking advantage of the Civil war in the United States, they attempted to place Archduke Maximilian of Austria on the throne of a Mexican empire ...

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP CITY BUILDING

WINDOWS, DESKS AND CHAIRS WRECKED

People in the Structure Are Thrown to the Floor, While Large Metal Slugs Whistled Through Air Like Shrapnel From Shell.

New York City.—Anarchists, angered by the conviction of the men who placed a bomb in St. Patrick's cathedral, gave defiance to the detective force Monday night when they attempted to blow up police headquarters by exploding dynamite beneath the offices of Inspector Joseph Faurot, Inspector Grey and the detective bureau. Dynamite in a gas pipe containing a time fuse and concealed in a cheap suitcase was placed in the floor of a basement areaway on the Center-st side, about 20 feet from Grand-st and the cornerstone of the building.

Many Windows Are Smashed.

At seven minutes to 9 o'clock the bomb exploded, smashing all of the windows on that side of the building, reducing a three-inch oak door to kindling wood, hurling desks and furniture from their position and showering glass as fine as powder for 50 feet, both inside and outside of the building.

The windows on the opposite side of the street also were broken and persons in the police department were thrown from their chairs to the floor. Large metal slugs whistled through the air like shrapnel from a shell, cutting through doors, windows and partitions and completing wrecking that part of the basement where the bomb had been placed.

No One Is Injured.

No one was injured, the block being empty at the time and only a passing trolley car in sight. Heavy shades on the windows of the detective bureau, which were drawn, saved Lieut. Edward F. Malley and Patrolman Joseph Evans in the room above the explosion from injury, although glass ...

STEAMSHIP SHELLED, 12 LOSE THEIR LIVES

British Vessel, Attacked by German Submarine, Limps Into English Port a Veritable Floating Shambles.

London, England.—The big British steamship Anglo-Californian limped into Queenstown harbor Monday a veritable floating shambles after having outrun a German submarine. Her wireless apparatus, her bridge and upper works shot away, her funnels pierced and her decks littered with dead and dying, she accomplished the feat vainly attempted by the ill-fated Armenian recently in the same waters. Like the latter vessel, she was laden with transport animals for the British army, a cargo of horses shipped from Montreal on June 24. Panic among the latter during and following the bombardment to which the Anglo-Californian was subjected added to the horror of the situation.

The commander who brought her through the hail of shot, shell and rifle fire—Capt. Parslow—paid for the achievement with his life. He remained on the bridge amid the inferno until blown off by a shell. The officers who assumed his post found his body with one arm and one leg shot away. The others of the crew who shared his fate were, like the captain, horribly mutilated. The dead number 12. Eight others were desperately wounded and nearly all on board suffered more or less in the baptism of fire.

The Anglo-Californian is a staunch steel ship of 7,333 tons and the second in size of a fleet of six fine steamships owned by the Nitrate Producers' Steamship Co., Ltd. Her home port is London. She was built three years ago at Sunderland and is 450 feet long, 56 feet beam, with a depth of 36 feet.

While the crew was largely British, Americans and Canadians were in charge of the cargo of horses. Among these were D. F. Feeney, John Mahoney and John Vaughan of Newport News, Va.; George Rogers of Richmond, Va.; R. L. Martin of Boston, L. C. Carroll of Syracuse, N. Y., Josiah Walker, address unknown, and Patrick Minchan of Montreal. Minchan is the only one definitely described as seriously in- ...

ERRORS FOUND IN GOOD ROADS BILL

Mistakes May Invalidate Sections of the Cass Measure.

INDICATE CARELESS PROOF READING

Whether Courts Will Go Back and Read Journals of House and Senate to Determine What Assembly Meant Is Uncertain.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

FOUR additional errors have been found in the Cass good roads bill and a court suit to determine whether the aggregate errors can invalidate sections of the measure is now almost certain. The new discoveries make the total number of mistakes an even half dozen, and lawyers are closely scanning the entire statute for further possible disclosures. All question, however, that the errors might have been otherwise than purely clerical has been removed for they are of such a kind as indicate only a slipshod method of proofreading. Observers here aver that no measure ever passed an assembly with a larger number of omissions and slips. In one place the word taxes is spelled "taves." In another instance the word "joint" is omitted when the law intended to say that an appeal might be taken to the common pleas court when joint boards of county commissioners could not agree in apportioning the cost of stated improvements. In still another instance the measure is drawn to make it appear that bonds shall mature 10 years "prior" to their being issued. Of course such a miracle could never happen, and what the bill originally said was 10 years "after." In still another case the word "may" is left out of a section intending to authorize the commissioners of two or more counties jointly to improve roads and in a further instance the word "board" is used when "road" was intended to be used, so that the section becomes an absurdity. What may save the law is the fact that the mistakes are so patent that in the majority of cases the real meaning can be gleaned. ...

Publicity Scores for Anti-Lobby Law.

Without the newspapers—publicity—the Ohio anti-lobby law wouldn't be worth the paper on which it is written. This statement is proven by the developments of the last few days. Before the newspapers published the fact that only a fraction of the lobbyists were paying any attention to the law, the larger percentage of these gentlemen were laughing in their sleeves at the statute. But the newspapers were on the watch. It was they who discovered the fact that the lobbyists were playing jokes with what was meant to be a serious enactment, and it was they (the newspapers) who revealed their intelligence to the public. And it was after this intelligence had filtered through the state and had come to the attention of the proper legal officers that the "third house" of the general assembly, in other words, the lobby, got busy and began to notice that there was a law affecting them. The trouble with the law, as with many other laws that become dead letters until the newspapers begin to enforce them, is that no particular person is authorized and compelled to make it operative. It is true that the secretary of state and the attorney general are supposed to see to it that the anti-lobby law is enforced, but unless these gentlemen elect to act their duties remain in the suppositive stage. The situation brings into clear relief the gratuitous duties which newspapers day in and day out perform for the public good. In fact, were it not for fear of the newspapers it is doubtful if more than a handful of lobbyists even would have registered during the late session of the general assembly. The fear of revealment—the dread of the newspaper men, who always are on the watch—is unquestionably the agency which brought the legislative agents to time. Of course there are good and bad lobbyists, and the "good" lobbyists would have registered even if the law did not exist. It was the "bad" lobbyists whom the law attempted to catch, but in a state without watchful newspapers the statute would have remained a dead letter. Which does not mean that the unscrupulous lobbyists all have been trapped or compelled to walk the straight and narrow path. By no means. If all had made clear and frank confessions in their statement of expenses the state probably would sit up and gasp in astonishment. And so would the state during any previous session of any assembly ...

Some Light as to Where Tariff Burden Rests.

Old Fallacy That the 'Foreigner Pays the Tax" Is Exploded—Truth Shown in Motor Car Trade With Canada.

Who pays the tariff?

There used to be a pleasant delusion that the "foreigner paid," the idea being, apparently, that European manufacturers loved us so much that they would pay from 50 to 150 per cent duties on their goods out of their own pockets, and never dream of adding the sum so paid to the final selling price. By way of commentary on that notion—not so popular now as it used to be—the Chicago Journal presents the following true story:

Down in Ohio there is an automobile firm which is trying hard to get a good Canadian trade. With good roads, vast distances and a prosperous people, Canada offers a splendid market for autos. Here, if anywhere, the foreigner ought to pay the tariff tax which Canadian legislators have placed on motor cars. Does the Ohio firm do it?

Not quite. It advertises thus:

Touring car, United States price	$ 750
Touring car, Canadian price	1,050

The Canadian duty on automobiles is 42½ per cent. Forty-two and one-half per cent on the retail American price would come to $318.75, whereas the actual excess the Canadian customer pays for this Ohio car is only $300. The extra $18.75 probably comes out of the Canadian agent's commission.

Does the foreigner pay? He does not, and here is one firm honest enough to say so. The consumer pays, first last and all the time. On automobiles, soap, blankets, matches, window glass and soothing sirup, the consumer pays.

Tried and Found Wanting.

Let us see. Why did not the Hanna Utopia perpetuate itself? The Dingley tariff, which was its legislative ...

DELIGHT TO OBEY

And Direct and Unmistakable Are the Appeals That Come From Above.

It is a great moment when one can look back over his experience and can say with earnestness and confidence, as Paul did, "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Heavenly visions are not infrequent. They come to us right often. The spiritual influences come as quietly and as unseen as the electric current, and with something, too, of its magnetic energy. The Holy Spirit causes a still small voice to be heard in the soul. Duty impresses itself with peculiar force on the spirit. The attractiveness of righteousness, the beauty of goodness, the call of the good—it is a dull and unspiritual soul that does not see and hear these things. Heaven is all about us, not only in our infancy, as Wordsworth declares in the poem, but also in our maturity. How direct and unmistakable are the appeals and the calls that come from above.

A habit of obedience to the heavenly visions marks those that are making greatest religious and spiritual progress. The thing that means most for spiritual development is a determination to respond to those impulses which come from God. Jesus Christ leads those who will follow. He opens new experiences to those that are obedient. He discovers the deeper things of truth to those who obey. He takes all those who are willing to be led into the richer experiences of Christian living.

The deepest personal humiliation into which one can enter is the consciousness that he has not been obedient to the spiritual influences that have touched his life. Esau mourning over the birthright he had bartered foolishly away, Saul, feeling the might of Jehovah upon him and his whole soul aflame with great visions and ideals, and yet, unresponsive to them all; Peter mourning over his failure to be heroic and strong and true when he had thought to play the man; these all are illustrations of the distress and humiliation felt when one has been untrue to the spiritual impulses that have come into his life.

B'ARS GOT HIS FISH

Tale of Woe, as Old Bill Sanders Related It.

Mistake Was That He Went on Expedition Without a Gun—Uncle Joe Bunker Quite Frankly an Unbeliever.

"I stopped at Shinhopple on my way for a few days with the trout on the Beaverkill, in Sullivan county," said John Gilbert, the traveling grocery man, "and Bill Sanders, the Homer of all that country, buttonholed me and said:

"'Goin' to tackle the trout over in Sullivan, eh? Well, what's your gun. Don't 'spect to git away from thar with your trout if you don't take no gun, do you? I left nine pound o' the pootiest trout that ever dodged a fly an' gobbled a worm over along them upper Beaverkill waters to say nothin' of a ten-pound fish basket jest cause I didn't have no gun, 'long about this time last season. Whar's your gun, John?' said Bill.

"I stared at Bill and allowed that I couldn't see why a gun should be a part of my Sullivan county fishing equipment, and he said:

"'B'ars, that's why! B'ars! Better git a gun, John. I'd 'a' lugged home ten pound of old sockdollagers an' wouldn't 'a lost my ten-pound fish basket if I'd only had a gun. I was fishin' on them upper Beaverkill waters and I had jest about filled that ten-pound basket o' mine, bein' only two pounds shy o' runnin' it up to its limit.

"'I clum down to the rocks to git to the spot whar I was goin' to land pair o' one-pounders, settin' my fish basket down at the top o' the rocks fer fear I mought stumble an' jest ez like ez not spill them eight pound o' fish outen it. I got down all right, an' soon had one o' them one-pounders hooked, an' give him line. He run down the creek a hundred foot 'fore he stopped to rest, an' then dinged if he didn't stop right whar a slammin' big b'ar was standin' in the crick doin' a little fishin' on his own account.

"'Well, sir, John,' said Bill, 'it's Shinhopple Gospel truth I'm tellin' you, but 'fore I could wind that pound ...

... died that I stood thar like a bump on a log an' let 'em git away with the hull dinged business. But say! If I'd only had a gun! Better git a gun, John, if you're goin' over to Sullivan arter trout an' 'spect to git away with 'em!' said Bill.

"I thanked Bill, told him I'd think about it, asked him what he'd have, paid for it, and went on my way, but hadn't got around the bend in the road by the red schoolhouse yet when I heard someone hailing me. It was Uncle Joe Bunker, who had taken a short cut and headed me off. I stopped.

"'Say, John,' said Uncle Joe, coming up puffing, 'Bill Sanders was lyin' to you wuss'n Annynias!'

"I told Uncle Joe that I knew it. 'Didn't think I'd swallow any such doings of bears as that, did you?' said I.

"'B'ars?' said Uncle Joe. 'That mought easy 'a' been all right about the b'ars. But tho ten-pound fish basket! Bill Sanders didn't never have no ten-pound fish basket! No, not even a one-pound fish basket!' said Uncle Joe."

JOHN'S DEDUCTION AT FAULT

Result of Bright Youth's Reasoning Brought Consternation to His Employer.

John was the new boy at the boarding house. His mistress was scolding him because he never surmounted an obstacle.

"John," she said, "when I sent you for a two-pound loaf of cake and they had none, why in the world did you not bring two one-pound cakes? That would be exactly the same thing."

John seemed to grasp the knowledge. His mistress thought so until the next day.

She was going on a journey, and being a large, stout woman, told John to engage her two seats in the bus. When John returned she asked:

"Did you have any difficulty?"

"No, madam," replied the hopeless John, "but I could not get them both together, so I got one on the inside and one on the top!"

Unexpected Chicken.

A stranger, arriving in a small town, hailed a passing resident and inquired:

"Can you direct me to a place where they take boarders?"

"Hemmandhaws keeps 'em," the man replied. ...

"Most of them are in jail just now."

HAPPINESS HAS BEEN FOUND

Thrift, According to Banker, Guarantees the Unattainable for Ages, But Does It?

"Thrift," runs a bank's advertisement in a car window, where many a weary eye must see it night and morning, "is the guarantee of happiness."

Man have hunted for happiness for many a century, hunted for it in wealth, in power, in knowledge, in friendship, in accomplishment, in religion, in gratified vanity, in change, in freedom, in crowds and in solitudes. No one has been able to fill a lifetime with happiness. It may not have been intended that anyone should. In all lives there are oases—garden spots in the desert, with springs of clear water, where one may lie in the shade of the trees. But at the end of the road the pain at least matches the comfort, unhappiness balances the happiness. Sometimes old men say that life is worth the trouble it takes to live it, and sometimes they deny it.

"But," says the advertisement in the car, which people stare at when they are tired of looking out of the window or at each other, "thrift is the guarantee of happiness."

Some are thrifty because they cannot possibly procure more than the necessities of life. Others are thrifty from choice. They worry about their money. They wake up in the middle of the night with cold sweat on their brows, having dreamt that the bank has failed. They deny themselves pleasures which might have allowed their lives to blossom out and expand. For the sake of a problematical future they build high walls around the present. They envy those who have more than they, and sometimes they despise those who have less.

With a few, thrift becomes the noblest of virtues. It is so when it is practiced for the sake of others. But it does not guarantee happiness. We must go a little further to find the panacea which shall cure humanity of ills and relieve it of its sorrows. If we could find out the secret we should put the seal on the philosophy of all the ages. For philosophy is a seeking after the solution proclaimed so glibly in the car placard. Philosophy's first question is, whether life is worth living, and its second question is, how it may be made most worth living, that is, happiest.

There is happiness in being without envy, in being without hatred, in being ...

JULY

July gave us copies from this issue of "Catalog" given to a long time ago by the Remsen who untold the story for Caius Julius Caesar. But then nobody cares anything about where the name came from. The natural wonder is, where does it get its name?

July, too, is the month of picnics. A picnic is an excursion into the woods, where we feed ourselves to the ants, chiggers and mosquitoes. If it were not for the picnic potatoes, dance insects might be exterminated within a few years. Picnics, too, bring crabs when all things die. Whenever a community feels itself drying up, it and it needs to do is plan a big picnic. It will swarmingly bring mob with it.

The first few days of July are devoted to fixing up Independence Day parade of boys, but if they do not succeed after the first four days the weapon is abandoned and they pay no more attention to him until the next Fourth rolls around. The movement for a "June Fourth" is running free every year and its promoters sure have only to start another movement for success to come when the nation's bunting will peep off an opening as a leaf and disappear's wooing.

THE FARMER AND THE BANKER

The experience of the farm mortgage, it should be remembered, is getting hard to bankers. The head of a large bank in the East, who has been making an investigation, has found that the farmer who has borrowed heavily upon mortgages is getting not profitable. They are borrowing, on the contrary, because farming is profitable. Now and then, on access, farming is not profitable, and the farmer, with the former is capital for a loss, but, in most instances, the farmer is borrowing money in order to extend their operations, to increase their acreage, take in more land under their control and manage more.

He had believed—with a good many others—that farmers sought land only when driven to it by the pinch of necessity, and that they did it with a view of mortgaging the future to make a living in the present. He was now illegal on a different light. He could have had the view of farming that prevailed in the Middle Ages, if the farmer was a capitalist, a capitalist, and not very definite with figures. The farmer, on the other hand, has not lost, or, at least, has not yet lost, the Rembrandt with the farmer's mentality. Neither has he dented the other.

The farmer, mainly with the banker, knows that the law does not to realize that farm conditions have changed. A good deal of complaining it was probably true that a mortgage on farm property was dangerous because conditions have changed and the farmer needed capital to carry on his business. He knew that there was security for the lender. But this is no longer the case. Advanced methods, increased knowledge of soil and crop requirements, the use of fertilizers, improved implements, modern conditions, bigger returns and higher prices for the produce—all these have combined to make farming a business. It is now a business, and a business based on a business basis.

And as such it is beginning to be recognized by the money lending corporations. Capital is far more friendly toward it today than it was a few years ago. It is ready to extend it, if it is not, and properly, it will be, when it is recognized that the knowledge of farming and farm finance. It seems to know what farmers are doing, and the nature banker has not a good example.

VACATION TIME

He who can't remember back in the olden time in his youth when boats were the only means of transport, and of long vacations, will carry off up in his memory the thrill of the same of Perdue Lake over the Ohio. Perdue is magic to fishermen, but to growing boys it is magic, too, and it is the dark "mid-ocean" of adventure, and more "drudgery," no more counting the days to the time when the boat will notice to respond to the call of the vacation.

Night has made too much of the long vacation. There is no grounds for it. The boat is not a prison, and a vacation farther is to be, midway to be the array of departing that stamps the boy. The boat is a home, and home is home. It is a home in time. It is a home in hours is now, actual ways, to not lose from home trends of the banks. That very boat is home, and home is home, and home is home. It is home, and home is home. It is right to welcome the vacation, and probably to be the time, and the mind ought to be best, and the best, and the best of life, and its home.

He obeyed. "See! There is no one near." He held open the door to the hall. "You must speak quickly. I am to leave this house in an hour. I was given the hour."

"Ah, I can see by your face that you hate him! It is well. That is something. It is but little, I know, after all I have wished for—but it is something for me to treasure—something for me to take back with me to the one sacred little spot in this beastly world of men and women."

"You are the most incomprehensible—"

"Am I not beautiful, Frederic? Tell me!" She came quite close to him.

"You are the most beautiful woman in all the world," he said abjectly.

"And I have wasted all my beauty—I have lent it to unloveliness and it has not been destroyed! It is still with me, is it not? I have not lost it in—"

"You are beautiful beyond words—beyond anything I have ever imagined," said he, suddenly passing his hand over his brow.

"You would have loved me if it had not been for Lydia?"

"I couldn't have helped myself. I—I fear I—faltered in my— Good God, are you still trying to tempt me? Are you still asking me to go away with you?"

A hoarse cry came from the doorway behind them—a cry of pain and anger that struck terror to their souls. They had not heard his approach.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Shot That Failed.

Transfixed, they watched him take two or three steps into the room. At his back was the swarthy Hindu, his eyes gleaming like coals of fire in the shadowy light.

"James!" fell tremulously from the lips of Yvonne. She swayed toward him as Ranjab grasped his arm from behind. Frederick saw the flash of something bright as it passed from the brown hand to the white one. He did not at once comprehend.

"It happened once," came hoarsely from the throat of James Brood. "It shall not happen again. Thank you, Ranjab."

Then Frederic knew! The Hindu had slipped a revolver into his master's hand!

"It gives me great pleasure, Yvonne, to relieve you of that damned, rotten, worthless thing you call your life."

As he raised his arm, Frederic sprang forward with a shout of horror. Scarcely realizing what he did, he hurled Yvonne violently to one side.

It was all over in the twinkling of an eye. There was a flash, the crash of an explosion, a puff of smoke and the smell of burnt powder.

Frederic stood perfectly still for an instant, facing the soft cloud that rose from the pistol barrel, an expression of vague amazement in his face. Then his hand went uncertainly to his breast.

Already James Brood had seen the red blotch that spread with incredible swiftness—blood red against the snowy white of the broad shirt bosom. Glaring with wide-open eyes at the horrid spot, he stood there with the pistol still levelled in a petrified hand.

"Good God, father, you've—why, you've—" struggled from Frederic's writhing lips, and then his knees sagged; an instant later they gave way with a rush and he dropped heavily to the floor.

There was not a sound in the room. Suddenly Brood made a movement quick and spasmodic. At the same instant Ranjab flung himself forward and grasped his master's arm. He had turned the revolver upon himself! The muzzle was almost at his temple when the Hindu seized his hand in a grip of iron.

"Sahib! Sahib!" he hissed. "What would you do?" Wrenching the weapon from the stiff, unresisting fingers, he hurled it across the room.

"My God!" groaned Brood. His tall body swerved forward, but his legs refused to carry him. The Hindu caught him as he was sinking limply to his knees. With a tremendous effort of the will, Brood succeeded in conquering the black unconsciousness that was assailing him. He straightened up to his full height, and with trembling fingers pointed to the prostrate figure on the floor. "The pistol, Ranjah! Where is it? Give it me! Man, man, can I live after that? I have killed my son—my own son! Quick, man!"

"Sahib!" cried the Hindu, wringing his hands. "I cannot! I cannot!"

"I command you! The pistol!"

Without a word the Hindu, fatalist, slave, pagan that he was, turned to do his master's bidding. It was not for him to say nay, it was not for him to oppose the will of the master, but to obey.

All this time, Yvonne was crouching against the table, her horrified gaze upon the great red blotch that grew to terrible proportions as she watched. She had not moved, she had not breathed, she had not taken her hands from her ears where she had placed them at the sound of the explosion.

"Blood! It is blood!" she moaned, and for the first time since the shot was fired her husband glanced at the one for whom the bullet was intended.

An expression of incredulity leaped into his face, as if he could not believe his senses. She was alive and unhurt! His bullet had not touched her. His brain fumbled for the explanation of this miracle.

"Blood!" she wailed again, a long, shuddering word that came not from her lips but from the very depths of her terror-stricken soul.

Slowly Brood's mind worked out of the maze. His shot had gone straight, but Frederic himself had leaped into its path to save this miserable creature who would have damned his soul if life had been spared to him.

Ranjab crawled to his side, his eyes covered with one arm, the other extended. Blindly the master felt for the pistol, not once removing his eyes from the pallid figure against the table. His fingers closed upon the weapon. Then the Hindu looked up, warned by the strange voice that spoke to him from the mind of his master. He saw the arm slowly extend itself with a sinister hand directed straight at the unconscious figure of the woman. This time Brood was making sure of his aim—so sure that the lithe Hindu had time to spring to his feet and grasp once more the hand that held the weapon.

"Master! Master!" he cried out.

Brood turned to look at his man in sheer bewilderment. What could all this mean? What was the matter with the man?

"Down, Ranjab!" he commanded in a low, cautious tone as he would have used in speaking to a dog when the game was run to earth.

"There is but one bullet left, sahib," cried the man.

"Only one is required," said the master hazily.

"You have killed your son. This bullet is for yourself."

"Yes! Yes! But—but she! She lives! She—"

The Hindu struck his own breast significantly. "Thy faithful servant remains, sahib. Die, if thou wilt, but leave her to Ranjab. There is but one bullet left. It is for you. You must not be here to witness the death Ranjab thy servant shall inflict upon her. Shoot thyself now, if so be it, but spare thyself the sight of—" He did not finish the sentence, but his strong, bony fingers went through the motion that told a more horrible story than words could have expressed. There was no mistaking his meaning. He had elected himself her executioner.

A ghastly look of comprehension flitted across Brood's face. For a second his mind slipped from one dread to another more appalling. He knew this man of his. He remembered the story of another killing in the hills of India. His gaze went from the brown fanatic's face to the white, tender, lovely throat of the woman—and a hoarse gasp broke from his lips.

"Sahib! Sahib!" He Hissed.

"No! No! Not that!" he cried, and as the words rang out, Yvonne removed her horrified gaze from the blot of red and fixed it upon the face of her husband. She straightened up slowly and her arms fell limply to her sides.

"It was meant for me. Shoot, James!" she said, almost in a whisper.

The Hindu's grasp tightened at the convulsive movement of his master's hand. His fingers were like steel bands.

"Shoot!" she repeated, raising her voice. "Save yourself, for if he is dead I shall kill you with my own hands. This is your chance—shoot!"

Brood's fingers relaxed their grip on the revolver. A fierce, wild hope took all the strength out of his body—he grew faint with it.

God, he—he can't be dead! I have not killed him. He shall not die—he shall not—" Flinging the Hindu aside he threw himself down beside the body on the floor. The revolver, as it dropped, was caught in the nimble hand of the Hindu, who took two long swift strides toward the woman who now faced him instead of her husband. There was a great light in his eyes as he stood over her and she saw death staring out upon her.

But she did not quail. She was past all that. She looked straight into his eyes for an instant and then, as if putting him out of her thoughts entirely, turned slowly toward the two men on the floor. The man half raised the pistol, but something stayed his hand—something stronger than any mere physical opposition could have done.

He glared at the half averted face, confounded by the most extraordinary impression that ever had entered his incomprehensible brain. Something strange and wonderful was transpiring before his very eyes—something so marvelous that even he, mysterious seer of the Ganges, was stunned into complete amazement and unbelief. That strange, uncanny intelligence of his, born of a thousand mysteries, was being tried beyond all previous exactions. It was as if he now saw this woman for the first time—as if he had never looked upon her face before. A mist appeared to envelop her and through this veil he saw a face that was new to him—the face of Yvonne and yet not hers at all. Absolute wonder crept into his eyes.

As if impelled by the power of his gaze, she faced him once more. For what seemed hours to him, but in reality only seconds, his searching eyes looked deep into hers. He saw at last the soul of this woman and it was not the soul he had known as hers up to that tremendous moment. And he came to know that she was no longer afraid of him or his powers. His hand was lowered, his eyes fell and his lips moved but there were no words, for he addressed a spirit. All the venom, all the hatred fled from his soul. His knee bent in sudden submission and his eyes were raised to hers once more, but now in their somber depths was the fidelity of the dog!

"Go at once," she said, and her voice was as clear as a bell.

He shot a swift glance at the prostrate Frederic and straightened his tall figure as would a soldier under orders. His understanding gaze sought hers again. There was another command in her eyes. He placed the weapon on the table. It had been a distinct command to him.

"One of us will use it," she said monotonously. "Go!"

With incredible swiftness he was gone. The curtains barely moved as he passed between them and the heavy door made no sound in opening and closing. There was no one in the hall. The sound of the shot had not gone beyond the thick walls of that proscribed room on the top floor. Somewhere at the rear of the house an indistinct voice was uttering a jumbled stream of French.

Many minutes passed. There was not a movement in the room. Brood, beside the outstretched figure of his unintended victim, was staring at the graying face with wide, unblinking eyes. He looked at last upon the features that he had searched for in vain through all the sullen years. There was blood on his hands and on his cheek for he had listened at first for the beat of the heart. Afterward his agonized gaze had gone to the bloodless face. There it was arrested. A dumb wonder possessed his soul. He knelt there petrified by the shock of discovery. In the dim light he no longer saw the features of Matilde, but his own, and his heart was still. In that revealing moment he realized that he had never seen anything in Frederic's countenance save the dark, never-to-be-forgotten eyes—and they were his Matilde's. Now those eyes were closed. He could not see them, and the blindness was struck from his own. He had always looked into the boy's eyes—he had never been able to seek farther than those haunting, inquiring eyes—but now he saw the lean, strong jaw, and the firm chin, the straight nose and the broad forehead—and none of these were Matilde's! These were the features of a man—and of but one man. He was seeing himself as he was when he looked into his mirror at twenty-one!

All these years he had been blind, all these years he had gone on cursing his own image. In that overpowering thought came the realization that it was too late for him to atone. His mind slowly struggled out of thrall that held it stupefied. He was looking at his own face—dead! He would look like that! Matilde was gone forever—the eyes were closed—but he was there, going grayer and grayer of face all the time.

He had forgotten the woman. She was standing just beyond the body that stretched itself between them. Her hands were clasped against her breast and her eyes were lifted heavenward. She had not moved throughout that age of oblivion.

He saw her and suddenly became rigid. Slowly he sank back, his eyes distended, his jaw dropping. He put out a hand and saved himself from falling, but his eyes never left the face of the woman who prayed—whose whole being was the material representation of prayer. But it was not Yvonne, his wife, that he saw standing there. It was another—Matilde!

"My God, Matilde—Matilde! Forgive! Forgive!"

Slowly her eyes were lowered until they fell full upon his stricken face.

"Am I going mad?" he whispered hoarsely. As he stared, the delicate wan face of Matilda began to fade and he again saw the brilliant, undimmed features of Yvonne. "God in heaven, it was Matilde! What accursed trick of—"

He sprang to his feet and advanced upon her, actually stepping across the body of his son in his reckless haste. For many seconds they stood with their faces close together, he staring wildly, she with a dull look of agony in her eyes, but unflinching. What he saw caused an icy chill to sweep through his tense body, and a sickness to enter his soul. He shrank back.

"Who—who are you?" he cried out in sudden terror. He felt the presence of Matilde. He could have stretched out his hand and touched her, so real, so vivid was the belief that she was actually there before him. "Matilde was here—I saw her, before God, I saw her. And—and now it is you! She is still here. I can feel her hand touching mine—I can feel—no again. I—I—"

The cold, lifeless voice of Yvonne was speaking to him, huskier than ever before.

"Matilde has been here. She has always been with him. She is always near you, James Brood."

"What — are — you — saying?" he gasped.

She turned wearily away and pointed to the weapon on the table.

"Who is to use it, you or I?"

He opened his mouth but uttered no sound. His power of speech was gone.

She went on in a deadly monotone. "You intended the bullet for me. It is not too late. Kill me, if you will. I give you the first chance—take it, for if you do not I shall take mine."

"I—I cannot kill you—I cannot kill the woman who stood where you are standing a moment ago. Matilde was there! She was alive, do you hear me! Alive and—ah!" The exclamation fell from his lips as she suddenly leaned forward, her intense gaze fixed on Frederic's face.

"Matilde Had Been There."

"See! Ah, see! I prayed and I have been answered. See! God in heaven, see!"

He turned. Frederic's eyes were open. He was looking up at them with a piteous appeal in their depths—an appeal for help, for life, for consciousness.

"He is not dead! Frederic, Frederic, my son—" He dropped to his knees and frantically clutched at the hand that lay stretched out beside the limp figure. The pain-stricken eyes closed slowly.

Someone knelt beside Brood. He saw a slim white hand go out and touch the pallid brow.

"I shall save your soul, James Brood," a voice was saying, but it seemed far away. "He shall not die. Your poor wretched soul may rest secure. I shall keep death away from him. You shall not have to pay for this—no, not for this. The bullet was meant for me. I owe my life to him, you shall owe his to me. But you have yet to pay a greater debt than this can ever become. He is your son. You owe another for his life—and you will never be out of her debt, not even in hell, James Brood."

Slowly Frederic's eyes opened again. They wavered from one face to the other and there was in them the unsolvable mystery of divination. As the lids dropped once more, Brood's manner underwent a tremendous change. The stupefaction of horror and doubt fell away in a flash and he was again the clear-headed, indomitable man of action. The blood rushed back into his veins, his eyes flashed with the returning fire of hope, his voice was steady, sharp, commanding.

"The doctor!" he cried in Yvonne's ear, as his strong fingers went out to tear open the red shirt bosom. "Be quick! Send for Hodder. By heaven, we must save him." She did not move. He whirled upon her fiercely. "Do as I tell you. Are you so damned—"

"Doctor Hodder is on the way now," she said dully. His hands ceased their operations as if checked by a sudden paralysis.

"On the way here?" he cried incredulously. "Why—"

"He is coming," she said fiercely. "I sent for him—ages ago. Don't stop now—be quick! You know what to do. Stanch the flow of blood. Do something, man! You have seen men with mortal wounds—and this man must be saved."

He worked swiftly, deftly, for he did know what to do. He had worked over men before with wounds in their breasts—and he had seen them through the shadow of death. But he could not help thinking, as he now worked, that he was never known to miss a shilling at thirty paces.

She was speaking. Her voice was low and husky once more, with a persistent note of accusation in it. "It was an accident, do you understand? You did not shoot to kill—him. The world shall never know the truth—unless he dies, and that is not to happen. You are safe. The law cannot touch you, for I shall never speak. This is between you and me. Do you understand?"

He glanced at her set, rigid face. "Yes. It was an accident. And this is between you and me. We shall settle it later on. Now I see you as you are—as Yvonne. God, I—wonder—" His hand shook with a sudden spasm of indecision. He had again caught that baffling look in her dark eyes.

"Attend!" she cried, and he bent to the task again. "He is not going to die. It would be too cruel if he were to die now and miss all the joy of victory over you—his life-long foe. He—"

The door opened behind them and they looked up to see the breathless Hindu. He came straight to the woman.

"He comes. Ranjab has obey. I have told him that the revolver was discharge accidentally—by myself, by the unhappy son of a dog, I. It is well. Ranjah is but a dog. He shall die today and his lips be sealed forever. Have no fear. The dead shall be silent—" His voice trailed off into a whisper, for his eyes were looking into hers. "No," he whispered, after a moment—"no, the dead are not silent. One who is dead has spoken to Ranjab."

"Hush!" said the woman. Brood's hands were shaking again, shaking and uncertain. "The doctor? He comes?"

"Even now," said the Hindu, turning toward the door.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Voice of the Wind.

Hours afterward Brood sat alone in the room where the tragedy occurred. Much had transpired in the interim to make those hours seem like separate and distinct years to him, each hour an epoch in which a vital and memorable incident had been added to his already overfull measure of experience. Underneath all was an ever-present sense of insecurity, as if the whole order of life had been suddenly deprived of foundation or support. No matter where he looked, there was not the slightest ray of light in the darkness that enveloped his understanding. Something tremendous had happened, aside from the visible, physical incident that had stunned him temporarily at the outset of the tragic era, something that was beyond comprehension and intangible and which continually loomed up before him as a specter that had neither shape nor substance and yet was as completely positive as anything else that had transpired. He could account for the shooting, the emotions preceding that unhappy occurrence, the intervention of fate that saved Yvonne from death and laid low the substitute, the sense of horror that ensued, the sudden revelation that came to him as he looked into Frederic's face with its closed eyes, and the agony of suspense that now consumed him, but a cloud still hung over him that his intelligence could not penetrate nor his physical being dispel, no matter how hard he struggled to clear a way to the open.

He had seen a vision. Its effect on him had been overpowering. The fortitude of a lifetime had been shattered in a single instant of contact with the influence that had at last made itself felt in physical manifestation after all those years of spiritual attendance. He had never been completely free from the vague notion that Matilde was near him in spirit, that there was an actual identity to the presence that filled his dreams and denied him the boon of forgetfulness for a single instant of the hours when he was awake. He had never tried to banish her from his memory. He wanted to forget her, to put her out of his thoughts altogether, for obvious reasons, but the fact that she remained the dominant figure in his present despite the past was proof, even to him, that she was and always would be the controlling force in his mind if not in his heart.

Now he was ordering himself to face new complexities. He was confronted by the most improbable of hallucinations. It was not an intangible shadow that he now had to contend with but something definite, something that took shape and mocked him. In his bitter indictment against circumstances, he argued that his brain was momentarily unbalanced following the shock caused by the shooting, and that in its disordered state he had pictured things that did not exist. It was only reasonable to assume that he had suffered from the effect of a startling, vivid hallucination, and yet there was a strange, insistent voice somewhere in his clearing mind that persuaded him against his will that he had actually seen the face of Matilde.

Admitting that he had been deceived by a trick of the imagination, there still remained certain indisputable facts to confound him. First of all, the absolute conviction that Yvonne had the power to preserve the life that hung so precariously to the balance. He could not overcome the amazing belief that she, and not the skilled surgeon, would check the sure progress of death. Something told him that she represented a force even mightier than death and that she would prevail, no matter what betide.

He had refused to see the newspaper men who came. Doctor Hodder wisely had protested against secrecy. "Murder will out," he had said fretfully, little realizing how closely the trite old saying applied to the situation. He had accepted the statements of Yvonne and Ranjab as to the accidental discharge of the weapon, but for some reason had refrained from asking Brood a single question, although he knew him to be a witness to the shooting.

Yvonne saw the reporters and later on an inspector of police. Ranjab told his unhappy story. He had taken the weapon from a hook on the wall for the purpose of cleaning it. It had been hanging there for years, and all the time there had been a single cartridge left in the cylinder unknown to anyone. He had started to remove the cylinder as he left the room. All these years the hammer had been raised; death had been hanging over them all the time that the pistol occupied its insecure position on the wall. Somehow, he could not tell how the hammer fell as he tugged at the cylinder. No one could have known that the revolver was loaded. That was all that he could say, except to declare that if his master's son died he would end his own miserable, valueless life.

His story was supported by the declarations of Mrs. Brood, who, while completely exonerating her husband's servant, had but little to say in explanation of the affair. She kept her wits about her. Most people would have made the mistake of saying too much. She professed to know nothing except that they were discussing young Mr. Brood's contemplated trip abroad and that her husband had given orders to his servant to pack a revolver in his son's traveling bag when the time came for his departure. She had paid but little attention to the Hindu's movements. All she could say was that it was an accident—a horrible, blighting accident. For the present, it would not be possible for anyone to see the heart-broken father. Doubtless, later on, he would be in the mood to discuss the dreadful catastrophe, but not now, etc., etc. He was crushed with the horror of the thing that had happened.

The house was in a state of subdued excitement. Servants spoke in whispers and tip-toed through the halls. Nurses and other doctors came. Two old men, shaking as with palsy, roamed about the place, intent only on worming their way into the presence of their friend and supporter to offer consolation and encouragement to him in his hour of tribulation. They shuddered as they looked into each other's faces, and they shook their heads without speaking, for their minds were filled with doubt. They did not question the truth of the story as told, but they had their own opinions. In support to the theory that they did not believe there was anything accidental in the shooting of Frederic it is only necessary to speak of their extraordinary attitude toward Ranjab. They shook hands with him and told him that Allah would reward him! Later on, after they had had time to think it all out for themselves—being somewhat slow of comprehension—they sought out James Brood and offered to accept all the blame for having loaded the revolver without consulting him, their object having been to destroy a cat that infested the alley hard by. They felt that it was absolutely necessary to account for the presence of the unexploded cartridge.

Brood, coming between them, laid his hands on their shoulders, shaking his head as he spoke to them gently.

"Thank you, old pals. I understand what it is you are trying to do. It's no use. I fired the shot. It isn't necessary to say anything more to you, I'm sure, except that, as God is my witness, I did not intend the bullet for Two Old Men, Shaking as With Palsy, Roamed About the Place.

Frederic. It was an accident in that respect. Thank you for what you would do. It isn't necessary, old pals. The story that Ranjab tells must stand for the time being. Later on—well, I may write my own story and give it to the world."

"Write it!" said Mr. Dawes, and Brood nodded his head slowly, significantly.

"Oh, Jim, you—you mustn't do that!" groaned Mr. Dawes, appalled. "You ain't such a coward as to do that."

"There was one bullet left in the revolver. Ranjab advised me to save it—for myself. He's a thoughtful fellow," said Brood. "It has been removed, of course, but—"

"Jim," said Mr. Riggs, squaring himself, "it's too bad that you didn't hit what you shot at."

"Jim," interrupted Mr. Riggs, ignoring his comrade, "I see she's going to nurse Freddy. Well, sir, if I was you, I'd—"

EXPERT ADVISER ON DRESS

Woman Has Achieved Success in Occupation That Is Something of a Novelty.

I heard lately of a plan adopted by one young woman that has worked out well with her, and might be of use to someone else, says a writer in the Pittsburgh Dispatch. She lives at home, but must help the family exchequer, and this is how she does it.

Her one talent lay in her good taste in dress. She had an instinctive feeling for what was becoming, not only for herself, but her friends, and was often called in to consult over a prospective new gown. So that is what she determined to do professionally. She let her friends know that for a certain sum she would give advice on costumes, helping to arrange a whole wardrobe, and from friends she soon branched out to regular clients.

She goes to the house of her employer and looks over everything the lady has. She gives definite instructions as to what each dress or suit or waist requires to bring it up to par. She advises as to the most becoming styles and colors, and lists what new garments are necessary. Of course she regulates the expenditure according to the purses of her various clients.

She has made a success. Many women do not know what to wear, what suits them best, what to put together. She tells them. She also saves them a good deal by her cleverness in adapting what looks hopeless. She can also tell where you should go for materials; she has addresses of tailors, dressmakers and sewing women, and knows they can do what they promise. She is thoroughly up in her chosen job, in fact. She also makes a point of attending carefully to the details of a costume, making sure that each item will harmonize. The work is extremely interesting, and it pays both her and her clients.

Get Your Share of Air.

Breathe all the air you can get, night and day. That's what fresh air is for. The fearsome legend about the baleful influence of "night air" is only another of the carefully nursed insanitary bequests from our ancestors, according to Senior Surgeon Banks at the United States public health service. Whence this superstition arose may only be surmised. Perhaps it is a survival of the primeval cult of sun worship, which led the ancients to classify as evil anything outside the sphere of solar influence. Our forbears were wont to caution their offspring to be careful about the night air ... children were ordered to "come in out of the night air." It is perhaps fortunate for the children living in the Arctic circle, where the nights are six months long, that the Eskimo mothers do not entertain this crude notion about night air, else their progeny would spend half the year indoors.

Patience and Despair.

There is no calamity so great that it cannot be made a little lighter by patience, or a great deal heavier by despair.

A significant indication of the growth of the public betterment movement in the South is furnished by the news item that "the people of a thousand North Carolina communities got together December 3 to improve and beautify their roads and church and school buildings and grounds."

FUNLETS

The proof of the pudding is in the indigestion.

A stitch in the side is often Nature's hint that we should mend our ways.

If you have a good temper hang on to it; and if you've a bad one don't lose it.

To be famous is to have the world know what you ate for breakfast yesterday morning.

The rule in our town is that the man who comes to us recommended as a "booster and a live wire" must pay cash in advance.

When a man becomes a factor in politics two things are indicated. One of them is that he stays by his friends and the other is that his word is good.

Lelia Constance Featheringham, who is forty-seven years old and unmarried, always says to the bride: "I hope you will be as happy as I have been."

A majority of the "tightwads" are recruited from the ranks of those who have managed to accumulate about $20,000, or who eventually will manage to do so.

In our town recently a quiet, reticent man ran for office against a "good mixer." It will please all those who have been annoyed by "good mixers" to know that the quiet, reticent man was elected by a majority of 2,700 votes.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

IN-SHOOTS

No one ever appreciates the grudgingly granted favor.

The spirit of self-preservation is sometimes called a yellow streak.

Great men always realize that the public which applauds today is liable to administer a kick tomorrow.

Flattery in the mouth of a handsome woman is more dangerous than from the tongue of an awkward man.

When a boy cannot keep track of the national batting average he is not making much progress at school.

Strange as it may seem, the fatted calf generally gets what is coming to him before the black sheep confronts retribution.

When some fellows find public opinion too hard to mold they display a desire to knock it into shape with a sledge hammer.

Of course, no one can buy his way into heaven, but it will help some to take notice when the contribution box is passed in church.

POETRY

Poetic feet have no soles.

Poetry is soundless music.

Scarlet poetry is always read.

Poetry is the centipede of literature.

Some poetry is inspired and some is perspired.

Love poems are written to meet her by moonlight.

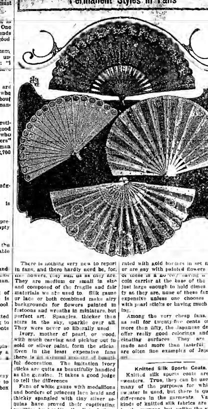
Permanent Styles in Fans



There is nothing very new to report in fans, and there hardly need be ...

... as the genuine. It takes a good judge to tell the difference.

Fans of white gauze with medallions and borders of princess lace braid and thickly spangled with tiny silver sequins have proved their captivating qualities by heading the list of "best sellers." In the month of roses, when graduates and brides must be remembered, this is the fan that is scattered to all the points of the compass. Fans of black gauze with many spangles put on in a set design and scattered over the surface besides, have proved as alluring as ever.

Small celluloid fans that may be carried in the handbag are decorated with gold borders in set figures or are gay with painted flowers. ... Pretty ... of these fans are ... chooses those having much carving ...

Knitted Silk Sports Coats.

Knitted silk sports coats are not sweaters. True, they can be used for many of the purposes for which a sweater is used, but there is quite a difference in the garments. Various kinds of knitted silk fabrics are used for the purpose, but, unlike the sweater, they are lined, and sometimes with a silk strongly contrasting with the outer material. Not infrequently this silk runs over into cuffs and collar. The coats are made along loose wrap lines, sometimes belted or sashed. Semi-norfolk jackets of knitted silk are very fetching and among the most popular coats in the knitted silk fabrics.

About Shoes for the Young People

Following in the shoe tracks of their elders, children and half-grown young people are wearing the best-looking and best-made shoes which have fallen to their lot so far. The correct styles for children as to shape are those that follow the shape of the foot, snug enough not to slip at the heel, and a little longer and broader than the feet they are to clothe, with wide toes, flexible soles and low heels.

The matter of shape disposed of, without room for mistake, there is left a considerable latitude in choice of design and finish. All on the same sensible last, plain, dressy and fancy shoes have received almost as much attention at the hands of manufacturers as those meant for older people—and this is saying a lot.

An attractive dress shoe for a child is shown in the picture, with white kid and patent leather combined in a graceful design. It fastens over the instep and ankles with cut-out straps buttoned over black buttons at the side. The neat machine stitching is an important feature in its finish. A flat ribbon bow decorates the toe.

For the well-grown miss a pretty boot is shown with cloth top, patent leather trimming and laced fastening. It is trim in appearance and broader in the toe than it looks. The narrow effect is accomplished by the long point in the tip of patent leather.

The plain leather sandals made for children's midsummer wear deserve a good word always. Worn without stockings, they help out the youngsters that are denied the pleasure of running barefoot, and are so easy to put off and on that the little people can indulge in the joy of getting their feet on the ground occasionally.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Braid in Millinery.

Serviceable, adaptable, braid has been called upon for trimming the newest tailored hats, and some very unique effects have been obtained from its artistic use. A large chou or rose of folded white silk braid effectively trims a fine white leghorn. A three-cornered dark brown milan has dangling at one side a red apple of soutache braid alluring enough to tempt any modern daughter of Eve. Wide cotton braid with colored borders band the sports hats of panama silk and peanut straw. Watch the braid counters for choice bits if you wish a new hat trimming.

For the Dancing Class.

A frock which would be useful for dancing classes or for home evening wear is carried out in soft white washable silk, with a skirt of novel design, full gathered with a double row of gauging at the back and sides, but finished in front with a plain flat plait. A broad sash of rose colored satin enriches the waist, while the bodice is very becomingly gauged round the shoulders and arranged with a soft chemisette of white linen, gathered high to the throat. In fine French cashmere or in crepe de chine with a chemisette in net and lace, this would make a very pretty afternoon frock for smart occasions.

Ancient Governments Similar.

The Aztecs and the Incas had governments much like those of European nations of the same era. Anthropologists do not consider this an evidence that there existed a prehistoric link between the old and the new worlds. Men under similar environments develop similar institutions.

LITTLE ONE PROUD OF DADDY

Hardly Willing to Admit That There Could Be Anyone Prettier Than He Was.

The Warrenpeas live in a picture-book bungalow, framed in oak trees, shrubbery and flowers, and as Warrenpeas ... is ... and likely to be more so, they go about a bit in a social way.

Mulligan, their chauffeur, had been directed to steer the gasoline boat under the side porch at precisely 7:50. The engine was buzzing as Warrenpea descended the stairs from the owner's chamber, a fine figure of a man in evening clothes, immaculate to the tips of his shoes.

Little Barbara, not quite three, was being prepared for her crib. Generally she's in it an hour earlier, hence up to this time had been deprived of observing how well her good-looking dad carries after-dinner garb.

She was visibly impressed.

"Daddie, you are the very prettiest man I ever saw," she confided, snuggling into his arms for the good-night kiss. "I think you're the prettiest man they is."

"Toodlekins, you're a flatterer," he admitted, though not displeased by her appraisal. "Surely not the handsomest in the world?"

"Well, daddie," she replied, as one who desires to be just above all else, "I haven't seen God yet."

Rich Loot.

Brown was happily rambling through the land of dreams one night when he suddenly awakened to find the long barrel of a pistol unpleasantly close to his face.

"Utter one word," cried a strong voice back of the formidable gun, "and you are a dead man."

"I'm not saying one word," was the meek rejoinder of the submissive Brown.

"What I want," continued the burglar, without lowering the pistol, "is every single valuable that you have in the house, and I want them quickly."

"All right, old man," promptly replied Brown, digging up a slip of paper and handing it to the burglar. "Here is the combination to the refrigerator."

Hint Did Its Work.

When the young British officer, ordered to the front, called on his tailor to get a fresh outfit, the tailor could not forget that there was an unsettled account.

But he felt nervous about broaching the subject.

"I see the enemy," said the young officer, "has had a check."

"Lucky enemy!" said the tailor, wistfully.

The young officer looked puzzled for a moment and then took the gentle hint. Next day the bill was settled.

PRAISE WAS SWEET TO HIM

Neighbor of Impressionable Youth Naturally Pleased at Admiration Bestowed on Singer.

At a concert a young fellow got into conversation with the man sitting next to him. Presently a very pretty girl came on to sing.

"I say, isn't she lovely?" exclaimed the impressionable youth. "And just look at her splendid teeth!"

"Yes, they are very nice," replied his neighbor. "And it gives me much pleasure to hear you praise them."

"That so? Is she your daughter, then?"

"No."

"Are you her brother?"

"No," was the answer; "but I'm glad you like her teeth."

"They're absolutely perfect. But—er—I should—er—what's it got to do with you?"

"I'm the dentist that made them. Perhaps I can do the same little job for you?"

All His Fault.

One witness in a recent police court case was an old Irish woman.

Immediately the prisoner's lawyer asked her a question she began talking and talked and talked and talked.

"Stop! Stop!" ordered the magistrate, hammering on his desk.

But the old woman still talked on.

"Here, you in the witness box, do be quiet!" thundered the magistrate again. "Oh, do stop for a minute!"

And the old woman still went on.

Then the magistrate turned angrily on the lawyer.

"Look here, Mr. M——," he shouted, "you started her—now stop her!"

Time's Changes.

"You know when I was living here some years ago," remarked the man who had just dropped in, "you had a little boy about six years old whom you thought the brightest boy in the world."

TRAVELING MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

"In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from four a. m. to 6 p. m. without giving me any relief and then told me they did not expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the second dose. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. It Pays to Trade at the Store Where Quality Meets Price. —The Up-to-Date

Our Good Reputation Does Not Affect Our Prices

Some merchants whose stores have acquired a good reputation seem to forget the way in which it was gained. Good values, complete stocks, dependable merchandise and prompt service are the means of establishing a store's good reputation, but a few short-sighted people overlook these facts and begin to charge excessive prices, which people will pay for a time, because of their confidence in the store.

Here is one place where you can be sure of finding no excessive prices. It is our constant aim to give you the best values possible rather than to see how much money we can get for our merchandise. We will never willfully do anything which might destroy your confidence in us. We shall continue to enforce the above stated principles, for by so doing we are certain of progress and an ever increasing list of regular patrons.

When may we serve you next?

MADISON DEPUTIES

Arrest Two Men Thought to Be Auto Thieves

Sure enough, the two men arrested to Unionville Friday evening by Deputy Sheriff W. B. Wheeler and Elisha W. Ingersoll of Madison and brought handcuffed to the Lake county jail were undoubtedly automobile thieves. Sheriff O. M. Spink received a telegram Saturday noon from the chief of police at Worcester, Mass., giving the engine number of the Hamilton Cadillac car and the Massachusetts registration. The dispatch said: "We suspect two men stealing car, Francis Valley, aged 25, six feet seven eighths, weight 200 pounds, smooth face, scrofula scars on neck and face. May be in company with James Lightbody. Both recently released from Massachusetts reformatory. Disappeared from this city night car was stolen. They were headed west. Learned yesterday Valley was headed for Ohio."

One of the men arrested by Deputy Wheeler calmed to own the car. The license certificate which he had in his pocket contained a description his name in Painesville as W. C. which fits him fairly well. He gave Hamilton and claimed to be a stock broker. However, the stories told by the two men were rather loose, and the sheriff thought, without a doubt, that the car was stolen by them.

Big Peach Crop

There is no doubt the peach crop in northern Ohio will give Ohioans an opportunity of enjoying home grown fruit this year. Ottawa county is promising from 800,000 to 1,000,000 bushels. This is expected to be the biggest harvest for this section in the history of the fruit industry.

While shippers are predicting low prices, growers are going to make money on account of the enormous crop.

Painesville is Invaded

The invasion of the German army had nothing on the invasion of the south shore of Lake Erie this week when a vast army of the winged pest swarming together from the entire Dominion of Canada, concentrated their attack on the American shores of the lakes.

Every year sees an invasion of the towns close to the lake, by millions of the insects that make life unbearable for campers, store keepers and housewives.

Fronts of stores along Main street were literally covered with masses of soldiers Wednesday morning and on the sidewalk around each of the ornamental lights a quart or more of the winged pests were swept up.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Malin announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Malin, to Robert W. Strong, Lieut. U. S. Army. The wedding will take place early in August.

GEAUGA COUNTY'S

First Settlers Sleep in Neglected Graves

Few sights that greet the eye of a traveler over Geauga County appear more pathetic than the early day burial ground, the country graveyard of the pioneers. It has long since been superceded by the township or village cemetery, larger, better located and suited to modern need.

Early burial grounds were small, located with reference only to the convenience of the neighborhood as it then existed, usually on a hill or knoll alongside a stream. No reference was paid to highways, it was easy then to get anywhere. As the country developed and State roads were established, many of the burial grounds were found away from the highways. One may see them now in the center of fields, far from any road, in pasture lots and, not infrequently, in the midst of green meadows and teeming harvest fields. Fences are maintained about them in various stages of decrepitude.

Some of the early settlers chose to have their dead ever near them, hence one frequently finds a private burial ground with only a few graves, near the site of the old log house that was the home of the pioneer. Frequently there may be but a single grave, and usually the burying place is located alongside the old orchard.

In these private lots or in the old neighborhood graveyard, lie the remains of hundreds of the hardy men who were leaders in their parts. As population increased and newer methods were introduced, the descendants of these pioneers scattered, leaving no one of kin to care for the burial plots. This has left the burial place of many an honored citizen in land long since in the hands of strangers, wholly unfamiliar with and uninterested in the toil and struggles that fell to the lot of the one who slumbers so quietly.

This fact tells why there are so many old country graveyards often neglected, unkempt and uncared for. Why rank weeds hide the mounds long since heaped above the silent sleeper, why marble slabs have fallen to the ground, where time and the elements are slowly obliterating the elements placed there by loving hands. Neglected, forsaken or forgotten, the country graveyard remains wrapped in pathetic solitude.

The epitaphs in these lonely burial plots hark far back into the past. They form an important connection between the people who first sought a home in this State and those who now enjoy the bounty these pioneers forsaw and helped make certain. The march of progress has carried the State far past the place where dwelt these sturdy folk. They choose to sleep in the soil they helped reclaim to civilization, oftimes in the very acres they had wrested from the forest, from which they had driven the red man and the wild animal.

There is no disposition on the part of the present owners of the land about these silent places to disturb the slumber or the rest of those who lie there. Deference is paid these graves; no one cares to disturb the brave souls who chose their home on the frontier, and were content to be buried in the land of their adoption. They may continue to sleep in peace.

What Geauga's burial places seem to need, is the labor of a character similar to the one whom Sir Walter Scott immortalized, who devoted his life's work in traveling from one cemetery to another in Scotland, recutting and enscribing the obliterated epitaphs on the tombstones of the dead, that rising and future generations might read and reverence.—Republican.

WILLOUGHBY

Is To Have The New County Normal School

The school authorities were gratified to hear of the recent decision of the State School Superintendent to place the first Normal school of this county in Willoughby. At the recent convention held at Cedar Point, H. Kendall, county superintendent, was notified of the decision and immediately informed the local board, says the Willoughby Independent.

This school will be in connection with a department of the local high school and under the supervision of the local board of education. A teacher or director will be hired to do the work of instruction, assisted by the county superintendent, who is required by law to devote a part of his time to Normal instruction. In all probability an advanced course of one year will be given, open to graduates of first grade high schools. Those who complete this course will receive a provisional certificate to teach without the usual examination.

The State subsidizes the school to the extent of $1,000 per year, which is intended to cover the cost of instruction. The local board will provide a room and equipment. In order to secure the State aid, a class of at least ten members is necessary.

The local management is desirous of enrolling as large a class as possible, and those contemplating taking such a course should notify the Superintendent at once. Several members of the recent graduating class have decided to take up the work, but many more should enter to make a class large enough to get the best results.

These schools have been established through the State for two chief reasons. The first is that the new law requires normal training of all new teachers, and the larger schools at Kent, Bowling Green and other cities are unable to meet the demand. The second reason is that the State hopes to reach the country teacher by placing such a school in her immediate vicinity.

If present plans are carried out, a teacher will soon be engaged, a course outlined, and the work made ready for the opening in September.

Geneva Dry, Two to One

Burglar tried to force an entrance to the home of Morris Saslaw Wednesday morning but was driven off with a revolver.

Lake County Fair premium list will be ready for distribution next week. The book contains 112 pages and was printed by the Educational Supply Co.

Every pear tree in southern Ohio will have to be chopped down if apple orchards are to be saved from the twig blight which already had destroyed many pear trees, A. D. Selby, botanist at the Wooster college experiment station, declared.

In both this country and Europe his lectures have attracted wide attention. His books are widely read, and he is well known as editor of the Christian Century and associate editor of Biblical World.

Deserved a Medal

Chief of Police Pat Appleton has been busy several days and as a result a half dozen auto drivers have appeared before Mayor Malin and left contributions of $5 to $10.

One victim was Guy H. [illegible], a well known Cleveland salesman who drives one of those little machines that "ramble right along." Guy covered the distance from Elm street to State in just about one-half of the time the law allows. Stopped by the Chief and told to report at the Mayor's office Guy remarked, "Gee! Chief. If I made that distance in the time you say you ought to give me a medal instead of arresting me."

Defendant Wins

Considerable amusement was occasioned by the testimony in the ejection case of J. E. Johnson against Adam Smith, which was heard by a jury in Common Pleas court last Wednesday. Johnson claimed that Smith, who bought a house of him on land contract, should vacate the property as he had not paid the entire purchase price. The jury decided otherwise.

Attorneys G. N. Tuttle and Ralph Ostrander represented the defendant and George C. von Beseler the plaintiff.

MEMBER OF QUARTET, SIXTH DAY CHAUTAUQUA.

L. E. GILBERT

Mr. Gilbert is basso, violinist and reader with the American Male Quartet. Local people will have an opportunity of hearing him on the sixth day of the Chautauqua.

To Sell The Utopia

The Utopia Theatre, which has already cost several local men their entire fortunes, is to be sold to the highest bidder to satisfy the claims of creditors.

Judge A. G. Reynolds issued an order in common pleas court Saturday directing Receiver Barton Stearns to dispose of the property within the next fifteen days. The priority of the liens on the property was also determined by the court.

The order of sale is the outcome of the case of George C. von Beseler, guardian, against the Utopia Amusement Company and others, which was started in common pleas some time ago.

KILLED BY AUTO TRUCK

Ward T. Williams Run Down By Mineral Springs Driver

Ward T. Williams, 47, an engineer at the Diamond Alkali plant at Fairport, died at Painesville hospital Saturday afternoon within a half hour after his motorcycle collided with a truck owned by the Painesville Mineral Springs Co. and driven by Russell Colgrove.

Colgrove claims he was on the right side of the road and going not over eight miles an hour and that Williams evidently became confused and ran his motorcycle into the truck. Others claim that the truck was traveling at a much higher rate of speed.

The body of Williams was taken to Windsor, Ohio, where funeral services were held from the home of his mother, Mrs. M. C. Williams. He had been a resident of Painesville for the past two years.

GERMANY'S REPLY TO AMERICAN NOTE

Reiterates Pledge of Safety for All U. S. Ships Engaged in Legitimate Trade.

LAYS DOWN RULES TO BE FOLLOWED

Says German Submarines Won't Molest American Passenger Vessels If This Government Sees That Boats Do Not Carry Contraband.

Berlin, via London, England.—Germany's offer, embodied in the reply to the American note regarding the sinking of the Lusitania and submarine warfare, which was delivered to James W. Gerard, the American ambassador Thursday night, is:

First, reiterated assurance that American ships engaged in legitimate trade will not be interfered with nor the lives of Americans upon neutral ships endangered.

Second, that German submarines will be instructed to allow American passenger ships to pass freely and safely, Germany entertaining in return the confident hope that the American government will see that these ships do not carry contraband, such ships to be provided with distinguishing marks and their arrival announced a reasonable time in advance.

The same provision is extended to a reasonable number of neutral passenger ships under the American flag.

Should the number of ships thus available for passenger service prove inadequate, Germany is willing to permit America to place four hostile passenger steamers under the American flag to ply between North America and Europe.

The text of the German note to the United States, as handed to Ambassador Gerard, follows:

"Berlin, July 8.

"The undersigned has the honor to make the following reply to his excellency Ambassador Gerard, to the note of the 10th ultimo re the impairment of American interests by the German submarine war.

"The imperial government learned with satisfaction from the note how earnestly the government of the ...

... gerous and difficult for neutral shipping, so actually blockading neutral coasts and ports, contrary to all international law. Long before the beginning of submarine war England practically completely intercepted legitimate neutral navigation to Germany also. Thus Germany was driven to a submarine war on trade.

Arraigns England for Her Activities.

"On Nov. 14, 1914, the English premier declared in the house of commons that it was one of England's principal tasks to prevent food for the German population from reaching Germany via neutral ports. Since March 1 England has been taking from neutral ships without further formality all merchandise proceeding to Germany, as well as all merchandise coming from Germany, even when neutral property. Just as it was also with the Boers, the German people is now to be given the choice of perishing from starvation, with its women and children, or of relinquishing its independence.

"While our enemies thus loudly and openly proclaimed war without mercy until our utter destruction, we were conducting a war in self-defense for our national existence and for the sake of peace of an assured permanency. We have been obliged to adopt a submarine warfare to meet the declared intentions of our enemies and the method of warfare adopted by them in contravention of international law.

"With all its efforts in principle to protect neutral life and property from damage as much as possible, the German government recognized unreservedly in its memorandum of Feb. 4 that the interests of neutrals might suffer from the submarine warfare. However, the American government will also understand and appreciate that in the fight for existence which has been forced upon Germany by its adversaries and announced by them, it is the sacred duty of the imperial government to do all within its power to protect and save the lives of German subjects.

"If the imperial government were derelict in these its duties, it would be guilty before God and history of the violation of those principles of highest humanity which are the foundation of every national existence.

"The case of the Lusitania shows with horrible clearness to what jeopardizing of human lives the manner of conducting war employed by our adversaries leads. In the most direct contradiction of international law, all distinctions between merchantmen and war vessels have been obliterated by the order to British merchantmen to arm themselves and to ram submarines and the promise of rewards therefor and neutrals who use mer-...

SHIP, WITH BLAZE IN HOLD, REACHES PORT

Fire Is Caused by Explosion of Infernal Machine Placed on Board Vessel, It Is Believed, by Holt.

Halifax, N. S.—With flames caused by the explosion of an infernal machine raging in her No. 3 hold and after weathering a gale and a thick fog, the steamship Minnehaha of the Atlantic Transport line was brought safely to anchorage in the lower harbor at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Late in the afternoon it was announced that the fire had been extinguished.

There is no doubt but that the explosion was caused by a bomb placed aboard the vessel while she was lying at her dock in New York City. Officials of the line, after listening to the thrilling tales of Capt. Claret and the 100 members of the crew of the freighter, which carried 15,000 tons of war munitions for Great Britain, stated that they believed it to have been the work of Frank Holt or of a confederate.

The theory of spontaneous combustion was never entertained as the explosion was followed by volumes of suffocating fumes that seriously hampered the crew in their fight and which the officers insisted came from some infernal instrument.

Warned by a message from Secretary of the Navy Daniels that Frank Holt alias Erich Muenter, had boasted that he would send to the bottom some vessel, the name of which he appeared to be uncertain of, on Wednesday Capt. Claret had the lifeboats swung out in readiness for lowering in event of the explosion occurring.

At a quarter past 4 Wednesday afternoon and when the ship was 570 miles southwest of Halifax an explosion of terrific force took place, shaking the vessel from stem to stern, stunning those of the crew who were forward at the time, hurling other sailors in the air and setting fire to No. 3 hold. For two days and two nights in a stiff southwest gale the crew fought heroically and succeeded in saving their ship.

The plans of whoever placed the explosive aboard the vessel to send the ...

LABOR LEADER IS SENT UP FOR LIFE

DENIED NEW TRIAL BY COLORADO JUDGE

Reads Lengthy Statement in Which He Maintains His Innocence and Alleges That Trial Had Been 'Travesty on Justice.'

Trinidad, Col.—John R. Lawson, the labor leader convicted of murder in connection with strike disorders, was denied a new trial by Judge Granby Hillyer in district court here. The labor leader was sentenced to spend the remainder of his life at hard labor in the state penitentiary.

Lawson read a lengthy statement in which he maintained his innocence, charged that he had been made the victim of "a corporation controlled prosecution" and alleged that his trial had been a "travesty on justice."

During the reading Lawson faltered more than once.

With a few remarks to the defendant, Judge Hillyer pronounced sentence. A tense silence prevailed in the courtroom when the prisoner read his statement. He said in part:

Charges Judge Was Prejudiced.

"In the name of the courts of my country, which I respect, I protest against your right to pass any judgment on me. It is undenied in this case that you were appointed to the bench this spring for the trial of myself and my associates. Fresh from the employment of the coal operators of Colorado, including the Rockefellers, who have engineered these prosecutions, yourself a coal company attorney, you were so prejudiced against me that my case in this court was a travesty on justice. The supreme court of Colorado today, in Denver, is reviewing your conduct."

Lawson charged that he had been "the victim of a hand picked jury" and with lips that trembled concluded:

"Solemnly facing iron bars and prison walls I assert my love for justice and my faith in its ultimate triumph; ...

BIG INCREASE OF FARM PRODUCTS

Province of Alberta Shows Increase of Over 20 Millions.

Figures just compiled by the publicity branch of the provincial department show that last year, notwithstanding that quite a third of the province was affected by the drought to a very serious extent, the total value of agricultural products actually produced in the province showed an increase of over twenty million dollars over that of the previous year. Although southern Alberta had a bad year agriculturally, the province as a whole experienced a period of great prosperity, due principally to mixed farming, which is becoming more general with each succeeding year.

The value of mixed farming, in fact, was never better illustrated than last year as the value of the animals slaughtered and sold alone equaled the value of the spring wheat crop, without taking into consideration the value of the butter, milk, cheese, poultry, vegetables, and other by-products of the farm.

Oats was the banner grain crop, 1,147,392 acres being seeded, and producing 34,397,117 bushels, or 30.15 to the acre. Sold at an average of 50c per bushel, these yielded a revenue of $17,198,558. Comparatively little winter wheat was produced, the yield being a little short of one million bushels, but the spring wheat crop amounted to 15,102,083 bushels, the yield per acre being 15.28. At an average of $1.35 per bushel, the value of the spring wheat crop was therefore $20,387,812. The total production of barley was 7,847,640 bushels, which, at 55c per bushel, yielded a revenue of $4,316,202.

Other productions were as follows: Flax, 207,115 bushels, $310,672.00; rye, 261,843 bushels, $138,392.00; speltz, 42,707 bushels, $32,030.00; hay, 200,000 tons, $2,500,000; potatoes, four million bushels, $3,000,000; turnips, three million bushels, $750,000; carrots, 360,000 bushels, $180,000; mangolds, 640,000 bushels, $320,000; animals slaughtered and sold, $20,000,000; butter and cheese, $1,500,000; milk, $3,000,000; ...

NEW AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION

Proposes to Restrict Changes in Organic Law That Are Twice Rejected.

MOVEMENT HAS JUST BEEN LAUNCHED

Amendment, If Adopted, Would Block Woman Suffrage, Since That Issue Has Been Twice Submitted and Twice Rejected.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

It has become fairly certain that two constitutional amendments will be voted upon by the people of Ohio next November. One will be an amendment to prevent the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors anywhere within the state. The other will be an amendment to restrict the further amendment of the constitution. It is just being launched and proposes to prevent changes in the constitution that are twice rejected by the electors from being voted upon again for six years. This second amendment, for which petitions are now being circulated, is vastly interesting in that it proposes a modification of the right of the voters to employ the initiative and referendum in changing the constitution. Voters are now permitted to propose constitutional changes and force them to popular vote by procuring petitions for such changes bearing 10 per cent of the total vote in the state. If such changes are rejected, they can be resubmitted without restriction. Now, the latest proposal is to so change the constitution that any amendments that are twice rejected hereafter, such amendments cannot be submitted to the people again for six years. There is said to be some question now whether or not enough signatures can be obtained to launch the new amendment, for it must have 112,000 names before Aug. 1. The temperance forces charge that it is essentially a wet maneuver, since, if adopted, it would have the effect of blocking any further prohibition campaign for six years in the event that prohibition fails this year. Also it would block woman suffrage, since that issue has been twice sub-...

Fair Judges Still Unnamed.

Ordinarily the judges for the state fair are selected much earlier than this, but because, if the Mallow law stands, the coming state fair will be under the management of the new state board of agriculture, and the members of the moribund state agricultural commission feel that that body should choose the judges, they are still unnamed. The Mallow law will become effective, if a referendum is not called upon it, on the 22nd of July and the new state board will come into existence as soon as Gov. Willis makes his selections. It is feared by the advocates of the reduction of the admission fee to the state fair that the new board will not be favorable to it, for the reason that they will naturally reflect the sentiment of the governor, who is understood to be averse to trying the experiment lest it result in making the first fair held under his administration a pronounced failure financially. The present management, however, has announced concessions to the effect that a season ticket good for three admissions a day will be sold to exhibitors and concessionaries for $1 each. No employee will be given passes, but in lieu of that their per diems will be increased 60 cents a day each. Among the interesting new competitions provided for at the fair this year is a contest in horseshoing and in saddle horses. A $800 purse divided into seven prizes, is offered in the saddle horse contest, and $75, divided in five prizes, for horseshoing. In the poultry department the management has added competition classes in pheasants, guineas and eggs. They have also provided for competition all through the poultry department by young and old pens. This has never been done before. Spotted Poland China hogs will also be offered prizes this year for the first time. The management has decided to secure more competition in the county agricultural exhibits and has added $400 to the prizes heretofore offered.

Free Employment Agencies.

The state industrial commission has just given out its report of the operations of the seven free employment agencies of the state for the year ending June 30, 1915. These are now conducted in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo, Dayton, Akron and Youngstown, but the agencies in the two cities last named were operated only during the last three months of the year, having been established only on April 1 this year. It is not gener-...

SEES BIG WHEAT CROP THIS YEAR

Agriculture Department Places Prospective Yield at 963,000,000 Bushels.

CEREAL SHOWS WELL IN BUCKEYE STATE

Oats Promises an Unusual Production, the Prospect Being Given as 106 of Full Average Crop—Corn Falls Down to 87 Per Cent.

Washington, D. C.—Prospects of a billion bushel wheat crop this year were increased during last month. Basing its estimate on July 1 crop conditions, the department of agriculture has just placed the prospective production at 963,000,000 bushels, compared with 950,000,000 bushels estimated from June 1 crop conditions.

Corn, the nation's greatest crop, should yield 2,814,000,000 bushels with continued favorable weather, the crop reporting board estimates from this month's condition figures. That compares with 2,672,804,000 bushels harvested last year.

Ohio, according to the table, maintains its 10 year average of 85 per cent on its corn crop. There are 3,798,000 acres planted, with an estimated production of 146,800,000 bushels.

In winter wheat Ohio stands 11 per cent above its 10-year average of 80, or 91 per cent. The estimated production is given as 37,600,000 bushels.

Ohio also is making a great showing in its oats crop. The 10 year average is 83 per cent and the average for this year is shown to be 97, an increase in percentage of 14.

Crop Report for July 1.

The department of agriculture's July crop report, just announced, shows general conditions the country over to be as follows:

Winter wheat—Condition, 84.4; indicated yield an acre, 16.6 bushels; production, 668,000,000 bushels.

Spring wheat—Condition, 93.3; yield, 15.3; production, 295,000,000 bushels.

WELCOME THE ISSUE

Democratic Party Confident of Victory on Its Record.

Economic Development of the Country Has Been Pronounced Owing to Wise Legislation—Federal Reserve Act One Case in Point.

Our friends the Republicans are reported to be confident of winning the election of 1916 on a platform demanding that "hostility to business come to an end" and that legislation tending to the nation's economic development be passed by congress. There is no issue on which the election could be fought which the Democracy will more willingly meet.

What has the Republican party done for the economic development of the country that the nation should think of turning to it? If there is one thing in which that party has shown more object helplessness than in framing legislation to aid in national economic development it has been in commanding popular confidence in its own honesty and sincerity where such legislation is concerned.

But one piece of economic legislation of the past quarter century has been hailed with approval by all sorts and conditions of men in these United States—radicals and conservatives, bankers and farmers, Wall street and the West. That is the federal reserve act, framed by a Democratic congress and signed by a Democratic president. It put an end to 50 years of financial "muddling along," 50 years of statutory violation of every natural law of finance, 50 years during which the measure of our financial peril was the extent of our economic prosperity, and every great harvest threatened us with stringency. The federal reserve act has made it possible, for the first time in our history, that we should compete in the markets of the world with other nations whose manufacturers and merchants are greatly helped abroad by foreign branches of domestic banks. There are few current discussions of plans for new business enterprises which do not contain frequent incidental reference to the new possibilities open before business by reason of the passing of this monumental piece of legislation. ...

Elevating the Standard.

"You don't seem to have the trouble over your baseball games that you used to have," remarked the visitor at Crimson Gulch.

"No," replied Three Finger Sam. "We made a new rule that keeps everything nice an' orderly. Nobody but the umpire is allowed to carry a gun."

The Thing Impossible.

"But can you keep it from drawing mosquitoes?" we cried.

The Real Thing.

The furniture man drove up to the door, and the new extension dining room table was carried in.

Little Willie stood watching as his father and mother, one at each end, pulled the table apart. His eyes grew big as his father put one board after another in place until the table was double its original length.

"Gee!" said Willie at last. "I always thought addition tables was only something in the arithmetic book."

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Avowal of Dancer's Nationality Came Altogether Too Late to Affect Ardent Frenchman.

It happened in a big cafe in the Paris boulevards, close to the opera, and the time was the evening of the day on which Italy declared war against Austria, says the New York Evening Post. Into the cafe came Mlle.—well, we will call her simply Mlle. Ravissante—but she has a South-of-Europe sort of name and is a famous dancer. In she floated lavishing smiles right and left. Somebody leaped up and cried Viva l'Italie, and as the young woman passed by his table seized her and gave her a ...

OUR PROSPEROUS COUNTRY

The Federal crop estimates for 1915 figure out about 92 bushels of wheat and 104 bushels of corn for every man, woman and child in the United States. This along with other barley, rice, potatoes, apples, peaches, plums, cabbages, onions, lettuce, oats, turnips, peas, winter melons, watermelons, cherries, apricots, chickens, ducks, chuck roasts, hens, bacon, ribs, pig-feet, sausage, tenderloin, cream, fish, sardines, deer quarters, pheasants, partridges, fire hydrants, soap, axes, alder, goose and leather berries, corsets, cheese, kisses and a land area equal to one-twelfth of our entire domain. This along with the bare habitable provinces for our national tame stock will enable America to carry through for another year the business of supplying all members and relatives and have something besides for the Red cross and other international and suffering peoples on the far side of the Atlantic.

The people of the United States should be very thankful for and happy over the more than plenty which they have and they must feel the same way about their prosperous cousins that we always say that is nothing the matter—Europe will begin some more shoulders a season that will come in for personal.

When one thinks of the tribulations of American land, tobacco, the rule of Peace, and how all this could be transferred to the War industries—whatever absolutely strength time over—the Entente Entente not to engage in a bloody conflict, it is possible to see a little humor.

CREED FOR AMERICANS

I believe in the United States, one and indivisible, in her mission as the champion of humanity—as the friend of the weak and oppressed, in the sanctuary, dignity and inviolability of American citizenship, in peace with honor; in friendship with all nations that respect our rights, in amicable alliances with none, in reasonable preparedness for national defense, by sea and land; in abiding no sacrifice needed to hand down to the future the priceless treasures bequeathed to us by the zeal in the memory of brought the Western hemisphere free from the tyrannies of foreign domination, free and unfettered, to the majestic of free men for self-government, the love of home and country, and in the unfaltering resolutions that government of the people, for the people, by the people, shall not perish from the earth.—Chicago Herald

It is very strange that the educators and the parents who dream of empires based upon conquest never read history to any purpose. It is now time to stop force for rights, because the time is coming when the purpose of Germany's national will upon an idea land. Diplomacy will never be able to make Napoleon out of Germany. CHAPTER XIX—Continued.

Brent stumbled into bed with an incoherent exclamation of despair. Meanwhile Mrs. Brent, frantic, was saying:

"I was just going to say, Jim, that if I was you I would pray the Lord that she's going to do it," wheezed she. "Here, Jerusha, take the lamp."

Brent rolled his cold eyes in the direction of the speaker.

"What does Doctor Hodder say?" demanded Jerusha, peering in the remote beyond of the door.

"Nothing, except that he's as good as dead," said Mr. Brent.

"Ain't yer a chance in a million," said the female.

They were startled to see Broad Willie. He hadn't been so thin-skinned by the other days. His nerves were going, too, he was saying to himself a little later. Twenty years ago he would have stiffened his back and taken it like a man. It did no good to think that their might have broken the news to Mr. Brent in more considerate fashion.

"You can depend on me, Jim, to do all I can," he said, huskily. "I'm grateful, Remember how we stood you back there in Colorado when all the fool devils were pitchin' at you? Remember? Well, sir, we'll settle—"

"Shut up, you idiot," said Jim, a bother brought back to himself by such encouragement, but stopped to wonder where on earth Broad Willie got his cure and stick deliriously into a whole, a deep grudge on his life.

"I guess we'd better go," whispered Jerusha, who was crying in the most genuine and fitting manner. "We don't want to disturb the poor man. Good night, Jim, and don't worry about Hodder. Mr. Brent, we'll be over early in the morning. Good night, Jim, and don't worry about Hodder. Good night, Jim, and don't worry about Hodder. Good night, Jim, and don't worry about Hodder

TRAVELING MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

"In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from four a. m. to 6 p. m. without giving me any relief and then told me they did not expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the second dose. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. Ireland, Louisville, Ky. Obtainable everywhere.

A Talk to the Boy

STRICKLAND W. GILLILAN.

(Here Chautauqua Week.)

Come, boy, to your dad. Let me tell you some things
Of the man who loved me as I'm now loving you,
For the heart is a pendulum heavy that swings
Aye forward and back as all pendulums do.
And tonight mine has swung far away to the time
When your dad had a dad, just as you have, my son—
A dad to whose arms I was welcome to climb
When his day in the cornfield or meadow was done.

I crept into arms that were stronger, my lad,
And his hands—oh, so tender!—were harder than mine,
For the world had been harsh with the dad of your dad,
Yet I wish that my soul were as gentle and fine
As the one roughly clad in that body of his,
That so lavishly gave of his strength for one
Who now shelters you. And my prayer's burden is
That you may think thus of your father, my son.

What I've gained I have gained—his the heavier cost;
He in embryo held all things I have done;
Yet I fear—gravely fear—there are things I have lost
That sadly diminish the triumph, my son.
So lie close, little man—there's so little we know,
Except that I love you and you can love me.
And I smile with content that you're loving me so,
And am glad in that love, as my dad used to be.

Magician Booked For Chautauqua Is Great Lover of Children

RENO, THE MAGICIAN.

For more than thirty years Edward Reno, who is to appear here on children's night of Chautauqua week, has been a magician, and during that time he has been a world traveler. He has studied his art in India, Syria and Egypt, and his program includes many new inventions in magic and illusions. His sleight-of-hand is extremely amazing, and his tricks are decidedly up to date.

In giving his evening of mysterious entertainment Reno uses a number of pets, including a white rabbit, two doves, a duck and a guinea pig. Children in the front rows usually take great pleasure in fondling these pets when they are not in use on the stage.

Appearing with Reno on children's night will be the American Male Quartet in a program of vocal and instrumental music, readings, cartoons and imitations.

Mortified.

"What is the matter with your old cat? She looks disconsolate these days." "Pap hurt her feelings dretfully. Brung home a mouse-trap last week. I told him not to do it. Cats has got their feelings same as anybody else."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bang! Goes Ambition.

Another pathetic little feature of everyday life is the way a man at twenty-one will start out with absolute confidence that he is destined to be a leader of men and at forty will regard himself as a reasonable success if he can keep from being a goat.—Ohio State Journal.

Miss Grace Homan of Cleveland is spending part of her vacation with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh.

Mrs. Clapp had what might easily have been a fatal accident Monday, her auto turning turtle pinning her under it until help came, but she escaped uninjured.

Last Tuesday Mrs. Mary Quincy entertained her Pedro Club from Painesville. Mrs. Hungerford carried home 1st prize, Mrs. Warren 2nd, while Mrs. Smith was consoled. Delicious refreshments were served. The club say Mrs. Quincy is an ideal hostess.

Any one with items please call 79W.

Ross Marsh is extremely busy in his garage, having eight automobiles there Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Margaret Burridge wishes the item corrected that stated she made the complaint against Mrs. Holmes. It was a different member of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Judd and family entertained Mr. Stanley Page of Chardon recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dawson moved to Cleveland Tuesday. Mr. Dawson has gone to his mothers, Mrs. Faucett, to stay a few days, as his health is very miserable.

The Knights of Pythias installed their new officers Monday evening, and the Lady Templars are to install theirs Wednesday evening.

Her Secret of Health.

A vigorous old lady when asked the secret of her eighty-three years of health replied: "I never allow myself to fret over things I cannot help. I take a nap, and sometimes two of them, every day. I do not carry my washing, ironing, dressmaking, or baking to bed with me; and I try to oil all the friction out of my busy life by an implicit belief that there is a brain and a heart to this great universe, and that I can trust them both."

The New and the Old.

The old-fashioned man who used to get mad when his wife had hash for supper now has a son whose wife makes hash in a casserole, calls it a French name and makes her husband enjoy it.

Two High Spots

DISTRICT HOSPITALS

For Care of Tuberculosis Patients May be Established

For the purpose of stimulating interest in public health work in general, and the anti-tuberculosis campaign particularly, Miss Elizabeth Davison has been sent to the northeastern part of the state by the Ohio Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. She began her work on Monday and will continue her activities in this section for an indefinite period.

Interest in these matters has been shown, to an encouraging extent, by organizations and individuals in the northeastern counties, and it is the co-ordination of the different agencies already existing toward a definite program of work that Miss Davison will direct her efforts. While a general educational campaign will be carried on for the purpose of calling the attention of the public to public health matters, one of the most important things which will be undertaken is an extension of the public health nursing movement in this part of the state.

Another project in which Miss Davison hopes to interest the people of Lake, Ashtabula, Geauga and Trumbull counties is a district hospital for the care of tuberculosis persons. This is a matter in which the Ohio Society and the State Department of Health are greatly interested. The institutions already assisting in Ohio offering hospital care for tuberculous persons, are inadequate. As knowledge of the nature of tuberculosis and the value of hospital and sanatorium treatment spreads, more people are seeking admittance. The public health nurses are discovering new cases almost daily and when conditions are not suitable for home treatment, find it impossible to get patients into the already crowded hospitals in the state. A hospital or sanatorium where cases likely to spread the disease can be placed for supervision, and where incipient cases can be sent for treatment to arrest the disease, is a most important factor in the effort to stamp out the disease in a given community. The campaign now on in the state aims to supply each section of Ohio with such an institution.

GASOLINE THIEVES

Steal 35 Gallons From Groceryman Richardson

Thirty-five gallons of gasoline were stolen from the rear of the Richardson grocery, East Madison ave., early Monday morning. It is believed the thieves occupied two automobiles to carry away the gasoline. Monday, after the discovery of the theft, Grocer Richardson in tracing the thieves east found a large funnel belonging to him alongside the road about a mile from his store. Beside it was a large empty milk can which had been stolen from a station near Willoughby. The thieves had used the milk can to haul away the oil, and later must have filled their machines with the oil. The police have been unable to successfully trace the robbers.

Ancient Life of the Seas Comes To Aid of Depleted Soils

(By G. J. Wilder.)

Farming with lime has aided many to emerge from the darkness to the light. It has aided nature to set forth her best—for in the lime deposits we have stored up today the life of the seas of many years ago. These deposits are of oceanic origin and when placed upon the fields give results which are almost unbelievable.

The best crops to be found growing throughout Ohio today are in those counties where the farms are well supplied with lime. Many farmers have thought that it was unnecessary to lime if their soils were underlaid with limestone, but that depends largely upon whether or not there is any lime left in the upper six or eight inches of soil.

During the past week the writer has had occasion to visit several farms which are near to the limestone quarries, and upon special investigation has found that the yield and the quality of grain has been materially increased by an application of two to four tons per acre.

The wheat stands up better upon these plots—the straw seems to have stiffness and the grain is well matured. It will all be harvested and will give a yield equal to the best upon any of our Ohio farms.

The country and the markets are growing. People are beginning to realize that all wealth starts from the soil and the soil is receiving more attention today than it has ever received before.

Experiment stations and agricultural colleges have predicted a great future for the use of lime and ground limestone upon thousands of farms throughout the corn belt and the day has long since passed that the farmer is not well versed upon the financial benefits to be derived, for he realizes that he must feed the world. And in order to do this he must help the land to help itself.

Cleveland-Ford Tire Co, which expected to locate in Painesville, seems to have "skidded" to Ashtabula.

Fast horses are being worked out at the fair grounds and will be ready for the big days, Sept. 14-17.

Clayton Johnson, 12, South State st., was accidentally shot in the hip with a 22-calibre revolver Wednesday afternoon.

AUTOS FROM NEARLY EVERY STATE
CAN BE SEEN ON LAKE COUNTY ROADS

It is a truly national highway that runs across Lake county. If any one desires proof of this he has only to look at the license tags of motor cars at this time of the year, when so many people are taking long vacation tours. Sunday within the space of 15 minutes, there passed through the town of Painesville automobiles from Maine, New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois and one other state whose number-plate the observer was unable to read as the car went thru. Two cars from Maine, one going east and one west, passed each other, apparently without discovering they were, in a comparative sense, neighbors. During these 15 minutes Ohio cars hardly outnumbered the aggregate of cars from other states.

In Europe, the distance from home represented by these cars would have made them originate in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Holland, Belgium, France, Italy and possibly England and Spain. Instead of hailing from states of a Union, and representing one country, though perhaps not one nationality, they would have represented a host of peoples, having different languages, customs and laws and now, unhappily, in large part engaged in the business of killing one another. Yet the section of the United States traversed by these cars is but a small part of the whole. It is a good thing for Americans to look at a map of their country, with a map of Europe drawn over it in outline. We take in the whole—Russia included. Americans need to think in terms of big distances in order to escape growing provincial.

There are other, and less sentimental aspects of the automobile tourist, for the automobile has brought about a partial revolution in the summer vacation industry. This revolution affects chiefly resorts, city hotels and railways. For several years the decline in business at country and seashore towns which formerly entertained a large number of summer visitors has been traced to the automobile. People who had formerly visited these places, it was said, were taking automobile tours. They did not come to stay unless it was to stay over night, and this they often preferred to do in a city or large town, because they could obtain greater conveniences at the hotels. This change of habit has, obviously, caused a considerable loss of business to the railroads. And not merely those who go on tours have forsaken the railway for the automobile, but many who go to the shore or the country for an annual stay at hotel or cottage make the journey in their cars. The development of the automobilists' hotel—generally an expensive luxury—is too familiar to need comment. To follow the ramifications of changed vacation habits due to the automobile would be a pleasing pastime for a person addicted to economic research. But that there have been considerable economic changes is not to be doubted.

—14—

"No, I do not forget, James. There was but one way in which I could hope to steal him away from you, and I went about it deliberately, with my eyes open. I came here to induce him to run away with me. I would have taken him back to his mother's home, to her grave, and there I would have told him what you did to her. If after hearing my story he elected to return to the man who had destroyed his mother, I should have stepped aside and offered no protest. But I would have taken him away from you in the manner that would have hurt you the worst. My sister was true to you. I would have been just as true and after you had suffered the torments of hell, it was my plan to reveal everything to you. But you would have had your punishment by that time. When you were at the very end of your strength, when you tremble on the edge of oblivion, then I would have hunted you out and laughed at you and told you the truth. But you would have had years of anguish—years, I say."

"I have already had years of agony, pray do not overlook that fact," said he. "I suffered for twenty years. I was at the edge of oblivion more than once, if it is a pleasure for you to hear me say it, Therese."

"It does not offset the pain that her suffering brought to me. It does not counterbalance the unhappiness you gave to her boy, nor the stigma you put upon him. I am glad that you suffered. It proves to me that you secret[ly] ... and draw back from them. They convict you, James."

"Now I can see why you have taken up this fight against me. You—you know she was innocent," he said in a low, unsteady voice.

"And why I have hated you, eh—e? But what you do not understand is how I could have brought myself to the point of loving you."

"Loving me! Good heaven, woman, what do you—"

"Loving you in spite of myself," she cried, beating upon the table with her hands. "I have tried to convince myself that it was not I but the spirit of Matilde that had come to lodge in my treacherous body. I hated you for myself and I loved you for Matilde. She loved you to the end. She never hated you. That was it. The pure, deathless love of Matilde was constantly fighting against the hatred I bore for you. I believe as firmly as I believe that I am alive that she has been near me all the time, battling against my insane desire for vengeance. You have only to recall to yourself the moments when you were so vividly reminded of Matilde Valeska. At those times I am sure that something of Matilde was in me. I was not myself. You have looked into my eyes a thousand times with a question in your own. Your soul was striving to reach the soul of Matilde. Ah, all these months I have known that you loved Matilde—not me. You loved the Matilde that was in me. You—"

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live.

Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong.

"I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefitted by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."—Mrs. MARTHA SEAVEY, Box 1144, Unionville, Missouri.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

What He Might Do

Official information has reached Washington that a Danish company has contracted with the Chilean government to establish three lines of steamers between Copenhagen and Chile, one of which will make Guayaquil a port of call. The first steamer, the Cathay, a 7,000-ton modern vessel, arrived in Guayaquil December 14.

ONCE-OVERS

Don't worry. Get busy.

Have more confidence in yourself.

Don't worry over that task you have to do tomorrow.

Don't waste your breath and breathing spell in picturing what may happen if you fail to meet requirements.

Remember that the fellow who can pick the most flaws in a neighbor's character has usually most flaws in his own.

Look out for the man who is constantly drawing attention to the weakness of others. Invariably he has a lot to cover up himself.

Other men have succeeded in similar undertakings. Their success you will find was a matter of concentration, determination, industry and self-reliance. That's what you need as well.

One reason so many men are unsuccessful is that they worry over the hard problems of tomorrow till they are in such a state of nervousness that they can't tackle the job properly when they do come to it.

BILLY SUNDAY'S PUNCHES

The higher you lift a little man the more he shrinks.

All sins have blue eyes and dimples when they are young.

The right kind of a man never loses more than one finger by fooling with a buzz saw.

The devil hates a happy home as bad as a saloon keeper hates a prohibition preacher.

The woman who marries a man to reform him has more faith in human nature than St. Paul had.

The young man who is willing to go through life sawing on the second fiddle will never lead the band.

A man with good gray matter under his hat can learn more by stubbing his toe in the dark than a fool can learn by going to college.

The man is headed straight for the pit who is living as the devil wants him to, whether he is a gambler or a pillar of the church.

Nobody spends much time looking at wax figures in store windows, but a live man there who is doing something always draws a crowd.

When the devil wants to run his claws clear through a man and clinch them on the other side he makes him believe that fooling with booze won't hurt him.—Cosmopolitan.

To borrow is human; to forget to pay back is still more so.

No woman can lace herself as tight as a man can drink himself.

More men might attend church if fish would refuse to bite on Sunday.

But deception is seldom written on a woman's face; it is usually painted.

But a woman can sharpen a pencil about as quickly as a man can thread a needle.

Take care of your pennies and your heirs will not have a care until they are penniless.

All Sorts of Neckpieces

Just how it happened is one of those things that cannot be explained, but in this year of grace May and June beheld the summer girl (and the matron) bedecking themselves with light neckpieces of fur. No matter how summery the gown and hat, the thin silk hose and light, low shoes, a scarf of white fox hugged the throats of about nine out of ten of those who keep up with the merry pace of fads.

In the wake of summer furs—which looked especially well with white turbans—came other neckwear and now there is a limitless variety from which to choose with a growing demand to inspire its expansion. Next after white fox come the angora pieces. These are shown in short collars, like that at the upper right in the picture, and in short boas. Smart big pompons made of the fur to match these neckpieces are worn on small hats and turbans. The little ... Just now it is in more general demand than any other and heads the list of favorite neckpieces. The newest ostrich boas are short and finished with long tassels of narrow silk braid. Nestling in the long and dainty fibers are beautiful millinery roses in a small cluster, or a single rose and bud shows off to wonderful advantage so placed. These ruffs are fastened with tassels hanging at the back. Occasionally a short neckpiece of white marabou is seen, but the longer line of the ostrich makes it the favorite.

Besides furs and feathers there are the collars of malines and nets made in variety so great that everyone may be suited.

NO LONGER A HERO

Billville's Prominent Citizen Thrown Into the Discard.

End Came When Committee Walked In at Unfortunate Time While He Was Facing Extraction of Aching Tooth.

"Sad, isn't it, Smithers, how one who has been looked upon as a great hero suddenly turns out to have a yellow streak and is thereafter considered as mere punk by the community that erstwhile had lauded him to the skies?"

Smithers asked Bilkins who had gone wrong now.

"Well, I went back to the old home village last week, only to discover that a bronze tablet that had been erected on the village library wall extolling the bravery of Elphanus Moon had been removed and was kicking about the yard, the Billville Boys' Hero club had discarded their banner and organized as a baseball aggregation and that one E. Moon was in a state of total eclipse, judging from the scathing remarks the store loafers were indulging in.

"Elph Moon started out in the hero business when he was a schoolboy by rescuing a playmate who had been carried to the edge of the dam, crawling out to the lad and pulling him to safety while a lot of grown men stood on the bank and were asking each other why somebody didn't do something.

"We started a subscription paper, bought Elph a watch, got him up to the town hall and plastered him all over with praise while we shoved the watch into his pocket.

"After that being a hero came just as natural to Elph as picking berries. When the call came for volunteers for the war nobody made a bulge to sign up until seventeen-year-old Elphanus Moon subscribed his name and was mustered in. He got a silver medal for that from the town council.

"One day while a battle was raging and the regiment to which the Billville company was attached was in a bad position, Elph volunteered to put out of commission a big gun that was doing terrific execution. What did he do but crawl up to the gun, swat the men serving it with the butt of his musket, spike the cannon, grab the captain of the battery by the scuff of the neck and lead him in a prisoner.

"Billville heard of this and this time sent him a gold medal, which he proudly wore home as a colonel. Then we put up the bronze tablet to commemorate his many acts of bravery, his utter disregard of peril, his unacquaintance with fear and that his example might be emulated we organized the Billville Boys' Hero club.

"His crowning example of bravery was a year ago, when he defied the town political committee and ran on an independent ticket at our request as a candidate for surveyor of cord wood. We wanted to beat the combination that was doling out seven feet to the cord, and it would take a man of nerve to do this in Billville. We won out and Elph was a greater hero than ever in our estimation.

"You can imagine my surprise on arriving at the old village last week on finding that Elph was in disgrace. And what do you suppose had happened to throw down our idol?"

"Give it up, Bilkins. What was it all about?"

"A committee had gone up to his house to ask that he give a talk on how it feels to have no fear. There was to be some kind of an entertainment for raising funds to procure additional books for the village library, and it was thought that Elph could crowd the town hall to the doors.

"The committee rapped on the Moon door, and getting no answer, walked in. Elph was not to be found on the lower floor, so the committee pranced upstairs and there they found Mrs. Moon sitting beside a bed with a piece of string in her hand, trying to coax 'Elph' to 'come out and be brave—to show his manhood.'

"Where was Elph? Crowded up against the wall at the farther side of and under the bed, whining that he wanted to be let alone and did not want to be tortured. What ailed him? His wife said that he had been worrying about with a loose front tooth for three months, and that she was determined to put a half hitch on it and pull it out. She had chased him from the house out to the barn, back to the house and finally had him cornered, but she had tried in vain for an hour to get him to face the music.

"The committee withdrew, made a report at the village store, an indignation committee had torn down the hero tablet and the Billville Boys' Hero club had been disbanded on the spot. Since then Elph has refused to go out of doors except after dark. There's a hero for you!"—Providence Journal.

MAN'S SHORT TERM OF LIFE

In Comparison With Other Animals He Does Not Nearly Live Out His Allotted Time.

A rule which holds fairly true among the higher animals is that an animal lives five times as long as it requires for his muscular system to reach its full strength. The dog is fully developed at between two and three years of age, and lives fifteen years, the horse reaches his prime not later than five and if he escapes overwork and ill usage lives to be twenty-five and even thirty. In fact, the rule seems to be an understatement of animal expectation of life, rather than an overstatement.

The one conspicuous exception is man, who seldom reaches his full muscular strength before he is twenty-five and counts himself living on borrowed time if he passes the age of seventy. If man were as well circumstanced in this matter as the horse, dog or cat, his average term of life would vary from one hundred and ten to one hundred and twenty-five years.

The Patriot.

Sir Thomas Lipton said at a provisioners' banquet in London:

"All the blame for high prices is put on us dealers. You'd think, the way some people talk, that we dealers were as false in our patriotism as the chap who was sanding his sugar the other day with his errand boy's help.

"The errand boy, lifting a scoopful of sand, said:

"'The usual proportion, sir?'

"'No, Joseph, of course not,' the boss replied sternly. 'The usual proportion in days like these? Joseph, where's your patriotism?'

"Then he sighed and added:

"'Only half the usual proportion of sand, Joseph—only half the usual proportion as long as our gallant troops at the front have such need of sandbags.'"

Putting It Accurately.

"Have you got any mosquitoes around here?"

"No," replied Farmer Corntossel. "We haven't got them. They've got us."

The Proper One.

"Do you know, I believe I have a case of rose fever."

"Then why don't you go to a garden doctor?"

Evasive.

"Will they charge me much, do you think, to get this advertising picture in the papers?"

"Oh, I think it very likely you can get it in at cut rates."

Robert Edeson, the actor, recently inherited $100,000. The property is chiefly a rice plantation in Louisiana.

RAM RAISERS UP A STUMP

The ram-raisers are rather up a stump in their efforts to explain how the price of wool has actually gone up under the free wool schedule of the Democratic tariff. The fact has upset all their direful predictions and given the lie to most of the prophecies of evil emanating from protectionist sources. But of course the ram-raisers are not without invention and we find one of their organs ready with what it evidently regards as a convincing explanation of what must have staggered the wool growers themselves. Listen to this "explanation" from the Pendleton (Ore.) Tribune:

"Because of the slight advance in the price of wool, the quality of which is the best ever grown in eastern Oregon, which in former years would have sold at much higher prices, is regarded by Democratic newspapers as a high tribute to the efficacy of the Wilson-Underwood free-trade tariff bill. The war, of course, has come to the rescue of the Democrats this year in the slightly increased prices paid for wool at Pilot Rock, but buyers admit that while the war is responsible for the higher prices being paid, nevertheless the superiority of the fiber of the Pilot Rock wool has much to do with the interest shown in its purchase."

The significant thing about this is the claim made by our Republican friends that with respect to wool at least the higher price it is commanding is due to the European war. But they still insist that the war has had nothing to do with the increased cost of living about which they made such loud complaint. This has resulted solely from "Democratic blundering."

There has been something more than a "slight" advance in the price of wool in this country. The advance has been considerable. It was reported in the news dispatches a few days ago that Ohio wool has been selling at record figures; and we think that the country over this has been the case. But the Underwood tariff has had much more to do with the advance in wool prices than may appear on the surface, for that measure, through the lowering of the tariff on woolen goods, has tended largely to increase the demand for wool, while increasing the demand for shoddy and substitutes for wool in the manufacture of woolens. "All-wool" cloth which under Republican tariffs contained not a shred of real wool is today a Democratic tariff more or less genuinely what it purports to be. Manufacturers are forced by competition to raise the grade of their products; and they can do this only by using wool where shoddy under Republicanism sufficed.

However, wool was not placed on the free list for the benefit of the ram-raisers. It was put there for the benefit of the mill workers, the miners, the bricklayers, the hod carriers, the laborers of this country. It was put there for the benefit of the masses who wear clothes. It was put there for the benefit of those to whom the protection which woolens afford is so essential. And if putting it on the free list meant lower prices for wool, very well. It is no part of the business of the government to maintain high prices for wool. It would be as much within its rights if it would undertake to maintain high prices for nails and barbed wire, glass, farm machinery, lumber, sugar, clothing, binding twine and other things needed by the wool growers.

THE LAKE COUNTY HERALD'S BUY-IN-PAINESVILLE DEPARTMENT

Farmers Send Money To The City

Calalogue Houses Drain Cash of the Small Towns and Give Little in Return

Seeing the errors of others, a wise man corrects his own. Men are apt to prefer a prosperous error to an afflicted truth. It is only an error of judgment to make a mistake, but it argues an infirmity of character to adhere to it when discovered. The Chinese say:

"The glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time you fall."

Error's Influence Upon Men.

In its influence upon man error has been compared to a magnet concealed near the ship's compass.

As in the latter case, the more favorable the winds and the greater the diligence and skill in working the ship the more rapidly will it be speeded on in a wrong course. And so to the farmer—the greater the struggle for safety the more speedy the progress of ruin.

This is the position in which a farmer with whom the writer recently talked found himself.

This farmer, who lives but a short distance from town, has prospered and accumulated a considerable quantity of worldly goods and has always scribbled many errors on the white pages of life.

Takes Pride in Town.

When asked his opinion of his town as a market place he replied, "It's the best in this section of the country."

"Do you sell all of your products here?" he was asked.

"Oh, yes," he answered.

"And buy all of your [illegible] and supplies here, too, don't you?"

"Oh, no; I'm too wise for that," replied the farmer. "Those fellows here are too high. I can buy cheaper from the mail order houses."

There he stood, a big, awkward, intelligent countryman, who for years had been committing the unpardonable error of robbing the treasury of his own town and aiding the upbuilding of the mightiest trust on earth—in some distant center of population.

As the injustice of his practice was explained to him his honest eyes lighted with intelligence as into his weather beaten face there appeared a look of determination, and as his lips parted these words came firm and clear:

"From this day on I will be a true citizen of the township in which I live. The money that I earn here and receive for my produce I will spend here. I will retrace my steps and correct as many of my past errors as lies within my power."

And the honest farmer will make good his promise.

Drains Town of Dollars.

How many farmers and consumers are doing the same identical thing as was this farmer—draining the town of its dollars, receiving but not giving, aiding the large cities and crippling their own little town, which is striving and struggling to maintain a commanding position on board the good ship Earth?

There was never a better illustration than the retail mail order house itself of what may be expected of consumers who fail to see the "signs" and neglect to fit themselves to the "times." The price of existence is measured both by demand and accomplishment.

The man who wishes to exert a useful influence must practice what he preaches. He must not demolish, but build. He must raise temples in which mankind will come to worship.

There are hundreds of thousands of farmers—yes, millions—who thoroughly realize the necessity of expansion of trade, the protection of their home markets, which is naturally brought about through the development and prosperity of their town.

When once brought to realize what centralization of business into large commercial centers means to rural life there will be an uprising among our American people that will resound from coast to coast.

Storekeepers Are to Blame.

The entire responsibility and blame for the present growing conditions cannot be laid at the door of the farmer. Unconsciously the hundreds of thousands of storekeepers that have the gall or nerve to call themselves merchants are equally responsible with the farmer.

As the merchant's pocketbook is the first to be hit he should be the first to reform and set a good example to his customers and those that should be his customers. Petty bickering and quarrels with competitors and local tradesmen should be the first reform made.

CAN WARSAW BE HELD? IS NOW MAIN QUESTION

Writers of Some of the London Papers Seem to Think Russians' Task Is Well Nigh Impossible.

London, Eng.—The gradual evacuation of Warsaw has been ordered by the Russians and has already begun, the Morning Post's Budapest correspondent reports. The Post's Petrograd correspondent says Emperor William has sent his sister, the queen of Greece, the following telegram: "I have paralyzed the Russians for at least six months and am on the eve of delivering a coup on the western front that will make all Europe tremble."

London, England.—Can Warsaw be held? With the German Field Marshals Von Hindenburg on the north and Von Mackensen on the south whipping forward the two ends of a great arc around the city, it is realized in England that Grand Duke Nicholas, commander in chief of the Russian armies, has the most severe task imposed on him since the outbreak of the war, and the military writers of some of the London papers seem to think that his task is well nigh impossible.

There was sustained confidence that Germany's previous violent attacks along the Bzura-Rawka front would never pierce the Russian line, but the present colossal co-ordinate movement was developed with such suddenness and carried so far without meeting serious Russian resistance that more and more the British press is anticipating the fall of the Polish capital, and while not giving up all hope of its retention is pointing out the enormous difficulty the Russian armies have labored under from the start by the existence of such a salient.

Having been unable to straighten out their line by an advance through East Prussia in the north and Galicia in the south, the Russians have perpetually faced the pincers of the Austro-Germans, and if these can now be sufficiently tightened Warsaw must go and with it the entire line.

According to the latest accounts, the Austro-German forces, advancing from Przasnisz, were within 40 miles of Warsaw, while to the south Von Mackensen's center was, at certain points, within 10 miles of the Lublin-Cholm railroad. Von Hindenburg has 41 army corps altogether—approximately 1,800,000 men. Seven corps are acting in the Baltic region, 14 between the Bug and Vistula 100-mile front, 7 in the region of the River Orzyc, 5 on the River Niemen front and 8 between the Bug and Dniester.

Rome, Italy.—An Italian cruiser squadron, comprising the Francesco Ferruccio, Varese, Giuseppe Garibaldi and the Vettor Pisani, proceeded at an early hour in the morning to Cattaro, an Austrian seaport in Dalmatia, and opened fire. During the course of the operations the Italian commander ...

THAW BACK WITHIN THE MATERNAL FOLD

Slayer of Stanford White Is at Home for First Time in Nine Years.

RECEIVES OVATION ON HIS ARRIVAL

Throws Himself Into His Mother's Arms After Ride in Auto Through Cheering Crowd to Handsome Mansion in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Harry K. Thaw is at home for the first time in nine years. A tremendous ovation was tendered him on his arrival at East Liberty at 6:25 Monday afternoon as he emerged from the train which brought him from Philadelphia. A police escort, under the personal direction of Chief of Police Matthews, forced a way for him through the cheering crowd to a waiting automobile in which he was driven at a 50-mile an hour clip through the fashionable East End district to his home in Beechwood boulevard. Under the porte cochere of the handsome mansion, his mother, attired in an all white gown for the first time since the shooting of Stanford White, received him with open arms. Leaping from the car, while the crowd darted over the lawn from all directions, Thaw threw himself into his mother's arms.

Swallowed Up in Throng.

An instant later he was swallowed up in the throng. Fighting his way out, his face aglow with the excitement of the moment, he beckoned to him the party of newspapermen who had accompanied him from New York.

"I want to say this," said Thaw, "to return to Pittsburgh has been my desire for so long that I do not find words to express myself now I am at home and also I want to thank my friends, so many of them, for helping toward this success that now I can name but one—my mother."

Just within the door of the mansion Mrs. Thaw stood, her face wreathed in smiles. While Thaw was dragged off by the photographers for one last picture, she shook hands laughingly with the New York reporters, most of whom had followed her son's fortunes since the shooting of White and were personally known to her. Then Thaw himself fought his way to the door.

"Goodby," he cried, shaking each of his old friends by the hand, "and thank you all."

Back Within Maternal Fold.

His mother held the door open for him as he greeted the last man. He waved his hands and then the door closed upon him.

After nine years of fighting he was back within the maternal fold once more. An old-fashioned family reunion took place. Mrs. Thaw asked to be excused from making any statement or giving out the names of those who celebrated his liberation with Harry.

Almost at the end of his journey home Thaw, in conversation with members of his party, gave expression to sentiments which may fairly be interpreted as meaning that he feels, as a sane man, he had ample justification for the tragic event of June 25, 1906, and that he finds in the verdict of the jury which set him free and complete vindication for his action.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Ready for her trial trip, the battleship Oklahoma was seriously damaged by fire of mysterious origin. The newest and most powerful of the dreadnaughts of the United States navy caught fire a few minutes after the workmen had left her decks as she lay at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Co. in Camden.

The first, discovered about 6 p. m., was under control at 9. A second blaze was discovered 15 minutes later, but was soon overcome.

REGRETS CRIPPLING AMERICAN STEAMER

Germany Says Submarine Torpedoed the Nebraskan Through Mistake.

CALLS IT 'AN UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT'

Declares Government Is Ready to Make Compensation for Damage Sustained by American Citizens Through Injury to Boat.

Washington, D. C.—Germany has made a frank admission that one of her submarines on May 25 torpedoed the American steamer Nebraskan off the Irish coast, mistaking the vessel in the dusk for a British ship. The Berlin foreign office has formally expressed "regret" at the affair.

Ambassador Gerard telegraphed the department that he has received the following memorandum from the German foreign office admitting responsibility for the mysterious accident to the vessel:

"The German government received from newspaper reports the intelligence that the American steamer Nebraskan had been damaged by a mine or torpedo on the southeastern coast of Ireland. It, therefore, started a thorough investigation of the case without delay, and from the result of the investigation it has become convinced that the damage to the Nebraskan was caused by an attack by a submarine.

"On the evening of May 25 the submarine met a steamer bound westward without a flag and with no neutral markings on her freeboard, about 35 nautical miles west of Fastnet Rock, no appliances of any kind for the illumination of the flag or markings was to be seen. In the twilight, which had already set in, the name of the steamer was not visible from the submarine.

"Since the commander of the submarine was obliged to assume from his wide experience in the area of maritime war that only English steamers and no neutral steamers traversed this war area without flag and markings, he attacked the vessel with a torpedo in the conviction that he had an enemy vessel before him.

"Sometime after the shot the commander saw that the vessel had in the meantime hoisted the American flag. As a consequence he, of course, refrained from any further attack.

"Since the vessel remained afloat he had no occasion to concern himself further with the boats which had been launched. ..."

EIGHT DEAD, SCORES HURT, IN OHIO FLOOD

More Than Two Million Dollars Is the Property Damage in State.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE MADE HOMELESS

Hundreds of Acres of Land Inundated as Result From Torrential Rains Throughout Central Ohio—Crops Suffer Heavily.

Columbus, O.—Eight dead, scores injured and more than $2,000,000 worth of property damage were the toll of floods which resulted from torrential rains throughout central Ohio. Hundreds of acres of land were under water and vast areas imperiled by weak levees and embankments. In several places in Ohio the disastrous flood of March, 1913, was exceeded, but most of the swollen streams are now stationary and fears of further damage allayed by favorable weather predictions. At Lima, where three lives were lost, more than 200 homes were submerged and a large area flooded. Mayor Miles Standish issued a proclamation stating that while the property damage there would exceed $500,000 no outside aid in relief work would be asked.

In Columbus both the Scioto and Olentangy rivers flooded a large section of the city.

The Miami river rose five feet at Dayton but caused no alarm as it was far below the flood stage. Mt. Vernon and Lancaster each reported one death due to the storm.

A large portion of Kenton was submerged when the Scioto overflowed. Foraker, a village near Kenton, also suffered considerable damage. Several houses were washed away and it is feared that a number of persons lost their lives. Included in the total property damage are big crop losses.

Many Homeless in Lima.

Lima, O.—Three persons are dead in Lima, 1,500 are homeless and more than half a million dollars in damage has been wrought by a flood in the Ottawa river which rivals that of the spring of 1913. The property loss, it is declared, is greater than in any previous flood.

GIVES TIMELY ADVICE TO OHIO SOIL TILLERS

Expert Tells Truck Gardeners in Inundated Sections of State What to Do.

LIFT PLANTS AS SOON AS WATERS RECEDE

Ground Should Not Be Cultivated Again Until Crust Forms—Potatoes Must Not Be Allowed to Stay in Wet Land.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

MEMBERS of the state agricultural commission believe that proportionately greater damage has been done to Ohio crops during the flood of the last few days than was done during the big and generally more disastrous flood of 1913. The basis for the belief is the fact that now the crops are more fully developed and therefore suffered more extensively than during the inundation two years ago. That flood came in the latter part of March and thus found many fields unplanted. What the present damage has been, of course, is a matter of pure speculation now. Only incomplete reports have been received in official circles here. It is certain, however, that the loss to crops will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Hundreds of acres of the ripened or harvested grain are still lying under water. Their loss will be almost complete. Much garden truck, however, may be saved if the waters recede quickly, and this is now almost a certainty. Agricultural experts are advising truck gardeners in inundated sections of the state to lift their corn, beans, tomatoes and other plants out of the mud as soon as the waters recede and prop them. The ground should not be cultivated again, however, until a crust forms, according to the advice.

Says Movement Is Self Harmful.

If the movement to rid the state of private liability companies should succeed it would be only the case of the companies pulling down the roof upon their own heads, according to Thomas J. New Course for Rural Schools.

During the coming week a special committee appointed by State School Supt. Frank W. Miller will complete the formulation of a new uniform course of study for use in the rural and village schools of the state. The committee consists of County School Supts. A. G. Yawberg of Cuyahoga and C. J. Biery of Fulton, Dr. W. H. Heckert of the state normal school at Oxford and Clark Fullerton of Portsmouth, one of the district superintendents of Scioto county. When the county and district school superintendents held their annual meeting in Columbus last fall they asked the state school superintendent to select a committee of competent educators to draw up a uniform course of study for the schools under their charge. The course which is being completed will consist of an outline of the work of the school year together with full instructions regarding the best method to teach it. Several members of the committee were in Columbus Saturday putting the finishing touches to the parts of the course assigned to them for preparation. "This course of study will be printed and ready for distribution in August," said County Supt. Biery. "The committee believes it will be a big improvement over the present course of instruction, beneficial alike to pupil and teacher."

Three I. and R.'s Practically Certain.

Those who have started to institute a referendum against the agricultural "decentralizer" must file approximately 68,000 names of petitioners with the secretary of state before midnight of July 21 if they expect the measure to be voted upon in the fall election. On July 21 the 90 day period after the passage of the act will have expired and no referendum petitions thereafter can be filed. Although strenuous efforts are being put forth to get the required number, there is said still to be uncertainty as to the outcome of the movement. On the other hand, the referendum move against the congressional gerrymander is said to be moving faster and to be more certain of success insofar as the signatures are concerned. The third referendum, that against the more stringent moving picture censorship law also is moving rapidly. No action has yet been taken by the liberal interests against the McDermott liquor license law "decentralizer," and the indications now are that there will be no referendum vote on that measure. But meantime three constitutional amendments are being agitated and are practically certain ...

FRIENDS OF THE RICH

Republicans Now, as Ever, Seek Prosperity for the Few.

Willing to Let the Manufacturer Rob the People With an Extortionate Tariff and Dole Out a Pittance for Labor.

Nationally the Republican party is like the bronze statue of Louis XVI in the Tuileries, without heart or bowels. Mr. Taft and Rev. John Wesley Hill are walking backward over the country, Mr. Taft going from college to college, Rev. Mr. Hill from state organization to commercial club, and each telling their audiences that the sun may be expected to rise in the west day after tomorrow.

As for today, they are deploring and viewing with alarm. During the early spring, Jim Watson of Indiana and Senator Weeks of Massachusetts strolled up and down the continent deploring the decay of free institutions and promising a return of the pot pie of the fathers. None of these gentlemen had anything to offer in the way of solution for unemployment, excepting a high tariff, which will let the manufacturer rob the people with an extortionate tariff and divide the crumbs from their table with labor. If any of them saw anything in the way of the inequitable distribution of our national wealth, he was silent about it. The spectacle did not disturb him.

To these men and to all the leaders in the Republican party today, the problem of the people is not the distribution of wealth, but its accumulation. They are friends first of all of the accumulators. The Republican party as it stands today is exhibiting no vestige of interest in anything but the accumulation of wealth; prosperity rather than justice is the Republican aim. Property is its god. To own, to control, to have and to hold—these are Republican ideals. To give, to serve, to broaden life and gladden living—these in the composite Republican mind are things of the child. They have been put away along with the Progressive leadership that passed out of the party in 1912.—William Allen White in the Metropolitan Magazine.

"No, madame," replied the colonel. "I may be said rather to fluctuate."

And later in the evening, when she saw him bobbing up and down in the Lame Duck like a speculative stock in a panic, the lady knew exactly what he meant.

Saw Things Differently.

Hughie McNeff was exercised last year about his hay crop. The weather, though threatening, favored his efforts till he had succeeded in getting it safely gathered in, being in this respect more fortunate than several of his neighbors. After seeing the last wisp of straw around his stacks, he exclaimed, with a self-satisfied air:

"Noo, sin' I hae gotten my hey a' safe in, I think the warld would be greatly the better o' a guid shower."

Safe.

"What's this I hear? Are you really going to play first base for the village baseball team next Saturday?"

"That's exactly what I'm going to do."

"But man alive! You're sixty years old."

"I know, but I was afraid if I refused to play the boys would make me umpire the game."

No Mistake.

"That chap gets a thousand dollars a week," said the movie fan, indicating the funny man of the screen.

STATE'S ATTORNEY DELVES INTO DISASTER

Secretary of Commerce Redfield, at Suggestion of President Wilson, Starts Investigation, Making Six Inquiries Now On.

Chicago, Ill.—It begins to look as if someone might go to prison for the excursion steamship Eastland disaster. Sensations came fast Monday night. Startling evidence was made public by State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne and Coroner Peter Hoffman that not far from 3,000 persons were aboard the steamer when she turned over and sank in the Chicago river. This is nearly 1,000 more than the ship's papers, on file with the police department, permitted the vessel to carry. Also it is said that there probably are still 900 bodies in the hull or ...

... dition of the ship were believed to have stirred Washington to action.

Before leaving Syracuse, N. Y., Secretary Redfield stated that George Uhler, supervising inspecting general of steamships and the man mentioned as having been informed that the Eastland should not be permitted to carry excursion crowds had been summoned to Chicago from San Francisco. Mr. Redfield also stated that he had ...

... cent months. Several men who made this report, in asking for aid, were asked why they started on the excursion while in poor financial circumstances. They replied that an organization of employes gave the picnic and that experience had taught them it was best to buy tickets if they desired preferment for work. They said the company had nothing to do with this condition or the management of ...

U. S. Tells Germany Further Attacks on Ships Affecting American Citizens Must Be Regarded as 'Unfriendly Acts.'

Reply of This Government to the Teuton Note on the Lusitania and Submarine Warfare Contains Only One Suggestion of Threat or Menace.

Washington, D. C.—The text of the reply of the United States to the German note on the Lusitania and the general subject of Germany's submarine warfare was made public Friday afternoon at the state department.

The only suggestion of threat or menace in the note to the Germans is in the last paragraph. This paragraph says:

"Friendship itself prompts it to say to the imperial government that repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States when they affect American citizens as deliberately unfriendly."

The language adopted, however, although apparently definite and strong, does not carry the asperity of a formal diplomatic threat or menace.

The text of the United States note to Germany follows:

(The secretary of state to Ambassador Gerard.)

"Department of State,
"Washington, July 21, 1915.

8,000 OHIO YOUNG MEN WELL TRAINED

Reserve of Considerable Size Which Could Be Whipped Into Military Condition in Short Time, Says Adjt. Gen. Hough.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

In case of war the state military department could get in touch immediately with probably 8,000 young men, between the ages of 23 and 30, who have received military training in Ohio colleges or universities, Adjt. Gen. Hough declared. He referred particularly to graduates of Ohio State university and Ohio Northern university, where two-year courses in military drill and tactics are given. Although no record of names and addresses of former students who received such military training are kept by the state military department, Adjt. Gen. Hough pointed out that records of each school contain these that would be available to the military authorities. The only ac...

Ohio People Buy Ohio Coal.

Attention of state officials here has been called to a movement begun in Athens county to have Ohio people buy Ohio coal. It is the result of the combined efforts of both miners and operators, who are suffering from the forced shutdown of many mines. Supporters of the movement say that if successful it will tend to relieve the suffering that results from the closing of collieries. The chief purpose is to make possible the opening of mines in the sections of the state where the miners have been idle for many months and where thousands of them are now on the verge of starvation. John M. Roan, state safety mining commissioner, who has made a visit to the desolated mining regions, says that the conditions are almost unimaginable. In many places business is at a standstill and bankruptcy of business men is going hand in glove with the starvation of the populace, he says. "I went into a grocery store in the Hocking region," said Mr. Roan. "The proprietor was idle. He had nothing to do because he had nothing to sell. His shelves were so bare I could have carried all his stock away in my arms. He had extended credit to miners' families and given them all he had until his own credit with wholesale groceries was exhausted. Then he had to quit. He was in as bad shape as many miners. That is only a typical example of sad conditions in the Hocking coal field."

Court Decides in Favor of Home Rule—Important Ruling Given By Higher Court.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—At an adjourned session the Ohio supreme court reversed the decision of the Hamilton county court of appeals in the case of David L. Carpenter versus the Cincinnati Traction Company and the city of Cincinnati. The appellate court held that the law which requires consent of a majority of property owners, as shown by foot frontage along a street, before street car tracks may be laid, was unconstitutional and invalid.

The supreme court, having the final word, holds that the act is a valid one. Two justices, Judges Wanamaker and Donahue, dissented, basing their opinion upon the proposition that the municipal home rule amendment gives ... right by ordinance ... without property ... the home rule ... and in effect ... present law. Story of a Man Who Was Making Good, but Roving Fever Got the Best of Him.

On May 4th, 1915, the St. Paul Farmer's Dispatch contained a very interesting account of the experiences of a man from Staples, Minn. Realizing that he was not making much headway, he decided to look up a homestead in Canada. With $250 he and his wife took up a homestead near Outlook, Saskatchewan. After recounting his experiences of a few years, in which they had undergone hardships which were likely to be unavoidable, with a small amount of capital, he continues the story by stating that in the fall after a fair summer's work on his 100 acres cropped, he cleaned up nearly all his debts, having now four good horses, a complete set of farm machinery including two wagons and a "Swell" top buggy and eleven head of cattle. He continues, "However, I was not satisfied. I had been reading of the splendid homesteads that were to be had in Montana. Wheat was cheap and I thought it would get cheaper, so I began to think that homesteading as a moneymaking proposition was better than farming.

I did not stop to consider that wheat was not the only thing; as a matter of fact I had sold pork for 14 cents a pound. Eggs and butter had kept as in groceries and more, we had now four milch cows, two heifers coming in and more growing up. We had a cream separator, and some hogs. We had a quarter section of land that could ...

HINTS FOR FARMERS

A little paint will make a new rugloomy, rusty, eye sore. It is not a good trade mark in front of the home of a progressive farmer. The wife has been scolding about its looks. A few cents worth of paint and a few minutes labor will make the passerby think more of that home and the people who live in it.

By all means have the name plainly written on the mail box. It's just as much the business of the farmer to let people know who is doing business at that place and plant as it is for the business man in town to hang out his sign. It's a part of the New Dress on Ohio campaign which the Agricultural Commission has promoted.

Let the banker be your bookkeeper. A canceled check is a good and a double receipt. The check and its stub are both silent, sure witnesses that you paid the bill if any one disputes. The farmer ought to have a check book, and his name and address printed on the checks. That is the way the business man does it. The farmer must learn the art of being a business man.

Farmers are getting printed letter heads. They are adding their wife's name. They also add the name of the bank at which they do business. It's both dollars and sense. The best credential a farmer can have is the name of his bank printed on his letter heads.

Try it, Mr. Farmer. It costs little. It's worth a lot.

SHIPMENT OF MUNITIONS

Agitation begun in the United States almost the beginning of the war against permitting the export of munitions shows no diminution. Legislation was attempted in the last session of congress to effect the prohibition. It is likely to be tried anew when congress again convenes in December.

The state department is now at work on a reply to a note from Austria protesting on this identical point. And the assumption at Washington is that the Austrian note is to be followed by one from all the Teutonic allies, voicing the same insistence that the United States shall check the shipment of war munitions to the nations of Europe.

To such a protest—whether made by Germany, Austria or by all the Teutonic allies—the United States can in justice to herself and the world make but one answer. And the answer is the same already made to German representations. No conceivable circumstance could change it.

America's standing as a neutral nation would be violated by any such embargo as proposed. The very essence of fairness demands that the United States government shall leave the way absolutely open to whoever cares to come to these shores to purchase munitions.

Great Britain's command of the sea gives the anti-Teutonic allies an advantage in the purchase of war supplies. To that end in part has the government of the king mobilized its resources all these years to maintain its naval supremacy.

If Germany or Austria or Turkey controlled the sea today instead of Britain, the advantage would be on their side. The United States would now be urged to put an embargo on munitions in the interests of the anti-Teutonic allies. Our neutrality would be decried by those who now indorse it and praised by those who malign.

It is an incident of national rivalry that one set of belligerents today can buy in the American market and the other cannot—an incident which the United States had no part in bringing about and for which she has not the slightest responsibility.

The case is as plain as A B C. American neutrality is at stake. No matter what the combination of nations making the protest the answer of the United States can take but one form.

Here we stand, a neutral people. Our markets are open to the world. It is the Teuton's misfortune, not our fault, if he finds himself barred by hostile seas.

Several houses in this neighborhood have recently been improved by a fresh coat of paint. Mr. T. Clough and helpers have just finished painting the two houses on the Henry Hooper farm and are now doing some ornamental work on his own house. Mr. W. Harrington's house is newly painted canary color with chocolate trimmings and at present the Daggetts are painting their house.

Members in Charge

CAREFULLY READ RULES BEFORE MAKING ENTRIES.

A limited number of large vases or other receptacles containing masses of Celosias, Tritoma, Helianthus, etc., will be solicited to be used as a back-ground on upper tier of shelves.

With this exception ordinary fruit jars in the three regular sizes or other containers of similar capacity must be used. Pansies and other short stemmed flowers may be shown in shallow receptacles.

Large jumble bunches of flowers are not requested, rather a smaller number of well selected and perfect blooms. Such a vase will take precedence over one containing inferior flowers, even though the balance are of superior merit.

Collection of Asters, Dahlias, Gladioli, etc. can be exhibited in several vases under one entry number. No large earthen ware jars or other bulky containers will be accepted.

Plants and flowers from Nursery men and Florists are solicited for exhibition, but cannot be entered for premiums. Parties growing anything along these lines for profit, whether on a large or small scale come under this head.

ADVANTAGES OF THE KNIGHT TYPE MOTOR

When new these motors are quiet, when old they are quiet almost to the point of absolute silence.

When new they are efficient; when old, beyond the limit of endurance of an ordinary motor, they are even more efficient.

There are no parts to wear, become noisy and require grinding or adjustment.

The noiseless, sliding sleeves eliminate poppet valves, cams and springs.

They deliver power at low speed without hesitation.

They accelerate quickly—and at speeds far beyond the point where the power of an ordinary motor recedes, Knight type motors continue to deliver full power and this without vibration.

Overland Service is Local

From your standpoint the best thing about Overland service is that it is local service. Overland owners are particularly fortunate in this respect—the service we can render you.

First we call your attention to our modern fireproof garage with all up-to-date equipment.

We do not merely take your money and let you drift from one place to another looking for Overland service for we consider our cars never sold.

The fact that you are able to use your car at all times is the best advertisement we could have.

The World's Lowest Priced Knight Motored Car

THIS announces the greatest achievement in the history of the automobile business.

The Knight is the automobile motor that revolutionized the entire motor car industry of Europe.

The Daimler of England, the Panhard of France, the Mercedes of Germany, the Minerva of Belgium—in fact practically all of the costly European cars—are equipped with the famous Knight type motor.

And these are the motor cars that cost from $4,000 to $8,000 each!

The Knight type motor is the nearest approach to 100% efficiency.

This motor differs from other motors in that where all others deteriorate with use, this improves; to all others carbon is harmful, here it is beneficial; ease for size it has more power.

It has no noisy poppet valves; no noisy cams; no uncertain valve springs; no troublesome valves to grind; practically no wearing parts.

The Willys-Knight has the same advantages and is just as efficient as those costly European Knight cars.

As we build more cars in a single week than most European manufacturers build in a whole year, we are able to utilize every modern manufacturing economy.

That is why our price is so much less.

The Willys-Knight, in our opinion, has the least vibration and is the smoothest, quietest and most economical car made.

Have your demonstration at once.

Immediate deliveries.

Catalogue Houses Threaten Very Life of Farmer. Plain Facts About the Mail Order Business

Error is not a fault of our knowledge, but a mistake of our judgment. It is almost as difficult to make a man unlearn his errors as his knowledge. Malinformation is more hopeless than noninformation, for error is always more hopeless than ignorance.

Ignorance is a blank sheet on which we may write, but error is a scribbled one from which we must first erase.

Ignorance is contented to stand still with her back to the truth, but error is more presumptuous and proceeds in the wrong direction. Ignorance has no light, but error has farther to go before she can arrive at truth than has ignorance.

So that these mail order traders may not plead ignorance in extenuation of their offense we give below a categorical list of things which the mail order houses do not do. We trust they will prove eye openers to the unwise.

What Catalogue Houses Do Not Do.

They do not help to educate the farmer's children.

They do not pay any taxes in your community.

They do not help support your schools, churches and charitable institutions.

They do not encourage the farmer's boy or young men in small cities to engage in business.

They Don't Build Your Roads.

They do not help to build your roads or care for your streets.

They do not sell you as good a grade of goods as you can buy in your own home town.

They do not show you goods before you pay for them.

They do not deliver promptly goods that you buy from them.

They do not advocate the building up of country towns.

They do not oppose the centralization of business in the large cities.

They do not, in return for the farmer's consumer's trade—the farmer who buys their clothing, household goods, farm implements, etc.—buy the farmer's butter, eggs, cheese, grain and wood.

They do not buy your grain, hatter, cheese and stock from pictures and pay in advance the same as you do.

They do not buy anything from the farmer or consumer from a picture.

They do not furnish employment to a single resident of your community.

They'll Not Give You Credit.

They do not extend to you credit, as does the local merchant, when you are hard up.

They do not sympathize with you at a time when you have sickness in your family.

They do not sympathize with you when your wife or children are taken from you.

They do not want to see your local merchant prosper in business.

They do not do anything for anybody except themselves.

Does the small city, town or village ever see a dollar of their money?

The above, it would seem, shows a good and sufficient number of reasons why this mail order octopus should be left severely alone by both the farmers and the residents of small cities and towns who have thoughtlessly lent it their patronage.

It is spreading out over the land, daily gaining in strength and magnitude and gradually but surely sapping the lifeblood of the small communities, reducing property values, endangering local investments and causing a condition of chaos and misery everywhere.

It is a monster of local destruction, this retail catalogue house and we regret to say that its growth is entirely due to the susceptibility of the farmers and residents of small towns who patronize it extensively to their own financial injury.

"And I'm not so sure of that," said she, angely. "It isn't the way with men. It may not have been love that he felt for the physical Yvonne, but it wasn't Matilde that he held in his arms. You can't get around that, nor can he. Matilde's soul and Yvonne's body are quite two different—"

"Gad, you are analyzing things!" he exclaimed in amazement.

"But all this is neither here nor there," she said, flushing. "The point is this: we are going away tomorrow, for heaven knows how long—you and I, my mother and your father. We are going to Vienna and in St. Stephan's cathedral—where your father and mother were married with poor little Therese as one of the witnesses—in St. Stephen's we are to be married. She will not be there. She is not asked to come with us. She is barred out. Isn't it the refinement of—cruelty?"

"Cruelty, Lydia? I'd hardly call it that. It's the order of destiny, or something of the sort. She gambled with fate and lost out. She's a good loser. She hasn't squealed once."

"Squealed? I hate that word."

"I hate squealer worse," said he. "But seriously, it knocks me all out whenever I think of her. I've hesitated about speaking to father, dear. You see, I'm in rather a delicate position. Six weeks ago I was madly infatuated with Yvonne. I don't deny it—and he knows all about it. Gad, I'd give ten years of my life if she were going along with us tomorrow. I'd give more than that to see this whole unhappy business patched up so that they could start off anew. But I'm afraid he wouldn't take it well from me if I asked him to include her in the—er—party. It's his affair, not mine, you see. He'd be justified in considering me selfish in the matter. It might seem as though I didn't care a hang for his personal feelings and—"

"She's his wife, however," said Lydia, with a stubborn pursing of the lips. "She didn't wrong him and, after all, she's only guilty of—well, she isn't guilty of anything except being a sister of the girl he wronged."

"I'll have a talk with him if you think best," said he, an eager gleam in his eyes.

"And I with Yvonne," she said quickly. "You see, it's possible she is the one to be persuaded."

"He'll never ask her," said Frederic, after a long period of reflection.

"What is to become of her?" asked ...

... ever, was he in humility, conscience, remorse, so these three treasures he laid the foundation for his new fortune.

He spoke of the morrow without the faintest indication in his manner that it was to bring a crisis in his own affairs. His brow was clear, his eye sparkling, his serenity undisturbed. If there was a thought in his mind of Yvonne he did not betray it by a single outward manifestation. His interest was centered in the two young people and their immediate future. It would have been easy to believe, as he stood there chatting gayly, that there was no one else in all the world so far as he was concerned. Quite casually he expressed regret that poor old Dawes and Riggs were to be left behind, but of Yvonne not so much as a word.

Lydia was something of a diplomatist. She left father and son after a few minutes, excusing herself on the ground that she wished to have a good, long chat with Yvonne. She did not delay her departure, but hurried into the house, having rather adroitly provided Frederic with an opening for an intercession in behalf of his lovely stepmother. Her meaning glance was not wasted on the young man.

He lost no time in following up the advantage. "See here, father, I don't like the idea of leaving Yvonne out in the cold, so to speak. It's—it's pretty darned rough, don't you think? Down in your heart you don't blame her for what she started out to do, and after all she's only human. Whatever happened in the past we—well, it's all in the past. She—"

Brood stopped him with an imperative gesture. "My son, I will try to explain something to you. You may be able to understand things better than I. I fell in love with her once because an influence that was her own overpowered me. There was something of your mother in her. She admits that to be true and I now believe it. Well, that something—whatever it was—is gone. It can never return. She is not the same. Yvonne is Therese. She is not the woman I loved two months ago. She—"

"Nor am I the boy you hated two months ago," argued Frederic. "Isn't there a parallel to be seen there, father? I am your son. She is your wife. You—"

"There never was a time when I really hated you, my son. I tried to—but that is all over. We will not rake up the ashes. As for my wife—well, I ...

"I Cannot Come to Him."

"Everything Has Turned Out as It Should."

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. P. W. LANSING, Box 8, Allyn, Wash.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

One of the Many Taffeta Gowns for Midsummer

This dress of royal blue taffeta is one of the best and most attractive that have appeared among a great number of models employing this silk. It is of that soft variety called chiffon taffeta, and is the coolest and crispest of gowns for midsummer, outside the world of wash fabrics.

The skirt has a plain fitted yoke extending to the hips, to which the body is sewed. This latter is made of the silk laid in close single box plaits and is finished with a two and one-half inch hem at the bottom. Three rows of stitching set close together, and parallel to each other, sew the plaits down at the top to the yoke and make a neat finish. The hem is also machine stitched.

The coat is cut with a plain yoke also. The lower edge of the yoke is cut in shallow curves with an inconspicuous point at each side on the bust. The point reappears in the center of the back. Reversing the order of things in the skirt, the yoke overlaps the plaits in the jacket and but two rows of stitching are used in joining it to the body. A rolling collar and turned-back cuffs, as plain as can be, take care of the finishing of neck and sleeves. A plain belt made over a crinoline foundation, three inches wide, is tacked to the jacket a little below the normal waist line. It is ornamented with three ball buttons at the front. They are forms covered with the silk, and two of them are used on the cuffs in the manner shown in the picture. White ball buttons of composition are effectively used on gowns of blue or black taffeta and might be substituted for those that are silk-covered, to add snap to this trim suit.

The neck is much improved by a collar of white poplin or one of organdie, which rolls over the coat collar and fulfills its mission of placing white near the throat and face.

A hat of malines and velvet, with white satin flowers and small leather cockade at the front, and a purse of dark blue leather, banded with white, are accessories that add tone to a dress that is distinguished by very clever designing. It seems very simple but the best of talent is required to achieve simplicity and distinction at the same time.

Graceful Finish

Cerise, turquoise and violet are shades which are relieving the somberness of many gowns and on so many of the evening dresses for young people the garlands of small flowers make a graceful finish either on flounces or above them.

SYSTEM WORKS WELL

State Probation Commission Is Lauded by New York.

Experiment Has Proved In Every Way Worthy, and Authorities Are Unanimous In Opinion That It Be Maintained.

One of the most active of the small departments of the New York state government is the state probation commission. As shown by a recent report on the state departments prepared for the benefit of the constitutional convention by the department of efficiency and economy and the New York bureau of municipal research this commission is entirely separate in its organization and duties from any other state department. It has a large and unique field, namely, that of developing, extending and improving probation work in all the courts of the state.

Probation is defined as a system by which a court seeks to supervise, discipline and reform offenders without branding them as prisoners and without sentencing them to jail or prison. It is intended especially for the young or first offenders. It is used in all kinds of courts and for all sorts of offenses, but it is perhaps of greater importance in the juvenile court. Probation has been called "the right arm of the juvenile court."

The first probation law in the state was enacted in 1901. Following the enactment of this law probation work in the courts developed slowly and irregularly throughout the state. A special commission to study the work was authorized by the legislature of 1905; ten men and four women were appointed on this commission by Governor Higgins. The commission made a thorough inquiry and presented a report the following year. Out of its work and recommendations grew the present state probation commission. The commission was created by the legislature in 1907. Homer Folks has been president of the commission since its creation. Frank E. Wade, another of the original commissioners, is now vice-president. The other members ...

FIRST YEAR OF WAR IN THE WEST

The first month and a half of the Western campaign was made up of startling, swift moves. On September 12, after the defeat on the Marne, the Germans took up defensive positions along the Aisne river. The ten and a half months since then have seen a long deadlock.

The battle line of the Aisne and the Oise quickly extended northeast to the sea. Fighting has been continuous, with tremendous losses. The general situation has remained unchanged, gains of a few miles for one side at one point offset by minor gains for the enemy in other sectors.

At the beginning of August the kaiser took possession of the little state of Luxemburg and demanded passage through Belgium to the Franco-Belgian frontier.

Permission to pass denied, Von Emmich attacked Liege (August 4) while other German armies passed around the city and swept over the level Belgian roads at a terrific rate. The little Belgian army yielded Brussels and fell back to Antwerp and Ghent.

First Big Engagement.

Not until the Germans had almost reached the French border did the first important engagement take place. This is generally known as the battle of Mons-Charleroi (about August 20-29), but at the same time there was severe fighting along the whole line through Thionville in Lorraine and along the Vosges in upper Alsace, which the French had invaded with temporary success.

This battle resulted in defeat for the French and English.

While obtaining some successes in counter-attacks on the advancing Germans at Peronne and at Guise, the ... was fought the desperate first battle of Ypres, when the Germans suffered enormous losses in attempts to break through the line in Flanders and reach Calais. They succeeded in pushing back the allies only a little and the invasion of Silesia by the Cossacks finally induced them to desist and send re-enforcements to Russia.

The Germans in September had performed the feat of pushing a salient into the French line south of Verdun which terminated on the west bank of the Meuse river at St. Mihiel, while the French had taken the offensive with some success in Champagne at about the same time.

For the most part throughout the winter the fighting consisted of regular siege warfare, with heavy artillery combats and mine and countermine.

The flooding of the River Aisne from winter snows gave the Germans a chance to entrap the French troops on the north side of that river in the vicinity of Soissons for a considerable distance and kill or capture most of them (January 14).

Take Offensive in Spring.

With the spring the French and English attempted to take the offensive at several points. Always preparing the way with tons or hundreds of thousands of shells, they tried joint after joint of the German armor.

In the Vosges the dominating height of Hartmannsweilerkopf was taken and retaken several times in sanguinary charges and finally remained in the hands of the French.

The salient of St. Mihiel was also subjected to tremendous French pressure on both "legs." The French succeeded in gaining a little ground, but the Germans, despite the apparent weakness of the sharp wedge they had driven into the French line, could not be dislodged and later succeeded in regaining some of the territory they had lost.

The British also reported "victories" at Neuve Chapelle and Hill No. 60, in ...

WHAT THE WAR COST

Only approximately accurate tables of the killed, wounded and missing in the first year of the war are possible, because France and Russia and Austria-Hungary do not give out their figures, while Germany has changed her policy recently to one of secrecy. Great Britain still tells her losses from month to month.

Teutonic Allies.
Germany	2,300,000
Austria-Hungary	1,900,000
Turkey	230,000
Total	4,430,000
Entente Allies.
France	1,700,000
Russia (including prisoners 1,175,000)	3,500,000
Great Britain	480,000
Belgium	260,000
Servia	240,000
Japan	1,210
Italy (no reports of losses)	75,000
Portugal (fighting in colonies)	(minor)
Montenegro	30,000
San Marino	(?)
Total	6,286,210

The first year of the war has cost the belligerent governments about $16,500,000,000 in direct expenditures for military purposes. The war is now costing about $46,000,000 a day, $2,000,000 an hour and $30,000 a minute.

FIRST YEAR OF WAR IN THE EAST

The first twelvemonth of fighting between the Russians on one side and the Austrians and Germans on the other is a story of great changes of fortune, both combatants being repeatedly driven back only to show the greatest resiliency in defeat and soon to resume the offensive in a most surprising manner.

The end of the year, however, finds the pendulum swinging strongly against the czar. He may recover and take again the roads to Cracow, Vienna and Berlin, but just at present he is on the whole in worse plight than in any hour since the war started.

Russia's losses in the first year of the war are not approached by those of any nation in any war of history. According to reliable estimates, she has had between 2,500,000 and 4,000,000 men killed, injured and captured. Despite these horrible gaps made in her ranks, she still has millions in the field, and her great reservoir of personnel does not show signs of exhaustion. It is not men she lacks, but guns, shells and brains.

Slow to Mobilize.

On August 1, 1914, Germany declared war on Russia. Almost immediately the Germans crossed the frontier at Thorn and the Austrians south of Lublin. They were practically unopposed because of the slowness of mobilization in Russia. The Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch was forced to gather his main armies well to the rear of the line of great fortresses running through Kovno, Grodno, Ossowetz, Novo Georgievsk, Warsaw and Ivangorod.

On account of his desire to do all he could to relieve the French, who were being driven from northern ... the north, thinking to take the pursuing Russians in flank with the southern section. But the Austrians were too slow to carry out the field marshal's plans, and the Russians, slipping into a gap in the lines between the Germans and their allies, slaughtered the latter. The result was the high tide of Russian invasion. The Austrians withdrew over the Carpathians again, leaving Przemysl to be besieged a second time. The Germans withdrew to Silesia and the Russians, following closely, were able for a brief moment to raid this rich province at Pleschen. At the same time they entered East Prussia again.

But again the German strategic railways proved their undoing. Hindenburg concentrated at Thorn and drove into the right flank of the Russian main forces, throwing them back on Lodz.

He advanced too far, however, and when he had the Russian forces nearly surrounded, he suddenly found Russians in his own rear. In this extremity, the Russians say, he telegraphed for re-enforcements.

But before the re-enforcements sent from Flanders arrived the Germans had managed at frightful cost to hack their way to safety. This was the bloody battle of Lodz.

Wins Second Victory.

With stronger German forces opposing them the Russians withdrew to the line of Bzura, Rawa and Nida rivers. At the same time the Austrians, attempting to debouch from the Carpathian passes, were driven back everywhere, leaving 50,000 prisoners.

With January Hindenburg made a third desperate attack on Warsaw. For ten days, both night and day, the Germans came on. Then, having lost probably 50,000 men and the Russians nearly as many, they gave it up.

Unable to reach Warsaw, Hindenburg concentrated twice Sievers's force in East Prussia, and won his second ...

FINANCIAL STANDING OF WORLD JUST NOW

War Expenditures Equal Most Extravagant Expectations, Says New York Bank.

LOANS AGGREGATE $15,500,000,000

No Signs That Any Nations Engaged in European Conflict Are Running Out of Men or Money or That People Are Weakening.

New York City.—How the world stands from a financial viewpoint after a year of war is ably set forth in a review just announced by the National City bank.

"The war expenditures have equaled the most extravagant predictions," says the review. "The fighting has been continuous and the casualties appalling, but the results signify practically nothing as to when the conflict will end. There are no signs that either side is running out of men or money or that the people of any of the warring countries are weakening in resolution or confidence."

The review continues:

Loyal to Mother Countries.

"The developments of the war itself have shown the futility of annexing hostile populations; they cannot be dispossessed of the territory or compelled to be loyal citizens, and while they swell the volume of domestic trade and pay taxes they cost at least as much as they contribute.

"If all the responsible ministries had known as much a year ago as they know now it is safe to say that the peace would not have been broken, and if they could know now as much as they will a year hence, it is probable that a peace conference would not be long deferred.

"Excluding Italy, which came into the war at the end of the 10th month and for which few figures of expenditures or loans are available, the war loans of the combatants have aggregated approximately $15,500,000,000 and this about represents the governmental expenditures for the year. The total indebtedness of these countries at the outbreak of the war, including the debts of the several states of the ...

'REIGN OF TERROR' EXISTS IN CAPITAL

Famine Is General in City and Leaders Are Unable to Keep Open Railway Communication Between Capital and Vera Cruz.

Washington, D. C.—Another critical situation developed in Mexican affairs Thursday when the state department was informed officially that the American flag had been trampled under foot and torn to pieces near Pachucha, that Allen Mallory, an American citizen carrying dispatches, had been arrested and threatened with death, and that a "reign of terror" exists in the Mexican capital.

Before this dispatch arrived the state department had received by courier from Mexico City information that famine was general in the city and that the Mexican leaders were apparently unable to keep open railway communication between the capital and Vera Cruz.

The department at once prepared to send an ultimatum to Carranza that he must remedy the situation, but later it was stated the subject of the flag incident and Mallory's arrest will be incorporated in this communication. This will cause delay.

Spaniards Ordered Executed.

The dispatches to the state department say:

"Allan Mallory, citizen of the United States, 23 years old, was assaulted by Zapatistas while carrying correspondence between Puebla and Mexico City. He was riding in an automobile flying the American flag. He was accompanied by the son of the Chilean minister, a Swiss citizen and Spanish subjects. The Spaniards were removed from the machine and ordered to be executed. The American flag was taken from the car, trampled upon and torn to pieces. AS TO HAITI

Haiti often shakes our belief in the universality of the maxim, "America for Americans." This blood-stained, barbarous Republic with its mere shadow of organized government is one of the barrenest fields on which the seed of Americanism has been cast. Liberty under the law and government originating from the people and conducted for the good of the people had less honor in Haiti than in any other of the struggling American republics whose political independence the Monroe Doctrine was framed to protect.

Haiti is still savage at heart, still as incapable of self control as she was when Toussaint l'Ouverture defended her mountain fastness against the armies of France. She has had many rulers in the century which has elapsed since then but never one who owed his tenure of office to anything but military force. These rulers called themselves Presidents, Emperors or Kings, according to their fancy but they were all despots and scarcely one of them ended his reign in peace. Ignorance, superstition and all-prevailing political corruption have kept Haiti from benefiting from the influences making for order and progress which have been working steadily in nearly all of the other Latin-American States.

Our duty to this American derelict has been a puzzling problem. Had a European power tolerated such misgovernment in a dependency in this hemisphere we should have demanded evacuation or a restoration of order.

WHY HAY FEVER IS

The old sloop of war Portsmouth is to be broken up in the harbor of Portland, Ore. How many know that this was the vessel which, in 1846, took possession of the bay of San Francisco for the United States?

AUGUST

Some of our maiden ladies may remember that August has not always had its present name. Back in the Alban or Latin year it was known as "Sextilis," meaning the sixth, as it was then the sixth month of the year. Later, however, it was dedicated to the honor of Augustus Caesar and the name changed to August. Its meaning is sacred, venerable, majestic, grand, etc. August, too, always has held its own in the making of history. It was during this month in 1492 that Isabella, queen of Spain, after having seen some wonderful moving pictures of America, sent Columbus over to claim the territory for her. Henry Eighth, in 1534, divorced himself from a troublesome spouse by taking her joy riding in London and dumping her into the Thames. The car and Henry's conscience, so history indicates were alike undented. The Standard Oil trust had its beginning in August, 1859, when the first oil well is said to have been bored.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

About three months ago when I was suffering from indigestion which caused headache and dizzy spells and made me feel tired and despondent, I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets," writes Mrs. George Hon, Macedon, N. Y. "This medicine proved to be the very thing I needed, as one day's treatment relieved me greatly. I used two bottles of Chamberlain's Tablets and they rid me of this trouble." Obtainable everywhere.

UNIVERSAL PEACE

This nation is now in the midst of a controversy as to how best to promote universal peace. That question we will leave for diplomats to discuss, but peace within nations is no less important than peace between nations and it is heavily laden with prosperity for every citizen within our commonwealth.

Many leading politicians and ofttimes political platforms have declared war upon business and no cabinet crisis ever resulted. Many men have stood in high places and hurled "gas bombs" at industry, thrust bayonets into business enterprises and bombarded agriculture with indifference. Party leaders have many times broken diplomatic relations with industry; sent political aviators spying through the affairs of business, and political submarines have sent torpedoes crushing into the destiny of commerce. During the past quarter of a century we have fought many a duel with progress, permitted many politicians to carry on a guerrilla warfare against civilization and point a pistol at the heart of honest enterprise.

No man should be permitted to cry out for universal peace until his record has been searched for explosives, for no vessel armed or laden with munitions of war should be given a clearance to sail for the port of Universal Peace. Let us by all means have peace, but peace, like charity, should begin at home.

GRASPING AT THE SHADOW

No man—especially if he is married—would deny woman any right she demands. Take the earth and give us peace, but why does woman long for the ballot?

When all is said and done, is not the selection of the butcher more important to the home than the election of a mayor; is not the employment of the dairyman a far more important event in the life of the children than the appointment of a postmaster; is not the selection of books for the family library more important than voting bonds for jail and court house? Why does woman lay aside the important things in life? ...

POLITICAL GOSSIPS

When one class of people has anything to say, it has become largely the custom to make a political issue out of it instead of a friendly discussion, to print it in a law book instead of a newspaper and to argue it before a jury instead of to settle it in the higher courts of Common Sense. As a result, political agitators, political lawyers, political preachers and masculine women are powerful in politics and dissension, selfishness, intolerance and hysterics run rampant in public affairs, for when the low, damp, murky atmosphere of misunderstanding envelope public thought it breeds political reptiles, vermin, bugs and lice which the pure air of truth and the sunshine of understanding will choke to death.

We have too many self appointed interpreters of industry who are incapable of grasping the fundamental principles of business and who at best can only translate gossip and add color to sensational stories. No business can stand upon error and might rules—right or wrong. No industry can thrive upon misunderstanding, for public opinion is more powerful than a King's sword.

When prejudice, suspicion and class hatred prevail, power gravitates into the hands of the weak, for demagogues thrive upon dissension and statesmen sicken upon strife.

The remedy lies in eliminating the middleman—the political gossip—and this result can be accomplished by the managers of business sitting around the table of industry and talking it over with the people. Interchange of information between industries and the people is as necessary to success in business as interchange in commodities, for the people can only rule when the public understands. Away with political interpreters who summon evil spirits from their prison cells and loose them to prey upon the welfare of the people in the name of "My Country."

Philip, the Macedonian king, while drowsy with wine was trying a case and the prisoner after sentence was pronounced, exclaimed, "I appeal ...

OHIO'S WHEAT YIELD IS FULL OF PROMISE

Increased Use of Lime Reflected In Abundant Harvest.

(By G. J. Wilder.)

The harvest time is again with us, and Ohio has an excellent crop of wheat. It is all well filled out and the straw yield seems to be heavy in most of our counties. Considerable wheat has lodged owing to the recent heavy storms and is in bad shape.

Meadows look good up in Union county. Alfalfa and corn average, wheat and clover good.

Many hogs are fed in this section and the dairy industry is being more fully developed. Sheep are always to be found and there are also quite a number of young horses grazing about upon these excellent pastures.

From Columbus to Marion, in the northeastern part of Franklin county and up into the eastern portion of Delaware county there is need of lime. Many farms are not being farmed as they should. Then again, others are very representative of the progress of the times.

The profits upon the farm are better than they used to be and everyone seems to realize that our soils must be handled intelligently in order to prepare to feed the world.

Beef cattle have taken an advance, and to those engaged in the raising of thoroughbred dairy cattle there seems to be an excellent future. Sheep are coming back, and along with them there should be the desire to grow more roughage.

Lime is the mother of alfalfa and alfalfa is good for sheep.

The fall shipments of lime have started and some manufacturers report that their output is already taken. The worth of lime and ground limestone has been proven without a doubt and many localities are receiving as high as thirty carloads to be used upon the wheat ground. Many have ordered ahead with shipments to take place within the next thirty days ...

ENRICH THE SOIL BY USE OF LIME

Farmers Should Awaken to Possibilities of Their Lands.

GET LIME ON FARM, SAYS EXPERT

Many Tillers of the Soil Do Not Seem to Appreciate What Substantial Lime is Capable of Doing For Them—Geographic Bearing of Lime Being Considered by Some Farm Experts.

By G. A. WILDER.

In northeastern Ohio there are many farms which need attention in many respects—the pastures is low and many meadows will not make the amount of hay that they ought to make. Why? Simply because the farmers have not awakened up to the possibilities of their meadows and pastures.

Prior to passing through this section, I should say there was many acres of good growing, well cultivated farms, but there are many farms that of these farms are near by or close to large supply of carbonate of lime, yet they do not seem to appreciate the value of lime. Some of these farms are well tilled, they are on year after year taking off crops, but they do not seem to realize that they could enrich more if they would only lime their land.

The mere farms of northeastern Ohio are not exceptional, but are typical of many farms in other states and of what was once an inland sea of vast extent, and the geographic bearing of lime will show that deposits of carbonate of lime, which, if used, would prove beneficial, and also land lime. Thousands of years ago, when the country was flooded, most of the land was covered to oceans, rivers, inlands and Lake Erie. Geologists have been able to see a world and some charted going on, which is still in progress, yet still Ohio once inlandd wood and lime.

Some farms need a crop of lime to bring up as well as a clearing off of weeds, which, if left, will choke the machinery stands out in the field the year.

In Cuyahoga county many rest deposits of lime are found, and in Lake county there are many farms near by, they are off in color. But in order to restore crops in a first land in time and to give the legumes and other crops a chance to grow, farmers need the lime.

CLOSELY RELATED TO AGRICULTURE

Lime and Ground Limestone Industry of Vital Importance.

By G. A. WILDER.

Ohio annually uses lime and ground limestone to the value of $1,000,000 in manufacturing, so we see that agriculture is not the only industry of importance.

The quality of Ohio lime and limestone is unsurpassed, and the demand for she has been a large producer of lime and ground limestone, and the demand for lime and ground limestone has been been many causes, the best of which are:

These interests have built, are building and operating, and are paying taxes, they added to the greater value of the property, they are a source of revenue to the state, county, and township, they are a source of revenue to the state, county, the tanning industry and the manufacturing industry of Ohio.

In addition to the above cases large quantities are used in the state of Ohio, various agricultural interests, which are of great importance and advantage to the state, thereby producing, fruits, vegetables, and other products of the state. What is the effect of lime and limestone food. Yet there are many people who do not fully realize the value of lime to the art of economic farming, and it is a fact that it is one of the largest cash principle quantity of lime and limestone, and it is a fact that the farmers have a profitable farm, while the finest fruit produced in the state of Ohio comes from this section up in Erie, Sandusky and Ottawa counties.

The tanning industry of Ohio is a country is located at Clyde, O., where the tanning industry is carried on, and large yearly sales are made.

Ohio is a great farming state, and the farmers are the backbone of the state, and the farmers are the backbone of the state, and the farmers are the backbone of the CHAPTER I.

The Cryptic Coin

Kitty Gray, crack reporter on the Evening Star, pulled out of her typewriter the last sheet of paper and piled it on the little heap of finished copy which lay at her right. Then she closed her desk, stepped to the wardrobe and took her coat and hat.

Taking her little collection of copy paper from the desk, with the privilege of long tenure in office she walked to the desk of the city editor who although himself a married man had all this time without success tried to look at the work before him and not at the trim figure of Kitty Gray making ready for her luncheon journey.

"When will you deign to return?" asked he with a certain lapse in journalistic dignity.

"When I have a better story than this guff—in the vernacular."

Kitty's favorite lunching place was in one of the great department stores, where women were made welcome and comfortable, and she bent thither her steps, but midway in her journey she paused, as often she did, to gaze into the window of the little antique shop which occupied space in one of the unimportant side streets.

Kitty Gray's eyes were arrested by something that she saw—an object which she did not recall ever before to have noted in the window. It lay close to the glass, just tilted back so that it might be the better seen. It apparently was an old coin or part of one, curiously done in some dark metal, probably silver badly oxidized.

As Kitty bent down to examine it more closely, she saw that the coin bore an inscription, or what appeared to be such—an inscription broken across by the fracture which had divided the coin itself.

Her curiosity excited, Kitty Gray stepped into the little shop, whose proprietor she knew very well.

"Good morning, Mr. Mainz," she said with the customary newspaper inversion of the order of the day, "how's business? Any new fans, idols, coins—?"

"Coins? Vot? Sure, I got somelting new dot is old. I choost t'ink of it. He iss only a part of himselluf. Should I show him to you?"

"Oh maybe I saw it in the window," said Kitty, smiling. "You mean the broken coin?"

[illegible]

"I'm down to the last words now. It is curious—a proper name. It is only the Latin name of the kingdom of Gretzhoffen! That's a little bankrupt kingdom over in southern Europe, near the Mediterranean. I know about it—I did a story about it once, the time the kingdom was trying to float a loan in this country. I had to read up a whole lot."

"I bet you could did it, Miss Gray," said Mainz admiringly. "Vell, goot-by. Come again und tell me vot you find out, like a goot girl."

"Sure," said Kitty, and turned to leave, her coin clutched tightly in her hand. So intent was she on her purchase that she did not notice she had dropped the package containing the shell-ribbed fan. Vaguely missing something as she emerged into the open air, she turned back, and almost ran into a man who had passed her as she came out. He was a foreign-looking individual, dark of hair and eyes and skin, strongly built, a figure such as one would note. He bowed now courteously enough as he handed her the package she had let fall. Kitty thanked him and hurried on her way. This stranger entered the shop and spoke in some foreign tongue to the old dealer, who shook his head.

"No," said he, answering in English, "I choost sold it—to dot young lady who vent out."

"Who is she? I know her very well. She is on der papers. Better look out or she put you in der paper sure. Miss Kitty Gray vas an oldt frent of mine. She read like a book vot vos on the coin. Vy didn't you telephone—maybe she sell it back to you—I don't know. She wouldn't sold it back to me. I know dot. Vot' you are going?"

CHAPTER II.

The Big Assignment.

Kitty Gray did not go to her usual place for luncheon that day. Instead she hurried into a nearby delicatessen shop and bought a sandwich, which she put in her handbag. After this she hurried on back to the office. Arrived there, without ceremony she went again to the desk of the city editor, and silently laid down before him her empty purse, her antique fan, her sandwich and her broken coin.

Cutler looked up with professional calm.

"Yes, Miss Gray? Why all this ordeal array of fresh and interesting objects?"

PEST IN LIBRARIES

Silverfish an Enemy Universally Dreaded.

Housewives Will Be Glad to Learn That There Has Been an Effective Method Discovered of Doing Away With Nuisance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most troublesome enemies of books, papers, card labels, starched clothing and occasionally of stored food substances, is the insect known as the silverfish. This pest, commonly known by such names as the silverfish, silver louse, silver witch, sugarfish, etc., is especially annoying to housewives from its habit of eating into articles containing starched clothing, linen or curtains. It will frequently cause wall paper to scale off, by feeding on the starch paste.

In libraries considerable damage is done by the insects to the binding of books, and it will frequently eat off the lettering on labels to get at the paste beneath. Heavily glazed paper seems very attractive to this insect, and it has frequently happened that the labels in museum collections have been disfigured or destroyed by it, the glazed surface having been entirely eaten off. In some cases books printed on heavily sized paper will have the surface of the leaves a good deal scraped, leaving only the portions covered by the ink.

An effective means of getting rid of this pest is to spread a poisoned paste upon bits of cardboard, and tuck these into crevices in bookshelves, back of mantels, under washboards, and in the bottom of bureau and bookcase drawers. A thin, boiled starch paste should be prepared by adding to the flour from 3 to 5 per cent powdered white arsenic (poison), and then using sufficient water to boil into a thin paste. This should be spread upon cardboard and allowed to dry. The preparation, however, is poisonous to human beings as well as to insects and it must be used with the utmost care. The silverfish readily succumbs to pyrethrum, and wherever this can be applied as on bookshelves it fur-

Alfalfa, animal nutrition, apple culture, beet production, birds, clover, co-operation, corn, county experiment farms, dairying, fair exhibits, fertility and fertilizers, forestry, grass and other forage crops, greenhouses, horses, horticulture, insects, oats, orchard culture, peaches, plant diseases, plums, potatoes, poultry, sheep, small fruits, soil, soybeans, spraying, sugar beets, swine, tobacco, vegetables, weather and climate, weeds and wheat. Cut-Out Noise

Automobile experts say it makes no difference whatever with an automobile motor to run it with the muffler open, except that it makes a more disagreeable noise. The cities have organized a crusade against this open muffler nuisance, and it is earnestly hoped the campaign may soon reach Painesville. It would be difficult to imagine a more disagreeable and unnecessary noise than that of the open muffler. Many machine are now made that have no "cut-outs" at all.

MANSLAUGHTER

Is Charge Made Against Fairport Druggist Whose Auto Killed Child

E. E. Schaefer, Fairport druggist, for whom the police were searching, gave himself up Monday night, stating that he had been out of town and did not know that a warrant was out for his arrest.

Schaefer is charged with manslaughter, it being alleged that his auto struck three-year-old Bailey Csaki of Fairport, causing injuries from which the child died.

Schaefer was taken before Justice Lloyd Wyman, Monday evening, and pleaded not guilty to the charge. Bail of $1,000 was furnished and the case was continued until August 18 at 9 o'clock.

Road Needs Attention

Painesville papers have frequently in the past had considerable just criticism of some of Geauga County's roads, which at certain seasons of the year are a disgrace to civilization, but we have never yet seen in the Painesville papers any criticism whatever of that section of the highway which begins at the South Concord line in Lake County and extends north past the old quarry to what is known as the "half-way house" corners.

This strip of road, all of it in Lake County, is traversed daily by people going back and forth between Lake and Geauga counties. It has been in a deplorable condition for many years at all times of the year, and this season is in the worst shape ever known by men who have been familiar with the Painesville-Chardon road for 50 years.

We believe that Lake County is losing more than she gains by ignoring this piece of road, which certainly is a disgrace to civilization.—Geauga Republican.

Spondylotheraphy

As soon as the State Medical board shall be able to hold examinations, all non-medical healers in Ohio, excepting divine healers, will have to be licensed by the State.

This is the result of the sweeping provisions of the Platt-Ellis bill, which became operative August 1 at midnight. Affected, among others, are chiropodists, chiropracters, masseurs and practicers of spondylotherapy, naprapathy, neuropathy, hydrotheapathy, psycho-therapy and other nonmedical cults. So far as those in Painesville who practice spondylotheraphy are concerned, the law will operate upon very few. For some reason or other Painesville people do not take to spondylotheraphy as they should. Oh, it's a marvelous treatment. How could it be otherwise? Just look at the word. It sounds as if it were derived from spondulicks.

Practitioners who have been operating in the State for five years or more need not take an examination to show fitness, but all must be licensed. The new law does not affect osteopaths, who operate under a separate law.

Mentor Schools Active

School authorities at Mentor are busy in preparation for a year of activity, and a number of changes will be made and ready for the opening of school, Tuesday, Sept. 7. As changes in the course of study may be made, pupils are requested not to purchase books before the first day. A large well will be dug for a better water supply; the grounds will be filled and graded; new desks installed in some of the rooms, and playground appratus will be added.

Pupils having high grades in the different departments were Martha Brecht, Corine Johnson, Eugene Miller, Elizabeth Messer, Margaret Horn, Dorothy Stieren and Ona Whitcomb.

TWENTY-THREE YEARS

As Post Master of Willoughby Is The Record of Captain John S. Ellen

Serving the U. S. Government for a period of twenty-three years as local postmaster; repeatedly elected by his fellow citizens as Mayor of the village from 1872 to 1900; a soldier of the Union army for three and a half years, is a portion of the life record of John S. Ellen, who rounded out 81 years of activity on August 1st, and now just on the eve of retiring from the services of Uncle Sam.

Born in 1834 in Devizes, Wilshire, England, he came with members of the family to America in 1848. The trip was made on the bark "Plenty" of Prince Edwards Island, and consumed six weeks.

In a reminiscent talk with Mr. Ellen this week he informed us that he remembers distinctly the convention at Springfield, Ills., when Lincoln and Douglas contended for a seat in the U. S. Senate. This occurred in 1858, and he was present at the time.—Willoughby Independent.

Bailey Csaki, the 3-year-old son of Lewis Csaki of Fairport, who was struck by an automobile driven by E. E. Schaefer early Monday evening of last week, died at the hospital Saturday evening. The funeral was held Monday, burial being made in Evergreen cemetery.

Peter's Paige Punctured

The justly noted Peter Piper, who picked a peck of pickled peppers for a penny, didn't have so much on a well known Lake county citizen as the following will show.

Peter Peterson, Perry plowman, purchased Paige for pleasure, paying plenty plunks. Peter's Paige performed perfectly until punctured by Painesville party. Now Peter's peeved.

Baseball at the Fair

There will be a ball game each of the last three days of the Fair. The game played on Friday will be a championship game between the winners of preceding games. Lake county has some excellent material for several good nines, and if the hopes of the fans are realized, fair week will see some of the best ball games ever played in this county.

A purse of $100 has been offered by the fair directors and a diamond will be laid out in front of the grand stand.

Have you cut the weeds along the road on that vacant lot of yours? If not, don't you think you ought to get busy and do it? You don't want your neighbors to cut your weeds, do you? Of course you don't and you don't want the township trustees or the city council to have them cut and charge the same to the property in taxes. The law makes this provision and right now is the time for you to get busy.

BEST HORSES

Ever Seen On Lake County Oval Will Be at the Fair This Year

Lovers of horse racing will have a rare feast offered for entertainment at the Lake County Fair this year. In addition to the regular program of trotting and pacing events there will be a green race and a free-for-all pace. In the trotting and pacing classes liberal purses will be given and the early closing entry list shows some of the best horses that ever been seen on the Lake County oval.

In order that fast time may be made and in the hope that a new track competition record may be established, the track has been kept in first class condition all summer and experts say that it has never been as fast as right now. This promises well for records.

On Wednesday occurs the 2.16 class for trotters, the 2.15 class for pacers and the 2.24 class for trotters. Likely the big race of the meet will be the 2.20 trot for 3-year-olds on Thursday. Competition cannot but be of the keenest for the purse of $500 offered. This race will admit the stars of the country as twelve of the original fifteen nominations are still eligible. On Thursday there is also carded the Green race, the 2.30 trot and the 2.25 pace. Friday occurs the 2.20 pace, 2.20 class trot, and the free-for-all pace.

This program is one of the best balanced ever issued by the Lake County Fair Association and is sure to provide sport that will please the most enthusiastic and fastidious. If the weather is good there can be nothing to detract from the enjoyment of the races this year and the great program can be enjoyed from start to finish.

The board of control met Tuesday forenoon and awarded the contract for the new machinery for the municipal light plant to The Kerr Turbine company of Wellesville, N. Y. The bid of this company for the contract was $9,870.00. The contract calls for a steam turbine and a 500 k. w. generator to be installed within 90 days.

Mistake Ends Life

Michael Juhasz alias Michael Schaefer, who has been living in F. D. Moodey's barn on Mentor avenue for the past four or five years, was taken suddenly ill about 8 o'clock, Sunday morning. He was taken to the hospital where he died shortly after. The man had been drinking heavily. His whiskey had been taken away from him and it is thought that he drank wood alcohol.

Some Potato Yield

Speaking of spuds, how is this for a potato yield? Postmaster Lapham of Unionville received a sample of the "Old Dominion" variety raised in Virginia. The sample weighed a half-pound. Mr. Lapham cut it into sections and planted them. The other day he harvested his crop and secured 48 lbs. of toothsome tubers. That is multiplying the food product some.

PRIMARY ELECTION VERY QUIET AFFAIR

Only About 300 Voters Visited the Polls Tuesday. Only Contest Was For Solicitor

Tuesday's primary election was in the nature of a farce. Few people visited the polls and those few cast "joke" tickets, voting for almost anyone whose name occurred to them. Primaries as now conducted, comes a long ways from expressing the "will of the people."

E. G. Huntington secured the Republican nomination for Mayor, having no opposition. For president of the council, E. D. Mayhew defeated J. S. Burrows by a vote of 201 to 87. For auditor and treasurer, George R. Moodey and W. M. Werner had everything their own way.

Attorneys H. L. Amidon and Ralph Ostrander ran a close race for nomination to the office of city solicitor, Amidon receiving 174 votes to Ostrander's 137.

For councilmen at large W. E. Malin, Robert McMillan and Guy Wyman were the winners. Members of council nominated are: Ward 1, W. F. Post, Ward 2, E. W. Hadeler; Ward 3, G. L. Eaton, Ward 4, John Spaulding.

The Democrats "passed up" the primaries, only fourteen voting. F. D. Malin received the entire vote for Mayor, while various candidates received from one to six votes for the other offices.

Mrs. William Genung, Mrs. Wilcox and Levi Gaylord were the oldest ones present. The officers for the ensuing year are Chas. Goodrich, Geneva, recording secretary; Susie Doy Goodrich, Geneva, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Alice Crocker Walding, Perry, and Delos Bates, Madison, treasurer.

Ferry, Jefferson, and Mrs. Lily Gale, Bartholemew. The day was spent in renewing acquaintance and reviving memories of the days spent at Madison seminary. RECENT DEATHS

Arrested and Discharged

Miss Frances Green, daughter of Walter L. Green of North Madison, was given a hearing in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court Tuesday on a charge of driving her automobile without proper brakes on the car.

The action was brought by W. L. Brakeman, also of North Madison, who claims that Miss Green ran her machine into the rear of his car on the night of June 28.

Miss Green was represented by Mayor A. J. Trunkey of Geneva and had little difficulty in securing her discharge, many witnesses being examined. The evidence showed that the girl is a careful driver, that the machine is equipped with the proper brakes and that it cost the sum of $4.30 to repair the damage done to the Brakeman car.

MEMBERS NEW STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE

THE ten men shown in the above picture have been selected by Governor Willis as the first state board of agriculture, as established by the Mallow law, passed by the recently adjourned session of the legislature. Reading from left to right, the members in the picture are the following:

First row—L. S. Myers, Akron; Donald R. Acklin, Perrysburg; C. K. Paterson, Piketon; D. D. Snider, Gratiot; John Begg, Columbus Grove. Rear row—T. D. West, Perry; Dr. J. W. Kirgan, Cincinnati; C. A. Branson, Cadiz; Newton D. Bunnell, Lebanon, and R. D. Williamson, Xenia.

In making these selections Governor Willis took counsel with the officers of the State Grange, with the leaders of the many organizations of farmers and stock breeders of the state, and men generally prominent in agricultural affairs in the state. The board will have larger powers and greater responsibility than any other such board that ever held office under the state government. The first great task to devolve upon its hands will be the direction of the State Fair.

CHAPTER VI.

Count Frederick.

Kitty Gray turned suddenly to the man standing beside her in the moonbeaming room with a steady gaze.

"Who are you?" asked she. "Why did you follow me?"

"Why, Kitty!" Frederick suddenly remembered. "Whatever I am—whatever you may think me—I do not believe you be capable of gratitude to counsel!"

"What is your name?"

"They call me Count Rodema, Mademoiselle."

Kitty Gray turned yet more closely to him, peered intently into his face.

"Count Rodema—Count—why, why! Surely we have met somewhere before. We have a common country. Would it be wrong if I asked you—I begin again—who?"

"You are my friend—"

"To be my friend, my sir!"

"Yes, my friend, my loyal, obligatory friend!" exclaimed Rodema, hastily. "Be airtocy me—be a dog!"

"Yes, you and I must see him again—and soon."

"What? Would you trust yourself once more in his presence? You are a brave woman, Mademoiselle, and you are innocent. I warn you—"

"Never the less, if I am to go forward with this matter, which brought me here to Grandcliffe, surely I must once more see the Count Frederick."

The man at her side hesitated no longer. Suddenly, he took her by the wrist in his grip. "As for you, Mademoiselle, you have brought many a time before now Count Frederick's wrath upon you, you say. Indeed I know! I know, too, you do not care to know—you or the jailer—they will do—"

It was a dreary bed, and Nelson Sinclair, the two days on up the court throughout the court and prison, was very, very, very,

UNFORTUNATE OHIO

Ohio can't escape what Gates and there is no much distress among the women that Governor Willis has issued a proclamation asking charitable donations for them. Railroad discrimination against Ohio miners is said to be the cause of the Gates-Ohio Wheat or that be the case or not, a situation presented as follows:

Valuable coal deposits are lying around. People in need of coal are paying high prices for it. And miners unemployed in Ohio are greatly in need that depend on charity for a living.

Ohio is in this condition, the president says, because portions of government nothing better to do than to act as pal for charity. A governor who knows his business would have noticed the fact that the State has failed to do duty when these valuable deposits were allowed carelessly and unscientifically exploited. He would see that there must be something wrong with laws that make it more profitable to hold natural resources out of use than to have them in demand of begging for alms, he would demand of legislation that would make this unfortunate situation be ended for all time. Some time will have a governor who knows enough to urge a policy so just and humane. At present, unfortunately, she has not.

WAR MEANS YOU

Our appeal to the English Navy has been on the hallmark for a long time, says the Liverpool Telegraph. It is a long and unsatisfactory appeal.

Another is just making its appearance. It is signed by R. McKenna, chancellor of the exchequer. It reads: "The success of the war from will be the sense determination of the world of the financial stability of the British empire. The state, in its rich or poor, is little to be envied who at this critical moment fails to contribute to his utmost for the security of his country."

War is a phrase. It means you and it means your dollar. It means not only your money but your time. It is to be thought of as a wasting year long, and the other fellow's, and your dollar, not the other fellow's.

We have to remember that we are in a state of mind which we may apply which between when we scarcely know or not know fight it, and money which we do not contribute, suppose then with the means of fighting.

The test answer we have to the future, "War means you."

ITS PLACE AT HOME

Washington officials are reported to be "gravely concerned" over the alleged assault by Zapata soldiers in Mexico on an American coastal Military, who is said to have been carrying dynamite, dispatches and flying the American flag on his schooner.

The incident is said to have resulted in "pulling the American flag down in Mexico, especially under the strained conditions which obtain, we suppose."

Now is it apparent why he should have been carrying dynamite, dispatches. According to the story, Military was travelling with a set of the Ohio minister to Mexico. Was the American acting as the courier of the Chilean diplomat? If so, why was he carrying the flag of Chile instead of that of the United States. May he not have been counting the very trouble into which he is alleged to have fallen?

The United statesmen have succeeded of wrapping themselves in the folds of the American flag, even on foreign soil, would be unfortunate if it did not so often lead to complications of a more or less serious character. Official Washington seems to be inept up in concert pitch just now and ready to participate in the galleries on the slightest provocation. Tell it official Washington has a good sense that it should strive to maintain it would not congregate incident such as this, to a sort of cause bell. There is nothing in the report of the business to indicate that Military had any business in Mexico as the American flag on Mexican soil.

It would be prudent if Washington officials go slower to have the stars and stripes hauled down every time a gun fires or there is a fire exercise. Flags are likely to risk by a very such as could be looked for Almost together in the United States where a foreigner should be so foolish as to go parading around with his national colors. A lot of weighty stuff published in Washington by Americans who travel over the world with the stars and stripes serving as a challenge to further insult and injury. The place for the American flag is at home. It has enough to do there.

1915 WHEAT CROP IN U.S. SURPASSES ALL

Its Estimated Value Is Placed at More Than $1,000,000,000 by Exports.

BUCKEYE STATE STANDS HIGH THIS YEAR

Ohio Has Estimated Wheat Production of 19.5 Bushels an Acre, 86 Bushels of Corn and 95 Bushels of Oats —Table of Important Crops.

Washington, D. C.—The 1915 wheat crop of the United States is the largest ever grown in any country. Its estimated value is placed at more than $1,000,000,000. The corn crop's value may reach $2,600,000,000.

The American harvest has in prospect 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn, 1,500,000,000 bushels of oats and nearly 1,000,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Predictions of record crops of rye, tobacco, white and sweet potatoes, hay and rice are made.

American farmers, who cultivated 310,546,000 acres, increased any previous acreage by 10,000,000.

Ohio Shows Gains.

That Ohio stands high this year in winter wheat, corn and oats production is shown by the government report. Ohio has an estimated winter wheat production of 19.5 bushels an acre, 86 bushels of corn and 95 bushels of oats an acre.

The 1915 crop report gives Ohio 40,200,000 bushels of winter wheat, an increase of nearly 4,000,000 bushels over 1914; 150,200,000 bushels of corn, an increase of 8,000,000 bushels; 66,200,000 bushels of oats, an increase of 16,000,000 bushels.

The condition of spring wheat was placed Monday at 93.4; that of corn at 79.5.

Estimates of the principal crops, just announced by the department of agriculture, based on conditions of Aug. 1, show that all crops will be greater than last year.

Interest centered on wheat and corn. Both showed improvement over July conditions, though excessive rains and cold weather in the central states interfered with threshing. Oats also suffered in those states, but in other sections the improvement more than offset this.

Corn Prospects Increase.

Corn prospects increased almost 100,000,000 bushels, the principal gains having been Illinois 30,000,000 bushels, Kansas 24,000,000, Oklahoma 26,000,000, Nebraska 15,000,000, Iowa 14,000,000 and Texas 10,000,000.

Kansas showed a loss of 12,000,000 bushels in winter wheat, Oklahoma 6,000,000, Nebraska 4,000,000 and Missouri $3,000,000, while Ohio showed an increase of nearly 4,000,000 bushels and Indiana gained 4,000,000.

White potatoes promise to exceed their former record production by 103,000,000 bushels and sweet potatoes by 4,000,000 bushels.

Other increases over record crops indicated include tobacco 28,000,000 pounds, flax 4,200,000 bushels, hay 2,400,000 tons and rye 1,300,000 bushels.

Corn prospects fell 206,000,000 bushels and oats 16,000,000 bushels below the records.

	August forecast	1914 crop

PROMISE BIG PAY BOOST

INDIANA COMPANIES WILL DOUBLE WAGES IF WAR CONTINUES UNTIL NEXT JUNE.

Gary, Ind.—A wage increase of 100 per cent is promised the employes of the Aetna Chemical Co. and Aetna Explosive Co., according to an authoritative report made here. The increase of 100 per cent, however, is contingent upon a continuation of the war in Europe until the first of next June.

The first increase of 10 per cent is announced as having taken effect on the first of the present month. There is to be another increase of 10 per cent on Sept. 1. It is announced that such increases will continue for five months, and if at the end of that time the experiment has proved successful it will be repeated for another period of five months until the 100 per cent increase of wages is reached.

Mexican Bandits Slain.

Brownsville, Tex.—Five Mexican bandits and one Mexican woman were killed in the fighting at Norias, 68 miles north of here.

For an hour 15 Americans, eight of them United States cavalrymen, stood off an attack of 80 Mexicans. Five of the Americans were wounded. Three of them were soldiers.

The 15 Americans were saved from death, just as their ammunition gave out, by the arrival of 17 Texas rangers. Additional United States soldiers have arrived on the scene.

Fire Sweeps Ohio Village.

Columbus, O.—Seven buildings in the heart of Harrisburg, a village 14 miles southwest of here, were destroyed by the biggest fire ever had there. The Columbus fire department was called upon for help, but failed to respond because no adequate water supply was in the town. For seven hours the villagers, with buckets and hand pumps, fought the flames. For a time the entire community was threatened, and wet blankets were placed upon roofs to prevent a spread of the flames. This agency was effective.

TEUTON FLAG FLIES OVER POLISH CITY

German-Austro Troops Capture Warsaw After Year of Fierce Fighting.

VICTORS PURSUE RETREATING RUSSIANS

Honor of Being First to Enter Capital Goes to Bavarian Troops, Although Real Credit of Capture Goes to Gen. von Hindenburg.

CHIEF EVENTS IN VICTORIOUS RUSH OF TEUTONS AGAINST RUSSIANS

March 22—Przemysl taken by Russians, marking the last victory of the czar's forces in the east.

June 3—Austro Germans recapture Przemysl.

June 23—Austro Germans recapture Lemberg.

July 15—Germans take Przasnysz.

July 24—Fortresses of Pultusk and Rozan taken by Germans.

Aug. 5—Capture of Warsaw officially announced.

London, England.—The German flag flies over Warsaw after a year of fighting. The final defenses of the city were stormed Thursday morning by Bavarian troops 36 hours after Prince Leopold had led them against the outer forts.

The Russian army is in retreat to Brest-Litovsk, 120 miles to the eastward, with the Germans herd on its heels, while other German and Austrian armies are closing up from north and south in an effort to cut off the retiring corps. Although official bulletins indicate that the Russians retreated in good order, fighting only a rear guard action at Warsaw when it was seen that the city could be held no longer, it is believed that the blow suffered in Poland will paralyze Russia for months to come.

The honor of being the first to enter Warsaw goes to the Bavarian troops under Prince Leopold, a brother of the king of Bavaria, who appeared before Warsaw only 36 hours before the city fell. It was under the storming attacks of the Bavarians that the Russians were forced to evacuate the strong Slonie lines west of Warsaw and fell back within the outer fortifications. The big German guns hurriedly brought up took only a short time to effect a breach and the Bavarians again returned to the attack. But while the Bavarians and their prince will receive all the honors due them, the real credit for the capture of the Polish capital goes to Field Marshal von Hindenburg, whose mighty blows along the Narew sealed the fate of the city more than two weeks ago, and to Field Marshall von Mackensen, whose drive through Galicia made possible the great enveloping movement which has given the Germans all of Poland.

Warsaw, the metropolis of western Russia, lies on the Vistula river, 825 miles southeast of Petrograd and about half that distance from Berlin. It is the capital of the general government of Warsaw and an important railway and industrial center with a population of about 900,000. At the outbreak of the war it was one of the most prosperous cities of eastern Europe. The city is beautifully situated on a cliff terrance 100 feet high on the left bank of the Vistula. It is a steel and industrial center.

Didn't Know Neck Was Broken.

New York City.—For more than five days John Hughes went to work and was with his family without knowing his neck was broken and he was near death. He complained of a slight pain in his neck but did not think it worth while to see a physician. When about to sit down at the dinner table with his family something in his neck snapped and he fell to the floor unconscious. While swimming at Long Beach, Hughes dived from a jetty and his head hit a log. He was dazed for a few minutes.

Rear Admiral Badger Retires.

Washington.—Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger retired Aug. 6 on account of age, but because of his special qualifications will continue on duty indefinitely in connection with the army and navy joint board and the navy general board, which are working out national defense problems. Admiral Badger was born in Rockville, Md., and appointed to the naval academy by President Grant. He was commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet from January 4, 1913, until its return from the Mexican gulf coast.

PLANS TO INVADE WORLD MARKETS

Flying Squadron of U. S. Government Commercial Scouts to Pave Way.

WILL REPORT TO HOME MANUFACTURERS

American Experts to Investigate Every Foreign Country, Except the European War Area, for Business Opportunities.

Washington, D. C.—A flying squadron of government commercial scouts will prepare the way for American invasion of world markets heretofore dominated by Europe.

Under plans just perfected by Dr. E. E. Pratt, chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, agents will be sent to South America, Africa, Australia and the far east, covering practically the whole world except the European war area, their reports to be submitted to American manufacturers.

Juan Homs and Frank H. Von Motz will make a world-wide investigation of the market for agricultural implements, Homs starting in South Africa and covering Australia and probably the far east. Von Motz will cover the South American continent.

Laws to Be Coded.

Special agents also will be sent to study the furniture and wearing apparel markets in Latin America, supplementing work now in progress in the far east.

Special Agent Edwin M. Borchard already has begun an exhaustive investigation of the commercial laws of South America and will draft a working manual of the legal conditions of business in every country on the southern continent.

Special Agent Walter Fischer, investigating the fruit markets in South America, now is touring fruit districts of the United States to determine the possibility of export trade. Special Agent R. M. O'Dell is in China studying cotton goods market, with particular reference to Japanese competition, while F. H. Smith is preparing a world review of the lumber industry.

Will Tell of Work.

To supplement this work Commercial Agent Rose will visit all parts of the United States and confer with commercial organizations, manufacturers and merchants, telling of the development work in progress. Later a traveling agent will follow him, who will devote his time to pointing out the possibilities of the South American markets.

In the last fiscal year the commerce bureau has handled nearly 6,000 trade opportunities which resulted directly in exports of $125,000,000 when communicated to manufacturers.

CONTRACTORS' OFFERS FOR $800,000 HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT ARE OPENED

Columbus, O.—Bids for about $800,000 of highway contracts were opened at the state highway department Friday. Most of the big contracts will be delayed in being awarded and started because of the practice of asking alternative bids on three or four different styles of construction. In such cases the low bids on each style must go to the counties for approval before contracts are finally awarded. Contracts awarded were:

Belmont county—Section M of Barnesville-Hendrysburg road in Warren township, length 2.50 miles, brick, to Ohio Valley Construction Co. of Cincinnati, $55,987.

Licking county—Columbus-Millersburg road, 2.71 miles, water bound macadam, Lamb & Neal, Thornville, O., $24,800.

Licking county—Four-fifths of a mile, 16-foot concrete, to Lamb & Neal, Thornville, $10,233. For constructing bridges and culverts over this stretch, Lamb & Neal, bid $750.

Lorain county—Section D of the Milan-Elyria road, 4.4 miles of water bound macadam, Knepper, Burr & Jacobs, Tiffin, O., $28,300.

Muskingum county—Section O of national pike in Union township, 300 feet, Parrish & Bales, Dayton, $960.

Muskingum county—Section P of national pike, 254 feet, Parrish & Bales, Dayton, $812.

Trumbull county—Section P of Youngstown-Sharon road, 3.84 miles of bituminous macadam, Evans & Walters, Hubbard, O., $37,973.73.

Two Negroes Publicly Hanged.

Starkville, Miss.—Just before two negroes were publicly hanged before 5,000 men, women and children of Fresno, near here, and several trainloads of excursionists, the audience sang "There Is a Land of Pure Delight." Before, after, and, in some cases, at the time of the double execution, political candidates for office moved solemnly through the crowd and put in a good word for themselves.

For it was a gala day in Fresno and community.

Robbers Invade Fort.

New York City.—What extreme jingoists will probably declare additional evidence of our national unpreparedness came when the authorities of Fort Totten reported to the police that on Wednesday night burglars had forced their way into two buildings within the fort and had stolen $1,000 worth of clothing, money and jewelry, including one dozen gold watches kept in the post exchange or canteen. The officials of the fort have been unable to find the culprits and have appealed to the local police for assistance.

DECLARES NOAH ATE THE FORBIDDEN FRUIT

Professor Who Has Translated Mystic Hieroglyphics Says Adam and Eve Didn't Commit Ancient Crime.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Who ate the forbidden fruit and by that act condemned all mankind to suffering and death?

No, you're wrong, all wrong—it was Noah, heretofore shown only as the faithful skipper of the famous ark.

Poor Adam and Eve, who have been maligned for that calamitous deed throughout these numerous aeons, at last are vindicated; they lived and died in their idyllic Eden without even thinking of making a banquet of the cassia tree's yield. It was Noah, Noah the grandiose, praised of the world.

At least that's what Dr. Steven Langdon, professor of Assyriology in Oxford university, will have us believe. Nor does he make this revolutionary assertion idly, it is to an ancient Sumerian tablet now reposing in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania that he points for proof. He has translated the mystic hieroglyphics thereon and written a book about them, and this book has just been issued by the museum people.

The aforesaid brief against the hoary conqueror of the flood is the main theme of the book, or rather, as Dr. Langdon puts it, the charge held against him in the Sumerian theology. And he goes on to state in his scholarly way that this particular theology is a mere thousand years or so older than the Book of Genesis, in which our very first forebears were blamed for our downfall. The fact, however, that the Sumerian allegations were pigeonholed, thrown out of court or otherwise effectively disposed of in the days of Abraham doesn't prove anything to Dr. Langdon.

Still accepting Dr. Langdon's authority, this venerable slab is the best calcium yet to be thrown into the abyss of the past. It corrects many false impressions we have childishly (in our ignorance) harbored about paradise, the creation and the flood.

Eden, it affirms, was situated on the east coast of the Arabian gulf, a hundred miles distant from the source of the Tigris-Euphrates. Now, that's just about how far Coney Island is from Philadelphia, so it is not improbable that many vacationists of ye olden times cavorted there on holidays.

In this paradise ruled Enki, the water dog, and his consort, Ninella. Men lived in a state of absolute innocence. Beasts were harmless as kittens. It never stormed.

Everybody had nothing to do until tomorrow, as it were. But woe—whoa, too—unto us! Along came Nintu, the goddess, who laid claim to having created mortals from clay. One fair day she appointed Noah chief gardner of this beautiful, perfect place. The only stricture she made was that nobody should taste of the cassia. Noah, however, proved human enough to yearn for what was denied him.

The tablet's final revelation is that the last king of paradise ruled 64,800 years, but it doesn't say whether he died young or not.

Warns of Army Worm.

Washington, D. C.—The department of agriculture has warned the farmers to be prepared to meet the attack of the fall army worm, which is coming east and north from Texas.

Aids Stork Visitation.

New York City.—Extensive experiments in a new method of painless childbirth, which is said to incorporate all the good qualities of the Freiburg twilight sleep without the ill effects, have just been completed by Dr. H. C. Allen, obstetrician of the Cumberland-st hospital, Brooklyn. The new treatment was begun over a year ago following its discovery by Dr. Allen. It consists of administration of nitrous oxide and oxygen instead of scopolamin and narcophin, used in the German formula.

Auto Occupants Are Hurt.

Springfield, O.—When a large touring car carrying eleven persons, including six children, skidded and went down an embankment near Tremont City, north of here, Mrs. Mary Solomon, wife of Charles Solomon, merchant of Winchester, Brown county, was caught under the machine. She was bruised across the chest and may have suffered internal injuries. Charles Jacobs of Sardinia, Adams county, was cut about the hands and wrist by broken glass. The other members of the party also were bruised and cut.

WALL STREET BLIND?

SEEMS TO THINK IT CAN CONCEAL WAVE OF PROSPERITY.

Country's Immense Riches Multiplying Rapidly, Cannot Be Manipulated by Stock Market Ticker.

What is the matter with Wall street?

This country, with nearly a billion bushels of wheat, with nearly three billion bushels of corn, with all other crops in proportion, is now about to take out of the ground more natural wealth than was dreamed of by the whole world only a few generations ago.

This country, with the steel plants operating nearly 100 per cent full, with thousands of our other mills and factories running day and night, with the railroads once more earning a living, with general business steadily gaining headway, is again set out on the road of fabulous industrial and commercial wealth making.

This country, with its sales abroad of war and all other supplies at the rate of a net foreign trade balance of $5,000,000 a day, $6,000,000 a day, $7,000,000 a day—certainly a billion and a half a year, probably two billion a year—is going out of Europe's debt like magic, is piling up international credits mountain high, is founding a financial power incomparable.

Does Wall street fancy that when it has cold feet it must freeze the great red-blooded throbbing heart of the nation into paralysis? If it does it has mental chilblains.

Does Wall street imagine that any records of discouragement and gloom that it can write on the stock market ticker conceal the tidal waves of prosperity which are sweeping up and down this country? If it does it is blind.

Does Wall street conceive that the immeasurable riches of the United States, multiplying faster than the gain can be counted, can be manipulated or bugger-muggered or panic-spilled off this favored and happy land into the bottom of the sea? If it does it is cracked.

What is the matter with Wall street?—Washington Times.

Provisions for Defense.

Speaker Champ Clark is for peace, but not for peace at any price. On the contrary, he is a firm believer in adequate provision for defense. This, in his opinion, does not require a large standing army, or "a navy equal to the two biggest navies in the world." Here is his program, as outlined in the discussion inspired by the reception of the liberty bell at San Francisco.

"I am in favor of doubling the number of cadets at West Point and of making it obligatory upon the secretary of war to detail an army officer to any school, college or university which will furnish a minimum of two hundred students to drill. In that way and at the least possible cost we could in a few years have enough drilled men to officer a volunteer army of a million soldiers if need be. In fact there would be wisdom in a scheme by which, in addition to the cadets educated free by the government at West Point and Annapolis, any boy possessing the prescribed qualifications might on reasonable terms be educated at those two great institutions."

He went on to declare also in favor of a "well-equipped national guard to be used for strictly national purposes," and he concluded:

"It seems that if little Switzerland can mobilize in a few days an army of half a million well-drilled men by means of her system of military education and discipline—the cheapest system known among men and sufficiently effective—we could by such application of her system as fits our case in a year or two be able to mobilize an army of two millions of well-disciplined men at a cost which to us would be a mere bagatelle—which would be a most effective insurance for this country and all her citizens and their interests."

This is a moderate program that will suit moderate men.—Evening Wisconsin.

Securing Foreign Trade.

England and Germany—particularly the latter—understand perfectly how much commerce depends on knowing the foreign customer's language. The United States, content for a long time with the vast home market carefully secured by outrageous tariffs, has done nothing to develop a foreign sales force. It is a defect which will have to be remedied if this country is going to get its rightful share of the world's business.

Sad Blow.

It is a sad blow to the Republicans that the income tax is likely to yield $10,000,000 more than the estimates.—Philadelphia Record.

Takes Time for Business.

If Mr. Wilson were like some other presidents he would have to put in a large share of his time riding around the country and shaking hands and only in his off moments would he have opportunity to consider serious problems.

Not Really Suffering.

The income tax has been roundly denounced by its half million victims, but a taxable income is a comfortable thing, and the sufferers ought to be the happy half million.

Doesn't Look Like Decline.

Unprecedented shipbuilding activity is reported in this country, 125 vessels, aggregating a little less than 600,000 tons, being under construction. This appears to indicate that recent wails about the decline of the shipping industry are without warrant.

Not a Very Good Crop.

Some agricultural observers express the opinion that the crop of Republican presidential aspirants is more weedy than usual.

ANOTHER NEW LAW IS NOW EFFECTIVE

Requires That Fire and Casualty Insurance Agents Register With State Secretary.

AIMS TO ELIMINATE 'WILD-CAT' METHODS

Buckeye Statute Was Promoted by Various Concerns Who Were Opposed to Alleged Questionable Practices.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

OHIO has begun the "regulation" of insurance agents. A law, newly effective, requires that all fire and casualty agents register with the secretary of state and thus [illegible] scrutiny and constant jurisdiction. In a vague sense they will become semi-public agents since they will be subject to various state restrictions as lawyers and physicians now are. Heretofore only the agents of foreign companies were compelled to register. The new statute is the result of numerous complaints regarding alleged questionable practices of certain agents, and, although the actions of the vast majority of the agents have not been in any way criticized, some state regulation was thought to be needed for the few who would not otherwise be reached. The law was promoted by various insurance companies who were opposed to "wild-cat" methods and loose practices. Still another insurance law has just become effective. It is the measure which reduces somewhat the amount which fire insurance companies must pay annually for the upkeep of the state fire marshal's office by permitting allowances to be made for refunded premiums. At present the companies must pay one-half of 1 per cent of their gross premiums to the state and no allowance has been made for premiums that may be refunded. The new statute compels the percentage payment on gross premiums but only after due allowance is made for refunds.

Ruling of Utilities Commission.

Railroads that have been charging higher rates for transporting Ohio coal than they have been charging for coal mined in West Virginia and carried as far, if not farther than the Ohio product, may not justify their discrimination by showing differences in mining conditions between the two states. This is in effect the ruling of the state public utilities commission which has begun its investigation of the complaint of Ohio coal miners and operators that the coal industry in this state has been partly crippled by the discriminatory rates of the railroads. The railroads began their defense by trying to show that mining conditions differ in Ohio and West Virginia but the commission ruled such evidence out of consideration on the ground that it had no direct bearing on the plain question of whether or not rates were discriminatory. Meantime conditions continue to be deplorable in the Hocking coal mining section of Ohio where thousands of mines are idle on account of the alleged railroad rate injustice. Some hope is being held out, however, by the promise that the idle miners slowly will be taken care of in other parts of the state or in adjoining states.

Examinations to Be Held.

The first official bulletin of the new state civil service commission has just been issued and calls attention to a number of examinations to be held before Aug. 28, when the new civil service law becomes effective. This is the last chance applicants for state positions may take the examination without being compelled to pay a fee. Under the new law, a fee of 50 cents is charged those who seek positions paying $600 a year or more, and $1 if they take an examination for any position where the salary is over $1,000. If the salary is less than $600 annually no fee is charged. As examinations are to be held for about 1,200 positions which are now filled by those who took non-competitive examinations, it will be readily seen that a big job confronts the new commission and that a revenue is promised to the state which is estimated at fully $25,000 for the next year.

Will Show Alleged Swindling.

How many people in Ohio are daily and weekly swindled by fake concoctions and spurious preparations of many sorts will be plainly and graphically illustrated by some of the exhibits of the coming state fair, according to plans being made by the fair management. The state board of agriculture, through its bureaus, has vast multitudes of samples illustrative of the constant efforts of the unscrupulous to mislead the unwary. Imitation flavoring extracts, tricky scales, false measures and numerous other dishonest instruments will be shown at the fair.

Bucyrus Not Minus Birth Rate.

The people of Bucyrus are being made the butt of many jokes nowadays owing to the reputation the town acquired in state circles. For many weeks the state bureau of vital statistics has been in the habit of pointing to Bucyrus as following in the footsteps of France. In other words, Bucyrus seemingly had no birth rate. It was stationary insofar as any reports at the state bureau indicated. Now the cat is out of the bag. The people of Bucyrus are not minus a birth rate.

Special Session May Be Called.

It has been definitely established here that although Gov. Willis will not call the legislature into special session excepting as a last resort, the possibility of such a session is not entirely remote in view of the acute situation of unemployment in the mines in the Hocking district of Ohio. The governor is known to be loath to call an extra session, and yet he is fully cognizant of the seriousness of the situation. Among state officials [illegible] the advisability of an extraordinary meeting of the assembly.

Auditor Blames the State.

Auditor of State Donahey blames the state and not the board for findings of $3,500 returned against the members of the state board of embalming examiners and which they are called upon to return to the state treasury. These findings were made by State Examiner A. B. Dawson in the first examination made of the board's affairs in the 13 years of its existence. "There was no curb upon their expenditures, and, being only ordinary business men, they proceeded on the assumption that they had authority to do such things as seemed desirable," said the auditor in commenting upon the members' acts. The findings against the members were for expenses covering the cost of bringing their wives to Columbus, expenses incurred in making trips to Columbus to lobby for legislation in the interest of undertakers, charging more than the legal maximum of $10 a day for hotel bills, paying more than 3 cents per mile for railroad fare, expenses incurred in attending conventions of undertakers, tips to waiters and porters, and bar and cafe bills. The findings returned are: R. E. Jones, Columbus, $401; W. M. Bateman, Zanesville, $788; C. J. Krupp, Sandusky, $682; George Billow, Akron, $904; C. H. Shearer, Alliance, $48; C. O. Probst, Columbus, $40; W. F. Cary, Millersburg, $139; H. H. Shaw, Columbus, $205; board as a whole, $303. The present members of the board are Shaw, who is secretary, Cary and J. L. Arnold of Canton.

Controls Saloon License Bureau.

Another state department has just come completely under the rule of the new state administration. It is the state saloon license bureau. M. M. Rose, Republican, of Marietta, succeeds J. H. Secrest, retiring Democrat, as license commissioner. Recently Frank Hay, Republican, of Canton, succeeded Charles Allen, Progressive. This leaves only one Democrat, Byron L. Glendening, on the commission. One of the first duties of the new body will be the hearing of the charges filed some time ago against the license commissioners of Belmont county. These charges, preferred by former Attorney General Hogan in behalf of certain citizens of Belmont county, are to the effect that the Belmont commissioners showed favoritism in granting licenses and otherwise abused their authority.

Crop Report Is Optimistic.

The heavy rains of July and their damages to crops are not taken into consideration in the latest crop report of the state board of agriculture for the reason that estimates of the damage done are not yet definite enough to be computed with any degree of accuracy. It is not believed, however, that the aggregate crop damage will affect very materially the outlook as now indicated. The reason is that the floods were for the most part localized, although in sections the extent of the ruin was great. The crop report is particularly optimistic as to the wheat crop, which showed a prospect on Aug. 1 of 111. Oats were equally promising and potatoes only a little less so. The apple prospect is given as 80, the peach as 71 and the pear as 61.

Treasurer to Collect State Money.

After the beginning of the month of September not a penny of state money will be collected excepting through the office of the treasurer of state. This is the result of the new law advocated by State Auditor A. V. Donahey, who had in mind a system which would give his office the power always to check up upon state finances. Up to this time the sum of about $3,000,000 was collected every year by state departments that did not clear through the state treasurer. The effect was more or less confusion insofar as any adequate check on finances was concerned. With the new measure in effect the state auditor will be able to tell at any hour of the day just where every penny of the state's funds are.

How Long Will Geese Live?

Here is an interesting question to conjure with if the reader has nothing very serious to do. How long will a goose live? Now, this isn't a silly, captious question after all, for it is something with which every visitor to the state fair will come face to face. In other words, there is going to be a gander at the fair on exhibition, and he has the reputation of being 42 years old. At the state fair 42 years ago a Madison county farmer bought a gander and a goose. The goose died two years ago, but the gander still lives. He reigns, in fact, over the state fish hatchery near London, and it has been decided to bring him to the state fair to see if he has any peer in the state in point of longevity.

Blind Relief Pensions.

Since blind relief pensions are presumed by law to be for the support of the beneficiaries, county commissioners should see to it that they are paid at the beginning instead of at the end of quarterly periods, according to a ruling given by the attorney general to the state bureau of accounting. It has been found that some commissioners have been waiting until the end of quarterly periods before doling out the relief funds.

Rules in Favor of Court.

When a girl or boy from a children's home comes within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court he or she remains within the court's jurisdiction until the age of 21, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Turner. The case in point involved a girl of 16 who came before the juvenile court of Franklin county after having been an inmate of the Franklin county children's home. She was committed by the court to a semi-private institution in Columbus and the question arose whether she was then a ward of this institution or of the court.

Village Advertises for Manager.

The village of Westerville in Franklin county is able to boast an unique distinction now. It is the only town of its small size in the state that can boast of having taken advantage of the new state law permitting any incorporated settlement to change its form of government. Westerville has just held an election under that new law and as a result it now is advertising for a city manager, if you please. Its decision to abandon the old idea of having a mayor was reached by a preponderance of public sentiment.

OHIO CROPS ARE NOW DAMAGED

STORMS OF THE PAST SEVERAL WEEKS HAS CAUSED GREAT HAVOC.

DRY WEATHER IS WANTED

Onion Crop Almost a Total Loss, With Corn Damaged in Low Lands—Wheat and Oats Rotting.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—It would be exceedingly hard to estimate the damage that has been done to the farmers of Ohio by the continual rains of the past several weeks, according to those who have but recently made a study of the situation. "Oh, for a few days of dry weather," is the plaint heard in all parts of the state. As rains, local in their character, but falling intermittently over much of the state, continue, the damage to low-lying districts and districts not adequately drained, grows and grows.

Aside from the loss of the onion crop in Hardin county, which is an almost total loss, the heaviest damage is to corn in the lowlands. Perhaps next in importance is the damage to wheat and oats. Much wheat is rotting in the shocks, as continual rains make impossible the harvesting of it. There are many thousands of acres in Central Ohio that are partly submerged from local storms of great intensity.

Lowland corn is hard hit and the same is true of corn in the higher lands where drainage is not good. The stagnant water, with heavy vegetation decaying, has formed a sour mixture that does great damage to the soil for the future, besides ruining the growing crop. On the upper lands where drainage is good the greater part of the corn in the state is well advanced and promises a heavy yield. The growth during the past month during the heavy rains, where drainage is ample, has been phenomenal. Fields of clover on the upland could not look finer and the crop of seed clover promises a record yield. In the sections of the state where vegetables are raised for canning the early crops have been excessively heavy, the crop of peas being the best the state ever saw.

The heavy rain has done great damage to the crop of alfalfa, many fields with heavy yield being so wet the first cutting was completely spoiled while it lay on the ground too wet to be handled and cared for. The heavy rain fall has demonstrated at great cost the need of adequate under-drainage required on most farms. Crops have been spoiled that would have brought large returns where the small expense of under-tiling would have saved most, if not all, of them.

PICTURE WORTH $50,000

Given to Ohio Girl as Memento—Value Discovered Later.

Toledo, O.—Miss Dorothy Southard, society girl and daughter of Frank E. Southard, president of the Toledo Metal Wheel and Tool Company, while visiting friends in the east some time ago, was given as a remembrance a picture which she had found in the attic and for which she expressed admiration. She was told that the picture had been in the family 300 years.

LIMA STATE HOSPITAL ADDITION

Lima, O.—Plans have been approved by the Lima State Hospital Building commission for new buildings to cost about $25,000. The buildings will include a superintendent's residence, cow barn and pig barn. Advertising for bids will be begun at once. Geo. W. Whitney, president of the commission, said work would be begun within 60 days, if the present body remained in charge.

PLAN PRISON FARM FOR DAYTON

Dayton, O.—The sum of $50,000 for a prison farm is suggested among other things by the welfare department. The old work house is soon to pass into history. A municipal motion-picture operator will likely be named and a $39,000 quarantine hospital for the city and two municipal bath houses are also being planned by this department.

SUES RAILROAD FOR LARGE SUM

Toledo, O.—Alleging that the death of her husband left her and her nine children under 16 years of age without support, Loretta M. Sweeney filed suit against the Michigan Central railway for $30,000 damages. It is stated in the petition that the husband, Michael J. Sweeney, was killed November 23, while employed as a switchman.

FLOOD DISTRICT APPRAISERS.

Dayton, O.—The Miami Conservancy court, in session here, named S. M. Goodman of Hamilton, Charles Kiser of Piqua, and J. Edward Saner of Dayton as the board of appraisers for the district. These men will have direct supervision of the appraising of 150,000 pieces of property and will have under their charge between 100 and 150 men to assist in the work, which, it is figured, will consume six months' time.

1,600 PEOPLE VISIT CAMP WILLIS.

Xenia, O.—The soldier boys while encamped at Yellow Springs attracted hundreds of persons from this city and the Springfield and Xenia traction line was taxed to its fullest capacity to take care of the crowd. It is estimated that more than 1,600 persons rode to Camp Willis on the traction cars. In addition many more went to the camp by automobile. Five cars were used to convey the crowd, an hourly schedule being maintained. Traffic was exceptionally heavy.

OPEN FIRE ON YEGGS

Discovered in Rear of Postoffice at Mingo Junction—Escape in Auto.

Steubenville, O.—Officers at Mingo Junction engaged four yeggmen in a revolver battle after the yeggs were discovered in the rear of the postoffice building. When the men started to run the officers opened fire, which was immediately returned by the fugitives, who made their escape in a high powered automobile. In all about 50 shots were exchanged, and the officers are certain that they wounded at least two of the men. The revolver battle caused great excitement in the town. The residents were awakened, but wisely stayed in their homes until the battle had subsided. The postoffice safe at Brilliant is believed to have been blown by the same yeggs. They secured $200 in cash, all the stamps on hand, a Winchester rifle and a shot gun. The robbery occurred at midnight and the yeggs escaped in an auto.

GOV. WILLIS TO OFFICIATE

Contract Let For $300,000 McKinley Memorial at Niles.

Youngstown, O.—The contract for the construction of the McKinley Memorial building at Niles, Ohio, the birthplace of the martyred president, was awarded to the John H. Parker Company of New York for $240,000. Completed, the structure, which will occupy a complete block, will cost $300,000. Funds have been raised by popular subscription and Congress made an appropriation for the structure. The work will start at once and the cornerstone will be laid this fall with Governor Frank B. Willis officiating. Dedication is scheduled for the fall of 1916, and President Wilson and former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt will be invited.

MUCH GRAIN IS UNDER WATER.

Upper Sandusky, O.—Damage estimated at $100,000 has been caused by the overflowing of the Tymochtee river following the heavy rains. Thousands of shocks of wheat and oats are under water.

Akron, O.—James M. Dickem, 67 years old, was shot when on the front porch of a friend's home. A stray bullet fired by two boys struck Dickem in the leg. The boys were arrested on a charge of unlawful shooting.

Fremont, O.—The Clauss Shear works and the Jackson Knife and Shear works of this city has turned down an order from the United States government for $2,000,000 worth of bayonets. No reason was given for the rejection.

Lima, O.—Daniel E. Miller, of Lima, was killed and B. F. Smith and Judge Shipp, of Roundhead, were badly injured when a speeding automobile in which they were riding ran into a ditch south of Lima and turned turtle. Miller was caught under the steering gear and several arteries in his legs and arms were cut. He bled to death.

Findlay, O.—Joseph Seger, a Mt. Cory farmer, was fined $25 and costs for shooting a squirrel out of season. Seger said that one Sunday the squirrel got into his house and gnawed a hole in his Sunday trousers, and for that reason he killed it. Chief Game Warden John C. "GOD, THE FATHER"

Words of Scripture Convey Message of Truth to All Who Will Read and Heed.

Science shows us that all souls are alike. It has studied millions of souls in every part of the earth and it finds them exactly the same in their faculties of knowledge, feeling and willing. Men may differ in color, in language, in size, in ability, but they don't differ as men. If one of them came from a certain original source, all of them must have come from the same original source, which proves that the Father of souls is the Father of all souls, and therefore the All-Father or the Universal Father.

Science also shows that all souls are going through the same discipline. No matter where we travel, we will find sin and sorrow, light and darkness, pain and hardship, and all the other things that try men's souls and turn them out rugged and divine in character. This being so, does it not prove that God takes an interest, and the same kind of an interest, in all men? He is doing for all exactly what he is doing for each, and he is doing for each exactly what he is doing for all. This is another proof of his universal Fatherhood and a display of his partiality and favoritism. Science will allow no religious sect to monopolize God, any more than it will allow one part of the world to monopolize gravitation. Gravitation is a universal law—everywhere found and everywhere alike. God is a universal Father, everywhere present and everywhere alike.

Father of All Mankind.

When we take the great-visioned characters of the Bible—Jesus and Paul—we find them united in believing God to be the Father of all mankind. Hear Jesus: "When ye pray say, Our Father." The "our" is an inclusive and not an exclusive pronoun. Jesus authorized and made it possible for every human being in this world to lift up his voice and say, "Our Father who art in heaven." Hear St. Paul. He is speaking to the Greeks at Athens. They are not yet converted to Christianity, so that it cannot be replied that he is speaking to Christian Greeks. He says: "God that made the world and all things therein . . . hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth . . . In him we live and move and have our being, as certain of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring." There you have the doctrine of the universal Parenthood of God from Christ's chief apostle and the greatest Christian preacher and missionary the world has ever known.

It is hard for some people to come to this. They are as strangely determined not to believe it as was Simon Peter. But he had to come to it and so will they. God sent Peter a dream, a kind of heavenly parable, in which he told him to eat certain things that Peter, as a Jew, had always thought he had no religious right to eat. He thought that they were unclean and were condemned by God himself. But God told him to eat them. In other words, he commanded him to broaden out and to see that what God had cleansed could not be unclean, and also to see that no one whom God had created could be alien to God and should not be alien to him. Peter opened his eyes and said: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is acceptable to him." (Acts 10:34.) You and I and everyone in Christendom and in the rest of the world should wake up and see and know and believe in the universal Fatherhood of God. For this is the latest and highest discovery the soul has made concerning God, the grandest discovery it can possibly make. He is not only a Father, but a world-wide Father.

True Christianity.

Christianity, as Christ taught it, is the only religion in the world that proclaims the universal Fatherhood of God, and is therefore the only religion that can bring about the universal brotherhood of men. If you do not believe this doctrine, you have stopped short in your search for a Father, and have got a Father who is altogether too small and too provincial in influence to save the multitudinous inhabitants of this globe. He must be an All-Father, to save all. And this is the purpose and program dear to his heart, if I read the Bible aright and science aright. The Bible says "that in the name of Jesus Christ every knee should bow, of things, in heaven, and things on earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil. 2:10, 22.)

One God, one law, one element
And one far-off Divine event,
To which the whole creation moves.

Entering Into Reward.

We have been placed upon the way. We have been taught the truth. We have been made partakers of the life. The way must be traversed, the truth must be pursued; the life must be realized. Then cometh the end. Our pilgrimage, long as it may be or short, if we have walked in Christ, will leave us by the throne of God, our partial knowledge, if we have looked upon all things in Christ, will be lost in open sight, our little lives, perfected, purified, harmonized in him whom we have trusted, will become, in due order, parts of the one divine life, when God is all in all.—Westcott.

With Prayer.

The most comfortable result of a life of prayer is the security which fellowship with God imparts. His kind and cheering counsels come darting into the soul like rays of light into a dark room. Good desires increase in multitude and vigor. Unlooked-for succor rushes in to support us in moments of trial. Life expands until its branches are aflame with the sunny blossoms of hope.—Charles H. Brent.

REV. LINCOLN

Will Speak on Public Park Next Sunday, Aug. 22nd

Rev. W. E. Lincoln will speak on the city park at the band stand next Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m. eastern time. His subject will be a religious discussion entitled "Doubt and Certainty." All are invited to hear him.

Heart Weak, Nerve All Right

Pete Parrish, Fairport fish peddler, who was arraigned before Mayor W. J. Carmichael, of Willoughby, Tuesday afternoon, offered a unique alibi. "I've got a weak heart," he said, "and so I keep a little liquor handy to take when my breath gets short. The only trouble is I get a little too much and it goes to my head." He was released after a fine had been assessed.

Murray-Reynolds

Dresden, Tenn.—What is thought to have been a female turtle with a brood of young ones, attacked the 3-year-old daughter of Deputy Sheriff Fuller of Ralston, when the child became caught beneath a gate. She received seven ugly wounds on her hands and legs, and the turtle was snapping viciously at her when help arrived.

Ohio's Crops Excel

That Ohio farmers produce better crops, have the advantage of a better location and a good rainfall and would be foolish to leave the state for the promises of state west or north, was the burden of the talk of N. E. Shaw, state nursery and orchard inspector, Monday night, in the chapel of the Ohio State University, as a part of the country life week program.

Mr. Shaw went on to say that other states produce more cuttings of alfalfa, but the alfalfa is not as good as the Ohio crop. Ohio farmers are just learning how to take care of their orchards, and are finding them unsurpassed by any. For purposes of stock raising also, Ohio's central location gives it a great advantage.

The church should be the center of all social and recreative activities in the country, according to Rev. C. M. McConnell, another speaker. In this way, he said, and in this way only, can the young people be kept from going to the city.

Among the other speakers on the country life week program were Rev. C. L. Cole and Prof. Paul L. Vogt. Dr. Cole's work in the rural church has attracted attention throughout Ohio. Prof. Vogt is the new new professor of rural economics at the Ohio State University.

DAYLIGHT TRIPS TO BUFFALO AND NEAGARA FALLS

In response to a popular demand, for the first time in many years, travelers may have the pleasure of an all day lake ride along the south shore of Lake Erie on their outing trips to Buffalo or the Falls.

Every Saturday, commencing July 10th, steamer "City of Buffalo" leaves New Pier at 9:30 in the morning, running along the south shore of Lake Erie, affording view of Fairport, Ashtabula, Conneaut, Erie, Dunkirt and other Lake ports, arriving at Buffalo at 7:30 in the evening.

Passengers may return to Cleveland on the same steamer that evening or remain over Sunday, taking the Great Ship "Seeandbee" at nine o'clock Sunday night and arriving home 7:00 Monday morning. The fare to Buffalo or the Falls and return for either the day or the night trip is $3.50.

During the summer months the Great Ship "Seeandbee" will leave Cleveland every Saturday night. This great ship with her 510 cool staterooms provides exceptional accommodations for week-end excursionists to Buffalo or the Falls.

ESPY A SUICIDE

Transportation Head of C. P. & E. Found Dead In His Apartment Sunday Night

John C. Espy, superintendent of transportation of the Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Co., was found dead from a bullet wound in his right temple late yesterday afternoon in his apartment, Cleveland Trust Co. building, Willoughby, O.

His body was found stretched on the floor. One hand clutched a revolver to his breast. He had apparently been dead since early Saturday evening.

The body was found by J. Jordan, vice-president and general manager of the road, and Marshal L. M. Barnes, Mr. Espy's father-in-law.

Saturday morning Mr. Espy had complained of illness and did not appear at the offices or yesterday. Mrs. Jordan repeatedly asked her husband if he had seen Mr. Espy.

Mr. Jordan went to Mr. Espy's apartments and found the door locked. He got the marshal and together they forced an entry.

The body in the position they found it indicated that Mr. Espy had faced a mirror as he pulled the trigger. His body lay face downward and was bathed in blood. But one bullet had been in the revolver.

Mr. Espy was well known in Collinwood as former locomotive engineer on the Lake Shore road. For 16 years he had been employed by the C. P. & E., first as a motorman, then as dispatcher and for the past five years as superintendent of transportation.

Last February he lost his second wife by death. Since then he has had periods of despondency. This and illness are thought to have been responsible for his suicide. His first wife was killed in the grade crossing disaster at Center street, Ashtabula.

A New Pizen

North Carolina's drastic prohibition laws are being threatened seriously by the new "pizen" invented by the sons of Hyde county. It is a substitute for corn liquor called "Meal Beer" or "Rip Gizzard," and is highly intoxicating. It is said to have the far-famed "licker" which makes a jack-rabbit spit in a bulldog's eye looking like a dose of soothing-syrup. The recipe calls for a peck of meal, 10 pounds of sugar and two of three pounds of dried apples. Five gallons of water are added, and the concoction is set back of the stove or in the sun to ferment. In a few days it has worked, and is then drawn off ready for the consumer. Negroes are making great quantities of "Rip Gizzard" and one of them, regarded as an expert offers the following method: One gallon of meal to two gallons of water. Put on the stove and boil. As soon as the mixture boils, add two pounds of sugar. Pour into a stone crock and let stand a week, by which time it will ferment. Add two pounds of sugar and strain off. This receipe doesn't require apples. Other makers use dried peaches instead of apples, and others use molasses. The Anti-Saloon league and W. C. T. U. of North Carolina are making strenuous efforts to stop this new traffic in intoxicating liquor. The mess is so cheap that many gallons are being made, for private consumption and for sale. "Rip Gizzard" bids fair to supplant every substitute for liquor now being sold in North Carolina.

LATTER DAY SAINTS ARE DIVIDED OVER FORMER HOME OF PROPHET SMITH

Latter Day Saints in convention at Kirtland, three miles southeast of Willoughby, are divided in opinion whether the Kirtland general store was or was not the former home of Joseph Smith, Mormon prophet and a founder of the Latter Day Saints.

Discussion arose Sunday and was continued informally yesterday when some members of the cult suggested that the Saints in convention should provide for the purchase of the grocery store with the ultimate view of preserving it for all time.

Some of the Saints contend that Joseph Smith never lived in the building. If it's finally decided this way, all Lake county will suffer a blow. The store and the temple on the hill are show places and the subjects of thousands of picture post cards.

Housed in a colony of tents which cluster about the temple are 100 members of the reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, Latter Day Saints. They come from the Ohio, western Pennsylvania and Virginia districts. Perhaps 100 more will be there before the convention closes, Aug. 30.

All arise at 6 a. m. and worship continuously from 7 a. m. until noon. The afternoon is given over to recreation and amusements. The elders contemplate baseball games before the week is out. The evening also is set aside for worship. Lights go out at 10:30 p. m.

"We are not to be confused with the Utah Mormons," Bishop J. A. Becker of Kirtland said yesterday afternoon. "Our affiliation with Joseph Smith must not be taken to mean that we believe in polygamy. We are more opposed to polygamy than any other class, I believe, and our marriage laws are the strictest."

Kirtland has been the home of the Saints' temple since 1831. There was litigation between the Utah Mormons and the reformed branch about 1880. The reformed branch was awarded the temple.

Three of the cult's most prominent heads are at the camp grounds. They are Bishop E. L. Kelley, Independence, Mo.; Elder J. F. Curtis, Independence, Mo. and R. J. Russell, St. Thomas, Ont. G. G. Griffith of Columbus, is in charge of the gathering.

It is possible that the Kirtland district will be divided into three parts before the week closes. Growth to more than 2,000 members is the reason for the contemplated step.

Elliott-Hoose

The wedding of Helen B. Elliott and Clyde Elwyn Hoose took place at the M. E. Church parsonage Monday afternoon at 3:30. The Rev. E. W. Morton performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

The groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoose of East Erie street, and is the efficient bookkeeper and cashier for the Educational Supply Co. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Elliott of Washington street. They are well known and popular young people of this city and have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for a two weeks' wedding trip to Washington, D. C., Norfolk, New York, Atlantic City and Philadelphia, and will be at home after September 1st at 123 South St. Clair street.

The Land of By-and-By

There is a land, as I've heard tell, where nothing's ever done, the people therein do dwell, no work have yet begun. "Tomorrow" is the watchword there, and "Pretty soon" the cry—the name of this unpleasant land?—the Land of By-and-By.

Procrastination there is king, he rules with a high hand, but makes no laws or anything to benefit the land. The lessons they are never learned—no use to question why; the chores are left unfinished in the Land of By-and-By.

And if you put things off and say you'll do them pretty soon, and shirk your tasks from day to day, perhaps some afternoon, they's take You off to this bad land—no friend will heed your cry—and there is no tomorrow in the Land of By-and-By.

The County Christian Endeavor union will hold its annual convention at the Painesville Baptist church, Friday, Aug. 27. There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions.

FIGHT FOR BERTH ENDS

Contest Waged Hot for Postmastership at Willoughby

When Roy H. Webster of Willoughby, O., received notification Saturday from President Wilson that he had been appointed postmaster of Willoughby, it's a safe bet that Senator Atlee Pomerene heaved a sigh of relief. Never in the 23 years he has been postmaster was there such a bitter fight for the appointment, says John S. Ellen, the retiring postmaster.

Since Mr. Ellen sent in his letter of resignation April 3, a half dozen candidates have been pulling every political string to land the appointment.

The appointment is Mr. Webster's first political office and his friends say it attests his popularity throughout Lake county.

AUTOMOBILES WILL BE ADMITTED FREE AT OHIO STATE FAIR; PARKAGE PROVIDED

RECOGNIZING the general use into which the automobile has come as a means of transportation and in anticipation that many visitors to the State Fair—even from considerable distances—will this year make the trip by such conveyances, the State Board of Agriculture has decided to omit this year the fifty-cent fee that has been exacted for the privilege of taking an automobile into the fair grounds. They will not only be admitted free this year, but arrangements will be made for the convenient and safe parking of the cars inside the grounds. Those who use this means of reaching the grounds may come feeling assured that all reasonable pains will be taken by the State Fair management to provide ample parking space and to police it so that orderly entrance and exit from the park may be made at any time and minimum danger of injury to machines and delay in movement.

This does not mean that the management is to be responsible for the absolute protection of machines from damage or theft, but that reasonable care will be taken to make this sort of property, when taken into the grounds, safe from the dangers that would naturally surround them under such circumstances.

U.S. REJECTS ALL OF AUSTRIA'S CHARGES

Text of Reply to Protest Against Arms Shipment to Allies Is Made Public.

CITES INTERNATIONAL LAW PRINCIPLES

America, In Note, Gives Practice of Nations as Another Reason for Its Position—Neutral Must Not Place Embargoes.

Washington D. C.—The state department Sunday night gave out the text of this government's reply to the protest of Austria-Hungary against the shipment of arms and ammunition to the allies. The note rejects all of Austria's contentions.

The reasons given by the United States for its position are: "The principles of international law, the practice of nations, the national safety of the United States and other nations without great military and naval establishments, the prevention of increased armies and navies, the adoption of peaceful methods for the adjustment of international differences and finally neutrality itself." Here, in part, is the reply:

"The government of the United States notes with satisfaction the recognition by the imperial and royal government of the undoubted fact that its attitude with regard to the exportation of arms and ammunition from the United States is prompted by its intention to maintain the strictest neutrality and to conform to the letter of the provisions of international treaties, but is surprised to find the imperial and royal government implying that the observance of the strict principles of the law under the conditions which have developed in the present war is insufficient, and asserting that this government should go beyond the long recognized rules governing such traffic and adopt measures to maintain an attitude of strict parity with respect to both belligerent parties.

"To this assertion of an obligation to change or modify the rules of international usage on account of special conditions the government of the United States cannot accede. ..."

Ohio Horse Slips a Trifle From Last Year, but Is Still More Than Holding His Own, Despite Big Increase in Automobiles.

These facts are among the outstanding features of the compilation of the returns of the various district tax assessors by the auditor of state. The compilation gives an almost enchanting story of the live animal population. For example cattle, mules and asses have increased in numbers over last year but horses and sheep have decreased. Legal Red Tape Partially Eliminated.

Legal red tape which has long stood in the way of admission of patients to the state tuberculosis hospital near Mt. Vernon will be at least partially wiped out in September with the going into operation of the Morris law. Also, the new measure will make it easier for patients, not well-to-do, to remain at the institution. Under the present law patients who are not able to pay $5 a week for their upkeep cannot remain at the state sanatorium. And lawyers have held that county commissioners in the counties whence patients attend the institution may not aid in contributing to their support. The vital feature of the new statute is that it permits county commissioners to aid patients financially when the patients are unable to spare the $5 required by the institution weekly. The commissioners are empowered to pay all or part in such cases. But the power extends only to counties having no publicly supported tubercular hospital. When patients attend the state sanatorium from counties having county sanatoriums they must continue to pay personally for all of their expenses. The elimination of much red tape will be accomplished by the new provision permitting any physician to examine prospective patients of the state institution. Under the present law none but a regularly appointed county examiner can make such an examination. ...

"NOT IN HEAVEN."

Cleveland, O.—"Feminine personality does not exist in heaven," is the belief of Mrs. D. D. Butcher, teacher of "Individual Science," which aims at the perfection of true mating.

"Woman goes to heaven after death, but becomes a part of man," Mrs. Butcher says.

"The theory involved in individual science is that the sun, as male, is the true mate of the earth as female. The earth is the producer. Without the sun there would be no progeny.

"Woman was created in Adam, and is the reflection of him. Man and woman unite in forming the spiritual body. They retain their identity, but remain as one."

Mrs. Butcher doesn't believe woman is subordinate to man, she says each has separate duty to perform.

TEST OF WEALTH IN WAR

Great Britain and Germany differ as greatly in war economics as they do in political principles for which they stand in the fighting.

In a valuable pamphlet for the World by Sir George Paish, England's financial ability to carry on the war is measured up keenly from the great investments abroad, the enormous foreign trade and its general unprepared wealth for a continental grown out of the same time the security of the Imperial Government represents the financial war ability of Germany is so very fact that our foreign trade has been largely cut off "We possess practically everything needed for war. Our expenditures are not so great as those of our allies, and we are able to do so business on an enormous scale."

This is a development of the theory that the little Britisher has been over-boastingly which will not the event of the Teuton is certainly far. As a theory it is obscurely, at best. As a practical fact it is belied by our Sudden Prosperity, under somewhat similar circumstances and shown to be a mere bubble.

We must go back to the Lincoln time of the coast for a clear understanding of the situation. Lincoln, war over, was a disorganized country, waste of capital and never a net saving so to. Difficult well there is suppose of the commerce of war, and the wealth of the country, devastations and the loss of life.

England and Germany are in the same situation in these respects, in short. But at any rate, Germany is another and because of the great circle of foot home economics which could not be packed and turned into war and foreign, in messages out of the country from the war. England had no immense bag of foreign investment and trade to save and during capital immediately or quickly available for war purposes as the need developed. These resources of wealth for war in war use so great, in Sir George's view, as thirty to have been much than hoarded by the first year's entry into the world events for and swept the seas of Germany.

Both countries are fighting each to its own life and the war with the sword, but particularly the money for which to finance war purposes and fight the longer other things being equal. It is for money when it not renewed in the process in Sir Hoffman's opinion. It is a fact which has gone into the fire and which lessen behind it only ashes and tears.—New Yard Herald.

THE BROKEN COIN

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by GRACE CUNARD

COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed, and on arrival in Gretzhoffen her adventures while closing the secret of the broken coin begin.

CHAPTER XI.

The King of Gretzhoffen.

"Your majesty does me honor."

It was with simple dignity that the young American girl spoke these words to the monarch in whose presence she found herself fresh from her late adventures.

"We could not too much honor so charming a representative of your great country, my dear young lady," said Michael.

"Do not misunderstand me, your majesty," resumed the young woman. "It is more than possible I have been brought before you under false pre- [illegible]

"Precisely. It is as I would have said it mademoiselle. You Americans are extraordinary."

Kitty took from his hand the broken bit of metal and regarded it thoughtfully.

"I thank you more than I can tell, your majesty," said she soberly. "It shall be my mission to find out for your people the uncompleted message of this coin."

A silver bell sounded afar in the hall, announcing the approach of a servant. An official of the palace entered and stood motionless near the door.

"What then, Andreas?"

"The Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen, the Count Sachio of Grahaffen."

"Let them enter, Andreas."

Both gentlemen bowed deeply as they entered and each kissed the royal hand respectfully. Kitty ignored Count Sachio and bowed but coldly to Count Frederick.

I am convinced of your own wisdom, your own justice—your own experience in your land as to law and liberty and justice. Sometimes out of the mouth of a woman—a lady of rank, of experience—one might learn the better how to carry on the duties of a state."

"And the duties of the state would [illegible]

She sat at her desk and inclosed the broken coin in a double sheet of paper. Upon one sheet she wrote these few words:

"Your Majesty, the young American woman so honored with this gift asks its safekeeping for a little time."

At the Black and White Ball

... pense has enraged our people. Now, if tonight they see our beloved monarch—whom we both reverence—in his usual or more than his usual state of intoxication—then there's the match to the powder mill. The revolution is begun. The explosion is made. It will be too late, then. Their wrath against the weak Michael—dissipating, wasting their substance for them—will be unappeasable. For the rest [illegible]

She looked at her watch. The hour was approaching eleven. The great black and white ball was now in progress at the winter palace across the city.

She went to the window and looked out into the night. All the court was dark—save one window directly below her on the opposite side, fifteen feet below, ten feet across the narrow courtway. Even as she looked down [illegible]

"Well, then, mademoiselle?" said he.

GRAND LAW OF LIFE

Unity With the Father Is the Keystone Upon Which All Things Depend.

"The shell was not filled with pearls until it was contented (that is, ceased from unrest)."

In this old Persian proverb we find an example of the same truth that was given by Jesus in his lesson regarding worldly care, so beautifully illustrated in the story of the "Lilies of the Field," ending with the injunction: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

Not until one ceases from all anxious seeking after and striving for possessions and settles down into a state of peace and rest, through absolute trust in God for his supply, can he realize the truth that all things whatsoever he desires are in reality his, that as a child of God they rightfully belong to him, else he would not desire them, and that through conscious recognition of the fact, he will come into possession of his own through natural attraction, if quietly resting and trusting, in confident expectation that the supply will come as needed, in the right time and way.

In the Knowledge of the Truth.

The conscious knowledge of unity with the Father, who is the source of supply, gives the realization of unity with the manifestation of supply in whatever form or shape needed, thus all fear and belief in lack, which is caused by the ignorant belief in separation from our supply, is eliminated from the consciousness. SNOOZY ON SUNDAY MORNING

Just Why People Are So Disinclined to Arise Early on That Particular Day.

"It isn't that most people don't have to go to work on Sunday that so many of them snooze the morning away," said a Brooklyn man who hasn't had to work for the past dozen years. "The fact is that there is a psychology to Sunday morning and its influence actually makes people snoozy and disinclined to activity. This psychology is complex in its nature and involves pretty much the whole human system.

"First off, the person knowing that he does not have to turn out in the morning relaxes completely when he goes to bed and sleeps without any nervous strain. Naturally he would get enough if he went to bed at a reasonable hour by the usual rising time, but instead of that he continues in a delightful doze. This is induced by the Sunday stillness. The usual disturbing morning sounds are absent and the consciousness is not aroused.

"The person isn't sleeping, he is merely unable to pull his energies together and wake up. He is auto-intoxicated, doped or anything you want to call it. His nerves are taking a much needed rest through mental or psychical influences effected by psychical and physical causes. That's plain enough, isn't it?"

Under normal conditions the industries of Germany consume about 1,000,000,000 pounds of cotton a year.

MEAN TRICK ON NEWLYWEDS

Railroad "Butcher" Caused Them to Sit Apart While They Were on Their Honeymoon.

"You know Carl G. Fisher, president of the speedway and Indiana Dixie highway commissioner," says the Indianapolis News. "Well, way back in the years when he was younger Carl was a 'peanut' on the J. M. & I. railroad. That is, he sold the passengers things they didn't want for prices they never had paid anywhere except on the train. But he was a very good little news 'butch' and was very attentive to the passengers.

"One day a bride got aboard Carl's train with her husband. They were, as Harry Lauder would say, 'bound on their hinnymin.' Carl saw at a glance that they were new in travel as well as matrimony. So, as they climbed the steps Carl, standing on the platform, took charge of them.

"'Gents to the right, ladies to the left,' said the attentive Mr. Fisher.

The fire blight of the apple, pear and quince is a very formidable disease. It attacks the trees in different periods of the growing season—from June to September—says Barry, an authority on fruit garden, and generally the young growth first. The leaves flag, the sap becomes thick and [illegible]

The young trees should be cultivated throughout the season and kept free from grass and weeds. It is a good plan to mulch young trees with coal ashes or coarse strawy manure. Coal ashes are best spread about one bushel around each tree. The ashes keep the soil cool and moist and prevent the moth from laying her eggs in the soft bark.

APEX OF WASHINGTON SHAFT

Few People Know Purpose of Parallel Iron Bands That Bind Brow of Monument.

Few persons who have seen the Washington monument, even those who have lived within sight of it all their lives, have noticed that the apex of the monument is surrounded with parallel bands. Such is the fact, however; and moreover, the bands are studded with golden points. The bands are made of gold-plated iron a foot wide and the points are spaced a foot from one another.

For a few moments in each sunny day of the first week of the new year the golden fillet that binds the brow of the Washington monument is visible to human eyes. Then the angle of incidence of the sun's rays is such that they are reflected downward to the windows of the buildings north and west of the monument, and the cool, gray surface is seen to be marked with eleven shining lines of gold.

Theoretically, a similar effect could be obtained from some point of observation at each moment when the sun's rays are intercepted by the sloping top of the monument, but only an airship could attain the necessary vantage point.

According to the original plan of the monument, it was protected from [illegible]

... would have the necessary tensile strength.

So the men of science agreed on a number of iron bands heavily galvanized and gold-plated to prevent rusting. The bands are connected with the aluminium point of the monument and the framework of the elevator, and at the base iron cables lead the electricity into a deep well, where it harmlessly expends its force. The protection has proved to be perfect.—Youth's Companion.

Errors of History.

William Tell was a myth.

Coriolanus never allowed his mother to intercede for Rome.

The duke of Wellington never uttered the famous words, "Up guards, and at them!"

Alfred never allowed the cakes to burn nor ventured into the Danish camp disguised as a minstrel.

Fair Rosamund was not poisoned by Queen Eleanor but died in the odor of sanctity in the convent of Godstow.

Charles Kingsley gave up his chair of modern history at Oxford because he said he considered history "largely a lie."

Chemists have proved that vinegar will not dissolve pearls or cleave rocks in spite of the fabled exploits of Cleopatra and Hannibal.

The siege of Troy is largely a myth, even according to Homer's own account. Helen must have been sixty years old when Paris fell in love with her.

The number of Xerxes' army has been grossly exaggerated and it was not stopped at Thermopylae by 300 Spartans, but by 7,000, or even, as some authors compute, 12,000.

Philip VI, flying from the field of Crecy and challenged later before the gates of the castle of Blois, did not cry out, "It is the fortune of France." What he really said was: "Open, open, it is the unfortunate king of France."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Tallest Flagpole.

A fitting symbol of the mighty forests of the West is Astoria's flagpole, the tallest in the world, which floats the stars and stripes 241 feet above the Panama-Pacific exposition sea wall at the corner of the Oregon building. The stick, for it is a single stick of timber, is actually 251 feet long, but ten feet of the butt is imbedded in a 200-ton block of solid concrete, which, without other stays, holds the pole upright against the wind.

The pole was shaped from the trunk of a Douglas fir, which, as it originally stood in the Oregon forest, towered 347 feet in the air, and might have matched its height, though not its girth, against any but the loftiest of the California sequoias. Looking up at the great flagstaff, it is hard to realize that it weighs upward of 48 tons, and that there is lumber enough in it to build five ordinary eight-room houses. Its great height gives it an appearance of slenderness and lightness.—San Francisco Chronicle.

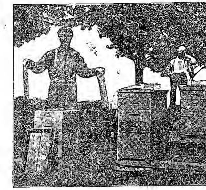
REMOVING SUPERS OF HONEY FROM HIVES



Bees Are Necessary to Fertilize Flowers That Become Fruit.

Removing the supers of honey from the hives gives many beekeepers trouble. It is, indeed, very simple and easy, provided it is done in the right way. It will certainly not be necessary to tell people, in this enlightened age, not to kill their bees in order to get the honey in the hive. That relic of barbarism no longer survives, but there are some very simple rules of direction which if followed will save the lives of many worker bees that are needlessly killed in taking off supers, and spare the operator much needless pain from the stings of infuriated bees.

No work should ever be done with the bees at night, nor should they be disturbed on a dark, rainy or cloudy day, if it can possibly be avoided. The time to do work with bees is when the sun is shining and the bees are flying in full force, and this is the time to examine the comb honey supers and make preparations for their removal, if any are ready to come off.

PLANTING OF TREES IN PROPER MANNER

Experienced Fruit Growers Secure Best Results by Exercising Some Care.

Almost any practical degree of pressure over the roots in planting may be advantageous, but it does not follow that solidity to check sidewise root growth is also beneficial. If it were so, the annual digging, or rather forking, of fruit plantations, would call for condemnation.

Writer's Style.

Style! Style! Why, all writers will tell you that it is the very thing which can least of all be changed. A man's style is nearly as much a part of him as any part of his being which is at least subjected to the action of his will.—Fenelon.

OHIO'S BIG EXPOSITION OPENS AT COLUMBUS NEXT MONDAY

With women's free day re-established, with Old Soldiers' and Children's Day again a feature, and with other things popular with the public again a part of the program, the Ohio State Fair will open next Monday for what is expected to be the biggest Fair in history—and from the public standpoint,—the best. Weeks and months of newspaper discussion of the State Fair has led the State Agricultural Board to adopt the policy that the State Fair is not primarily a money-making institution, but that it is the people's show, on the people's playground, and that to figure out the most which can be given them for their admission price would please the people better than simply to see a big sum of money on the profit side of the ledger. The Board, therefore, has figured on how to give a big one cent's worth of pleasure for every cent the visitors spend; it wants to give the biggest show possible without piling up any debts for tax payers to settle.

Modified rules for exhibitors give promise of the largest displays of livestock, farm products, machinery, etc., ever seen in Ohio. Larger prizes in various departments have attracted more exhibitors; larger purses and adoption of the policy of six monies instead of four to race winners, with no deduction has resulted in the largest entry list for the races of any state fair in the country this year. In real sport, the State Fair races are expected to furnish as many thrills as any of the famous mile tracks of the country. The state itself will be a large exhibitor. One entire building has been set aside for state exhibits, and the State Industrial Commission will have the largest display ever attempted by any state department. Its "Safety First" show and other exhibits will give the people their first clear idea of what this large Department is doing for the people. The State Board of Administration will have an enlarged exhibit, and in addition will show fifty head of fine Guernsey cattle, and farm products, raised at state institutions.

One of the big features will be the spectacular and educational Pain's fireworks display—"Opening of the Panama Canal," which will be shown at night. Four hundred and fifty persons participate in this production. A fete day at Panama, in which the residents are gathered to see a great circus performance, is interrupted by a thrilling attack on the city by land, sea and air, giving in graphic manner an idea of the awful results of modern warfare. The city is destroyed entirely; then comes the great display of fireworks, which will introduce everything new which manufacturers have devised during the past twelve months. The Pain spectacle will be preceded by a mammoth Horse Show, each day, conducted after the fashion of the great horse shows given at Madison Square Garden, Louisville and other horse centers. An offer of nearly $2,500 in prizes has attracted the finest horseflesh in the United States. The State Fair is fortunate in being on a Horseshow Circuit. Cleveland's show closes just before the Fair, then from the Fair the horses will go to Indianapolis, then to Louisville. This has been responsible for the long entry list of horses whose values run into fabulous sums.

The visitor to the State Fair this year will find the entire Grounds and Show modernized, with electric lighting all over the Grounds, automobiles admitted free of charge, many improvements made to Buildings and all in all an effort to give the people more for their money than they have ever received before.

Robert Smith, resident of the west part of North Madison has an extra fine onion crop this year which was planted and cared for by himself and sons. The Smiths have four acres of the "fruit" and the yield will be better than 500 bushels to the acre. The onions are now being pulled.

Besides caring for the onions and other farm crops Mr. Smith and his oldest son have earned over $100 this summer by working on the road.

YOUNG GIRLS AND MOTHER

Brought into Court With Three Italians. Details Not Fit to Print

One of the worst cases to come before a Lake county court in many years was started in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court this week when Louis Filipi, Peter Perno and Nicolo Perno were arranged on a serious charge. Mrs Whitney of Wickliffe and her two daughters, Mable and Hazel, aged 14 and 13 were also brought into court. The Whitneys were former residents of Madison and Perry but now reside in the Italian settlement of Wickliffe.

Louis Filippi was allowed to plead guilty to a charge of assault and battery and was given a sentence of thirty days and costs. Peter Perno, who is only 18, was bound over to common pleas in the sum of $500 and Nicolo Perno was bound over in the sum of $1,000, Dominac Fatica, surety. The charge against the latter two is a serious one and the story of the relations of the mother and daughters with the Italians is too filthy for publication.

Mrs. Whitney could not be held but the young girls were taken from her and placed in the charge of relatives.

Elks Carnival a Success

The carnival being held this week on the postoffice lot under the auspices of the Elks is drawing a large number of people to the city and should prove a financial success.

Those who have attended pronounced the shows very fair, with nothing to offend. There has been no trouble about gambling, bootlegging or short changing and the police have had an easy time on the grounds. A band of Italian musicians furnishes a good quality of music and there are other free attractions including the high dive by Matt Gay which occurs every afternoon and evening.

September 2 is the last date for filing nomination petitions.

Dan Roach, arrested at Madison on a charge of intoxication, was brought to Painesville and will think the matter over in jail for a few days.

Wallace Players Please

The Chester Wallace Players are drawing big crowds at the Utopia this week and are giving the people value received. After the usual tent show "drammer" to which Painesville people have become accustomed, the coming of the Wallace stock company is indeed a treat.

Governor F. B. Willis "saw Painesville First" on his way to the Madison picnic Wednesday.

Senator J. V. Winans of Madison, has purchased a new Dodge roadster.

Human Desires.

Henri-Frederic Amiel said that humanity is the dupe of its desires. Experience "has two ways of crushing us—by refusing our wishes and by fulfilling them. But he who only wills what God wills escapes both catastrophes."

ANNUAL PICNIC

Held at Willoughbeach Last Thursday Drew Small Crowd

Are Painesville people tired of the so-called "Business Men's picnic?"

Judging by the "crowd" at Willoughbeach last Thursday and the uncomplimentary remarks heard concerning the location, the arrangements, and picnics in general, it would appear that the common people prefer to pick their own date and place for their outings, and that the old plan of closing up the city for a day is no longer popular.

There was nothing the matter with the picnic. The weather was perfect; the lake was just as wet as ever; the young people danced, rode the "thriller," held hands and whispered sweet nothings, while the older ones set around, yawned and wondered how soon the next car would leave for home.

There were two ball games, more or less interesting, two concerts by the Painesville band and a baloon ascension.

New Automobile Laws

If you sell your automobile and buy a new one, it is necessary for you to pay a fine of one dollar and notify the Secretary of State of the transaction. The owner of your old car must obtain a new license for it. These are the provisions of a bill which was passed by the Ohio legislature during its last session. Copies of the new law will not be sent to all automobile owners but only to dealers. Notice to this effect has just been received from Secretary of State C. Q. Hildebrant. Another law relating to automobiles, which was passed by the last legislature, provides that a person is liable to arrest if the manufacturer's serial number on the car he is driving has been removed or defaced. This measure aims to prevent thieves from trying to hide the identity of a car.

Will Hold Reunion

The fortieth annual reunion of the relatives and friends of the Joseph and Mary Kibbee Tuttle family will be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Tuttle, 241 Mentor Avenue, Painesville, Ohio. Regular and Limited Stop No. 86 on C. P. & E. car line, Friday, September 3, 1915. Basket picnic dinner at 12:30 Eastern time.

Profit in State's Farms

The state of Ohio will harvest crops worth nearly half a million dollars from the cultivated acres of the farms at the various state institutions, reports State Farmer Charles McIntyre. On the crop there will be a clear profit of over $150,000.

Has Purchased Garage

R. L. McCue, recently connected with the Studebaker garage in this city has purchased the Madison garage and is now ready for business in his line. There will be a practical machinist in attendance at all times.

Mr. and Mrs. McCue expect to move to Madison in the near future.

Boy Wins Prizes at Randall

At the Randall fair W. E. Otis, 15, Willoughby, O., managed to get three blue ribbons away from A. G. Lupton, Hartford City, Ind., who usually has everything his own way in the pony classes. Otis is the son of Charles A. Otis, Cleveland broker. The boy rode May Queen to victory and his sister, Queenie, 12, got a blue for him with Bo Peep.

Mrs. Storrs was very popular with her many friends.

Suicide at Willoughby

Laying aside her knitting, Miss Katherine Knieling, 26, Willoughby, went into the basement of her home Monday and hanged herself with a heavy rope. At noon, when Louis Knieling, the young woman's father, went into her room he found a note reading:

"You will find me in the cellar.—Katherine."

Mr. Knieling cut down the body of his daughter and summoned Dr. Thomas M. Moore, who said the young woman had been dead several hours.

It is thought the suicides of Frank H. Clark, who shot himself some time ago, and of John C. Espy, who committed suicide two weeks ago, preyed on the girl's mind.

Druggist Bound Over

E. E. Schaefer, Fairport druggist, whose automobile killed a little boy in that village recently, was given a hearing in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court and bound over to Common Pleas.

Bail was fixed at $1,000, which was furnished, Fred Stange acting as surety.

Perkins-King Co. Winners

The Herald was in error last week in announcing that R. F. Huntington received the award at the Cleveland show for the best display of ten varieties of gladiolus. The Perkins-King Co. of Mentor should have been credited with that award.

The Perkins-King Co. is located at West Mentor, the firm being composed of Lanrin A. Perkins and Harry C. King. They are well known as growers of high grade gladioli.

"STAR" GARAGE

The new owners will also handle the Dodge cars for Lake county.

Several men from the west end of the county are avowed candidates for the position.

Shriners Will Gather

During the day a parade will be held which will be quite unique. The ceremonial will be held at the Hippodrome, Youngstown's newest theatre. A banquet will follow at the Masonic temple and in the evening the visitors will be entertained at the Hippodrome. A band concert between the banquet and entertainment is also planned.

Patrols from various cities in this vicinity are expected as well as several others. The city will be decorated for the event and the affair has already caused much interest among Shriners throughout this vicinity.

A number of about 2,000 are expected from Cleveland, Pittsburg, Erie, Wheeling, Toledo, Columbus, Canton, Akron, Alliance, Salem, Painesville, Ashtabula, Sandusky, New Castle, Pa., Sharon, Pa., Warren, Lorain, Elyria, and other surrounding cities.

Roscoe C. Johnson and Zuella Bolton, both of Perry, were united in marriage by Justice Lloyd Wyman on August 24.

FIREWORKS AT FAIR

Will be One of the Features at Columbus this Year. More For Money than Ever Before

With more horses entered in its races than at any other similar event in the country, with promise of the finest exhibits of live stock, farm products and machinery ever seen in the state, with a horse show conducted after the fashion of the famous shows of Madison Square Garden, and with the showiest and most brilliant fireworks spectacles which could be purchased, members of the new State Board of Agriculture are more than satisfied that Ohio State Fair, Aug. 30th, to September 3, the first to be given under their auspices is to be one of the most successful of the many successful ones which the Buckeye State has offered.

The offices of the state fair board are one of the busiest places in the state these days, filled with horsemen, exhibitors, concessionaires and privilege men, making final arrangements for their visit to Columbus next week, and one peep will be sufficient to convince that there will be nothing lacking, from sideshows and popcorn men to the more dignified displays of art, machinery, fruits, vegetables, stock, blooded racers, etc. etc., to make the State Fair grounds more than teem with life for five days next week.

The fair board was particularly fortunate in procuring Pain's wonderful spectacle, "Opening of the Panama Canal," as it has been in great demand since its first appearance in Chicago some few months ago. The board secured it in competition with several other cities, for this week, by sending a personal representative to Chicago to press Ohio's claims. There is a magnificent scenic display, educational in its nature, which will show the route of the new Panama canal, and which it cost $30,000 to produce. The scene opens on a fete day, giving opportunity for the introduction of a circus performance participated in by representatives of circus families whose names have been famous in England and America for a hundred years.

This is followed by an attack on Panama city by sea, land and air, giving an idea in a graphic way of the terrible battles now being fought over Europe. The city of Panama is entirely destroyed, then comes the gorgeous display of fireworks which concludes the entertainment. Four hundred and fifty people participate, and it is not exaggeration to say it will be the best exhibition of its kind Central Ohio has ever witnessed.

It is the intention of the board to give more for the money, at the state fair, this year, than ever before, and to establish a standard at which future boards may aim. Monday will be Ladies' Free Day, this popular feature having been restored. All women will be admitted free of charge.

Tuesday will be Columbus Day, and Columbus, being back of the fair more enthusiastically this year than ever before, will try to make it one of the big days of the week. Wednesday and Thursday will be Grange Days, and Thursday will also be designated as Governor's Day, as Governor Willis will spend the entire day on the grounds and will make an address. Friday will be Children's and Old Soldiers' Day, when all children under 12 years of age, and all soldiers who fought in the Civil War, will be admitted free of charge.

Hay Fever Rhapsody

When it's ninety in the shade and you're lifeless as a spade; when the air is full of dust and your head about to bust; when you're longing for a breeze, and you sneeze and sneeze and sneeze,—you've got it!

When your brain is all a-fire and your head seems bound in wire; when your eyes can't bear the light and your face is swollen tight; when your nose is all a-glow, and you blow and blow and blow,—you've got it!

When you sniffle from morn till night, then keep on till morning light, when there's no chance for rest with a ton weight on your breast, when your eyes refuse to sleep, and you weep and weep and weep,—you've got it!

When you've all you can endure and your friends come with a cure; too worn and weary to resist, you take each one as they insist, when you know it's useless to try, and they lie and lie and lie,—you've got it!

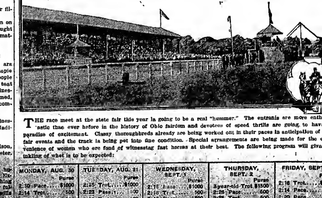
Kneale May Go

It is reported that Maj. O. W. Kneale, commandant of the state home for widows of soldiers and sailors at Madison, may be shortly replaced by a man chosen by the administration.

Married Nearly Year

The announcement has just been made that Merrill Stamm of South St. Clair street and Gladys M[illegible] of Ely[illegible] were united in marriage at Windsor, Canada, Sept. 1, 1914.

RACE TRACK and GRAND STAND



THE race meet at the state fair this year is going to be a real "hummer." The entrants are more enthusiastic than ever before in the history of Ohio fairdom and devotees of speed thrills are going to have a paradise of excitement. Classy thoroughbreds already are being worked out in their paces in anticipation of the fair events and the track is being put into fine condition. Special arrangements are being made for the comfort of women who are fond of witnessing fast horses at their best. The following program will give an inkling of what is to be expected:

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1916, by Wright & Sanders)

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, a beautiful young woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mate to which she has had in her possession for months, and which she has been in the habit of her wandering ways to go to the pawnshops to have duplicated, hoping to find the duplicate. On the pawnbroker's shelf she finds the duplicate, and is arrested for attempting to sell the duplicate while claiming the ownership of the coin.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

Synopsis.

IF Your Majesty Please.

In the full glare of the spotlights, with the rows of the amazing faces gathered in grotesque and beautiful distortion from rostrum, Kitty reached the envelope from the doorkeeper—the same packet which she had herself sent to the palace that morning for delivery at midnight.

She did this with a due air of importance, for she was in the center of an occasion that had not for years gone out did the outward appearance of the parties effort any reason to not otherwise.

Yet, even as she took the envelope in her hand, there came to her a sense of something unusual in the occasion. It had a strange tight—if it can seem quite the same as wave after wave of applause and hisses. Kitty, at any rate, opened the envelope, her tips compressed. It was empty!

Yes, the mysterious coin was gone. Somewhere in the long journey from the palace to the Kitty Gray hotel it vanished! Kitty, the long trusted official, grasped, as she realized the fact, the moment of the time since it had left her hands—long enough, she had disappeared as though some opened door had swallowed it.

The black lines of surprise which came to her face was something not to be pictured. Kitty frowned—frowned "What at this unprecedented—are we made the subject of a practical joke?"

Kitty stood standing first one then the next of the boxes where for 20 years the successors of Count Frederick sho ved such a complete and unequal in her own. There was no trace of gaiety now. Kitty was alarmed was sure of that. Then another thought came to her. Perhaps the letter was not in the envelope in the mysterious only of circumstances.

"What then, perhaps—perhaps—de manded Michael, himself not yet so fully advised as to the responsibility of orders of this quality which had been transmitted to him by the Count. Perhaps you were so good as to friend sending it?"

Kitty shook her answer with a question. She sensed—I quickly that "It would be far safer for all concerned as possible to the mentioned of those who knew the key of the coin—the key of the coin."

"I am anxious," said she, turning upon him as dazzling a smile as would have made any man forget all else if it was unlucky. "I was but a small girl when I would have sent your majesty, but the unprecedented—of my own country, since your majesty has been in exile, I have had no opportunity to be a humble message. I have been unfaithful—I am, it was but small loss—and I fear your majesty will forget it and give me a few added days of anxiety. I will explain—" Kitty again, I hope with greater lucidity.

Michael was ready enough to agree to anything which would bring back to his service this charming young creature who sound broke him.

"Very well, mademoiselle," said he, "as you like."

Kitty was relieved that he had yielded, as she, in her turned and made a sign to the leader of the orchestra, who stood, before poised.

"With an, cautious." The kind offered by the Kitty, the King and the young American, of whose origin he was not quite certain, was a strange one. Nothing however, this concerned Michael at all. Michael at least could dance, and so the little group was on Antoine gay.

As the except as in the overtures of the dance, Kitty sought right of the Count Frederick's—Michael.

"Tell me, Michael, tell me, tell me this, I am at least, had dearly hurt his amazement, Kitty, this will enough; aware.

As for King Michael, he was either cordiately sober, which, in his case, was unprecedented, or he was not so unmanageably drunk as he had been.

Count Frederick could the treasure chest the kitty. Unwillingly he owed away his eyes from the beautiful Kitty to the Kitty—Michael—as she danced. He never had seen a woman so lovely, he never had seen a woman so like Kitty. He was an evening of pleasure for him. He had other plans. Count Frederick turned toward the door before a second thought came to his mind. A dance should for any one lady be enough for any man, he thought, as he turned to the door. Kitty was gone! Kitty was gone!

Kitty looked into the face of the Count Frederick, and she knew at the moment that she had made a mistake. Kitty was a woman of the world, and she knew that the Count Frederick was no man to have been left behind her—only to be laughed at. Kitty was a woman who had nearly heard Lefty.

"Kitty, my dear," said the Count Frederick, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing, nothing, Count Frederick," said Kitty, with a little laugh. "I have had my fun. I have all the plans of the Kingdom, I, the queen of the assembly, the queen of the ball, the queen of the dance, the queen of the—I am tired, Count Frederick, I am tired. I want to go home."

"Yes," broke in the deep voice which seemed to be so familiar, "you pose so, but Wait would we do if we should let you go home? Why, we have not had the honor of this Greek ball, Kitty, would the Count Frederick, Kitty, have to ask him in the world of good—Kitty, we have not had the honor—it is unfortunate, but the kingdom is in my kingdom or in my sister—we have not had the honor of the Greek ball. Kitty, you are so—"

Had Kitty realized a moment or so before, she might have even when the unprecedented characters, "unfortunate," she might have even when the Count Frederick was present to at the wrapper of the room which they occupied. No, Kitty, could not have all that Kitty had seen, although he had not been recognized by the Count Frederick, Kitty was gone.

The guard called by this time was approaching, and Kitty was in a hurry rapidly toward the main exit. Suddenly she found herself in the hands with a little group made up of the Count Frederick and Michael and the Count Frederick was saying to her, "Kitty, the great salon—especially for a certain purpose. Kitty, Kitty, we did not lack the attendant of wine. "Our Greek ball, Kitty, Kitty, we have adjourned, as the scene. "What, made—Kitty, Kitty, Kitty,

A STUPENDOUS FAILURE

Because Gov. Willis made a special study of rhetoric and oratory and has a big outdoor voice several big handfuls of Republican politicians thought he was a big man mentolly. In his campaign for election he made a very favorable impression with his big voice, big stage trained anatomy (210 lbs.) and his very fulsome promises of reform and economy. It is now a safe conclusion that during Willis' encumbence of the executive chair he has occomplished nothing of volue to improve political conditions and instead of economical administration he has given the dear, trusting people the most incompetent, wabbly and extravagant administration in the entire political history of the state, says the Ravenna Democrat.

Gov. Willis made very tearful and earnest promises to the leaders of the Anti-Saloon League during the campaign and practically secured that vote. At the same time he sent his executive campaign chairman Jones on a secret mission to Cincinnati the week preceding the election who made a deal with the wet element by which Willis secured a majority of that vote as the record proves. Again, Gov. Willis in all his open campaign speeches to the rural roosters and rooters promised to give the legislative branch of the state government free rein and not attempt in any way to control legislation and he denounced Gov. Cox as a boss who had assumed the role of an autocrat and dictator.

And what is the duplex governor's record on the boss question? Everybody who has a thinking apparatus knows that Gov. Willis has tried to outboss Gov. Cox. The only difference between Gov. Cox and Gov. Willis is that while Cox insisted that the Democratic legislature should carry out the promises of the Democratic stote platform Gov. Willis has made strenuous efforts to boss through the Republican legislature partisan measures solely in the interest of spoilsman and grafting politicians and to engineer o rotten and scoundrelly garrymander law by threats and intimidation that disgraces the governor in the minds of all intelligent and right thinking citizens of all political parties.

It is true that during the first few months of Gov. Willis' administration he let the aggregation of boobies and incompetents of the Ohio Republican legislature drift along aimless and impotent. This is because the governor did not know what to do or how to do any more than an unlettered boy at a spelling match. Matters grew so grave and appalling to the machine leaders of the Grand Old Party that Senator Harding and the resourceful Harry Daugherty and others were called to Columbus and after a secret conference it was decided to install Willis as an executive boss with Daugherty as head trainer and try and force some legislation as promised. And we all know now that no reform legislation of any value whatever was accomplished. Even giving Gov. Willis some credit for attempting to boss the legislative boobies, he utterly failed. This is the record however deplorable. Willis at the dictation of Harry Daugherty did finally succeed in forcing through the legislature the most unfair and atrocious congressional garrymander law ever before attempted in Ohio.

If he has done anything meritorious no one is able to point it out.

It is a very general opinion among Ohio citizens of independent thought that Willis is only big in his voice and that his service to his fellows has been only lip service. He evidently has no executive ability nor has he any high purpose or ideals.

A FEW WAR FACTS

TWENTY-ONE MILLION of soldiers are engaged in the unparalleled war now raging in Europe; what will be our quota if we are foolish enough to enter into it?

More than TWO MILLION men have been killed thus far. What will be our toll if we take part?

Over FIVE MILLION wounded. What will be our share if we become a participant?

The nations at war are now spending FOUR HUNDRED MILLION dollars per week—more than TWENTY BILLIONS per year—what will our expenditures be?

Before we decide to "go in" at any cost, let some of the advocates of war give us an estimate. We are a great nation and can not be stingy with blood or money if we cast in our lot with the belligerents.

And what is to be gained by war? Protection of American rights? No; that can be secured without loss of life, money or honor; it can be secured without arousing hatreds which would last a century.

And what would we lose by entering into the war? Men? Yes, no one knows how many. Money? Yes, no one knows how much. But more than that, we would lose our place as the leader of the neutral nations and the opportunity to mediate when the time for mediation comes; we would lose the priceless privilege of using our good offices as a friend to assist in laying the foundations of permanent peace.

There is no excuse for war. Our grievances—we have them against both sides—do not justify war, and the treaty plan furnishes the machinery for maintaining an honorable peace. Those who talk war misrepresent the wishes of the people. You can no more measure the sentiment of the masses by the froth of the jingo press than you can measure the ocean's silent depths by the foam upon its waves.
W. J. BRYAN.

OHIO'S BIG EXPOSITION OPENS AT COLUMBUS NEXT MONDAY

With women's free day re-established, with Old Soldiers' and Children's Day again a feature, and with other things popular with the public again a part of the program, the Ohio State Fair will open next Monday for what is expected to be the biggest Fair in history—and from the public standpoint,—the best. Weeks and months of newspaper discussion of the State Fair has led the State Agricultural Board to adopt the policy that the State Fair is not primarily a money-making institution, but that it is the people's show, on the people's playground, and that to figure out the most which can be given them for their admission price would please the people better than simply to see a big sum of money on the profit side of the ledger. The Board, therefore, has figured on how to give a big one cent's worth of pleasure for every cent the visitors spend; it wants to give the biggest show possible without piling up any debts for tax payers to settle.

Modified rules for exhibitors give promise of the largest displays of livestock, farm products, machinery, etc., ever seen in Ohio. Larger prizes in various departments have attracted more exhibitors; larger purses and adoption of the policy of six monies instead of four to race winners, with no deduction has resulted in the largest entry list for the races of any state fair in the country this year. In real sport, the State Fair races are expected to furnish as many thrills as any of the famous mile tracks of the country. The state itself will be a large exhibitor. One entire building has been set aside for state exhibits, and the State Industrial Commission will have the largest display ever attempted by any state department. Its "Safety First" show and other exhibits will give the people their first clear idea of what this large Department is doing for the people. The State Board of Administration will have an enlarged exhibit, and in addition will show fifty head of fine Guernsey cattle, and farm products, raised at state institutions.

One of the big features will be the spectacular and educational Pain's fireworks display—"Opening of the Panama Canal," which will be shown at night. Four hundred and fifty persons participate in this production. A fete day at Panama, in which the residents are gathered to see a great circus performance, is interrupted by a thrilling attack on the city by land, sea and air, giving in graphic manner an idea of the awful results of modern warfare. The city is destroyed entirely; then comes the great display of fireworks, which will introduce everything new which manufacturers have devised during the past twelve months. The Pain spectacle will be preceded by a mammoth Horse Show, each day, conducted after the fashion of the great horse shows given at Madison Square Garden, Louisville and other horse centers. An offer of nearly $2,600 in prizes has attracted the finest horseflesh in the United States. The State Fair is fortunate in being on a Horseshow Circuit. Cleveland's show closes just before the Fair, then from the Fair the horses will go to Indianapolis, then to Louisville. This has been responsible for the long entry list of horses whose values run into fabulous sums.

The visitor to the State Fair this year will find the entire Grounds and Show modernized, with electric lighting all over the Grounds, automobiles admitted free of charge, many improvements made to Buildings and all in all an effort to give the people more for their money than they have ever received before.

Robert Smith, resident of the west part of North Madison has an extra fine onion crop this year which was planted and cared for by himself and sons. The Smiths have four acres of the "fruit" and the yield will be better than 500 bushels to the acre. The onions are now being pulled.

YOUNG GIRLS AND MOTHER

Brought into Court With Three Italians. Details Not Fit to Print

One of the worst cases to come before a Lake county court in many years was started in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court this week when Louis Filippi, Peter Perno and Nicolo Perno were arranged on a serious charge. Mrs. Whitney of Wickliffe and her two daughters, Mable and Hazel, aged 14 and 13 were also brought into court. The Whitneys were former residents of Madison and Perry but now reside in the Italian settlement of Wickliffe.

Louie Filippi was allowed to plead guilty to a charge of assault and battery and was given a sentence of thirty days and costs. Peter Perno, who is only 18, was bound over to common pleas in the sum of $500 and Nicolo Perno was bound over in the sum of $1,000, Dominac Fatica, surety. The charge against the latter two is a serious one and the story of the relations of the mother and daughters with the Italians is too filthy for publication.

Mrs. Whitney could not be held but the young girls were taken from her and placed in the charge of relatives.

Elks Carnival a Success

The carnival being held this week on the postoffice lot under the auspices of the Elks is drawing a large number of people to the city and should prove a financial success.

Those who have attended pronounced the shows very fair, with nothing to offend. There has been no trouble about gambling, bootlegging or short changing and the police have had an easy time on the grounds. A band of Italian musicians furnishes a good quality of music and there are other free attractions including the high dive by Matt Gay which occurs every afternoon and evening.

September 2 is the last date for filing nomination petitions.

Dan Roach, arrested at Madison on a charge of intoxication, was brought to Painesville and will think the matter over in jail for a few days.

Wallace Players Please

The Chester Wallace Players are drawing big crowds at the Utopia this week and are giving the people value received. After the usual tent show "drammer" to which Painesville people have become accustomed, the coming of the Wallace stock company is indeed a treat.

Governor F. B. Willis "saw Painesville First" on his way to the Madison picnic Wednesday.

Senator J. V. Winans of Madison, has purchased a new Dodge roadster.

Human Desires.

Henri-Frederic Amiel said that humanity is the dupe of its desires. Experience "has two ways of crushing us—by refusing our wishes and by fulfilling them. But he who only wills what God wills escapes both catastrophes."

ANNUAL PICNIC

Held at Willoughbeach Last Thursday Drew Small Crowd

Are Painesville people tired of the so-called "Business Men's picnic?"

Judging by the "crowd" at Willoughbeach last Thursday and the uncomplimentary remarks heard concerning the location, the arrangements, and picnics in general, it would appear that the common people prefer to pick their own date and place for their outings, and that the old plan of closing up the city for a day is no longer popular.

There was nothing the matter with the picnic. The weather was perfect; the lake was just as wet as ever, the young people danced, rode the "thriller," hold hands and whispered sweet nothings, while the older ones set around, yawned and wondered how soon the next car would leave for home.

There were two ball games, more or less interesting, two concerts by the Painesville band and a baloon ascension.

New Automobile Laws

If you sell your automobile and buy a new one, it is necessary for you to pay a fine of one dollar and notify the Secretary of State of the transaction. The owner of your old car must obtain a new license for it. These are the provisions of a bill which was passed by the Ohio legislature during its last session. Copies of the new law will not be sent to all automobile owners but only to dealers. Notice to this effect has just been received from Secretary of State C. Q. Hildebrant. Another law relating to automobiles, which was passed by the last legislature, provides that a person is liable to arrest if the manufacturer's serial number on the car he is driving has been removed or defaced. This measure aims to prevent thieves from trying to hide the identity of a car.

Will Hold Reunion

The fortieth annual reunion of the relatives and friends of the Joseph and Mary Kibbee Tuttle family will be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Tuttle, 241 Mentor Avenue, Painesville, Ohio. Regular and Limited Stop No. 86 on C. P. & E. car line. Friday, September 3, 1915. Basket picnic dinner at 12.30 Eastern time.

Profit in State's Farms

The state of Ohio will harvest crops worth nearly half a million dollars from the cultivated acres of the farms at the various state institutions, reports State Farmer Charles McIntyre. On the crop there will be a clear profit of over $150,000.

Has Purchased Garage

R. L. McCue, recently connected with the Studebaker garage in this city has purchased the Madison garage and is now ready for business in his line. There will be a practical machinist in attendance at all times.

Mr. and Mrs. McCue expect to move to Madison in the near future.

Boy Wins Prizes at Randall

At the Randall fair W. E. Otis, 15, Willoughby, O., managed to get three blue ribbons away from A. G. Lupton, Hartford City, Ind., who usually has everything his own way in the pony classes. Otis is the son of Charles A. Otis, Cleveland broker. The boy rode May Queen to victory and his sister, Queenie, 12, got a blue for him with Bo Peep.

MRS. JAY STORRS

Mrs. Jay Storrs, formerly of the Nursery district, died Tuesday at her home in North Yakima, Wash., according to a dispatch received at Perry, her former home. Mrs. Storrs was formerly Miss Nellie Langshaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Langshaw of Perry. Death was due to nervous prostration. A husband survives. Mrs. Storrs was very popular with her many friends.

Suicide at Willoughby

Laying aside her knitting, Miss Katherine Kneling, 26, Willoughby, went into the basement of her home Monday and hanged herself with a heavy rope. At noon, when Louis Kneling, the young woman's father, went into her room he found a note reading:

"You will find me in the cellar—Katherine."

Mr. Kneling cut down the body of his daughter and summoned Dr. Thomas M. Moore, who said the young woman had been dead several hours.

It is thought the suicides of Frank H. Clark, who shot himself some time ago, and of John C. Espy, who committed suicide two weeks ago, preyed on the girl's mind.

Druggist Bound Over

E. E. Schaefer, Fairport druggist, whose automobile killed a little boy in that village recently, was given a hearing in Justice Lloyd Wyman's court and bound over to Common Pleas.

Bail was fixed at $1,000, which was furnished, Fred Stange acting as surety.

Perkins-King Co. Winners

The Herald was in error last week in announcing that R. F. Huntington received the award at the Cleveland show for the best display of ten varieties of gladiolus. The Perkins-King Co. of Mentor should have been credited with that award.

The Perkins-King Co. is located at West Mentor, the firm being composed of Laurin A. Perkins and Harry C. King. They are well known as growers of high grade gladioli.

The new owners will also handle the Dodge cars for Lake county.

Appoint Commissioner Soon

A new member of the County Board of Commissioners, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Commissioner Williams, will be appointed in the very near future, according to a statement made by a county official Wednesday morning.

During the day a parade will be held which will be quite unique. The ceremonial will be held at the Hippodrome, Youngstown's newest theatre. Patrols from various cities in this vicinity are expected as well as several bands. The city will be decorated for the event and the affair has already caused much interest among Shriners throughout this vicinity.

Shriners to the number of about 2,000 are expected from Cleveland, Pittsburg, Erie, Wheeling, Toledo, Columbus, Canton, Akron, Alliance, Salem, Painesville, Ashtabula, Sandusky, New Castle, Pa., Sharon, Pa., Warren, Lorain, Elyria, and other surrounding cities.

Roscoe C. Johnson and Zuella Bolton, both of Perry, were united in marriage by Justice Lloyd Wyman on August 24.

FIREWORKS AT FAIR

With more horses entered in its races than at any other similar event in the country, with promise of the finest exhibits of live stock, farm products and machinery ever seen in the state, with a horse show conducted after the fashion of the famous shows of Madison Square Garden, and with the showiest and most brilliant fireworks spectacles which could be purchased, members of the new State Board of Agriculture are more than satisfied that Ohio State Fair, Aug. 30th, to September 3, the first to be given under their auspices is to be one of the most successful of the many successful ones which the Buckeye State has offered.

The offices of the state fair board are one of the busiest places in the state these days, filled with horsemen, exhibitors, concessionaires and privilege men, making final arrangements for their visit to Columbus next week, and one peep will be sufficient to convince that there will be nothing lacking, from sideshows and popcorn men to the more dignified displays of art, machinery, fruits, vegetables, stock, blooded racers, etc. etc., to make the State Fair grounds more than teem with life for five days next week.

The fair board was particularly fortunate in procuring Pain's wonderful spectacle, "Opening of the Panama Canal," as it has been in great demand since its first appearance in Chicago some few months ago. The board secured it in competition with several other cities, for this week, by sending a personal representative to Chicago to press Ohio's claims. There is a magnificent scenic display, educational in its nature, which will show the route of the new Panama canal, and which it cost $30,000 to produce. The scene opens on a fete day, giving opportunity for the introduction of a circus performance participated in by representatives of circus families whose names have been famous in England and America for a hundred years.

This is followed by an attack on Panama city by sea, land and air, giving an idea in a graphic way of the terrible battles now being fought over Europe. The city of Panama is entirely destroyed, then comes the gorgeous display of fireworks which concludes the entertainment. Four hundred and fifty people participate, and it is not exaggeration to say it will be the best exhibition of its kind Central Ohio has ever witnessed.

It is the intention of the board to give more for the money, at the state fair, this year, than ever before, and to establish a standard at which future boards may aim. Monday will be Ladies' Free Day, this popular feature having been restored. All women will be admitted free of charge.

Tuesday will be Columbus Day, and Columbus, being back of the fair more enthusiastically this year than ever before, will try to make it one of the big days of the week. Wednesday and Thursday will be Grange Days, and Thursday will also be designated as Governor's Day, as Governor Willis will spend the entire day on the grounds and will make an address. Friday will be Children's and Old Soldiers' Day, when all children under 12 years of age, and all soldiers who fought in the Civil War, will be admitted free of charge.

Hay Fever Rhapsody

When it's ninety in the shade and you're lifeless as a spade; when the air is full of dust and your head about to bust; when you're longing for a breeze, and you sneeze and sneeze and sneeze,—you've got it!

When your brain is all a-fire and your head seems bound in wire; when your eyes can't bear the light and your face is swollen tight, when your nose is all a-glow, and you blow and blow and blow,—you've got it!

When you sniffle from morn till night, then keep on till morning light, when there's no chance for rest with a ton weight on your breast; when your eyes refuse to sleep, and you weep and weep and weep,—you've got it!

When you've all you can endure and your friends come with a cure; too worn and weary to resist, you take each one as they insist, when you know it's useless to try, and they lie and lie and lie,—you've got it!

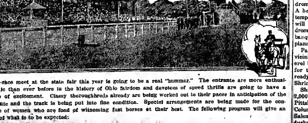
Kneale May Go

It is reported that Maj. O. W. Kneale, commandant of the state home for widows of soldiers and sailors at Madison, may be shortly replaced by a man chosen by the administration.

Married Nearly Year

The announcement has just been made that Merrill Stamm of South St. Clair street and Gladys Murphy of Elyria were united in marriage at Windsor, Canada, September 13, 1914.

RACE TRACK and GRAND STAND



THE race meet at the state fair this year is going to be a real "hummer." The entrants are more enthusiastic than ever before in the history of Ohio fairdom and devotees of speed thrills are going to have a paradise of excitement. Classy thoroughbreds already are being worked out to their paces in anticipation of the fair events and the track is being put into fine condition. Special arrangements are being made for the convenience of women who are fond of witnessing fast horses at their best. The following program will give an inkling of what is to be expected:

A STUPENDOUS FAILURE

Because Gov. Willis made a special study of rhetoric and oratory and has a big outdoor voice several big handfuls of Republican politicians thought he was a big man mentally. In his campaign for election he made a very favorable impression with his big voice, big stage trained anatomy (210 lbs) and his very fulsome promises of reform and economy. It is now a safe conclusion that during Willis' encumbence of the executive chair he has accomplished nothing of value to improve political conditions and instead of economical administration he has given the dear, trusting people the most incompetent, wabbly and extravagant administration in the entire political history of the state, says the Ravenna Democrat.

Gov. Willis made very tearful and earnest promises to the leaders of the Anti-Saloon League during the campaign and practically secured that vote. At the same time he sent his executive campaign chairman Jones on a secret mission to Cincinnati the week preceding the election who made a deal with the wet element by which Willis secured a majority of that vote as the record proves. Again, Gov. Willis in all his open campaign speeches to the rural rooster and rooters promised to give the legislative branch of the state government free rein and not attempt in any way to control legislation and he denounced Gov. Cox as a boss who had assumed the role of an autocrat and dictator.

And what is the duplex governor's record on the boss question? Everybody who has a thinking apparatus knows that Gov. Willis has tried to outboss Gov. Cox. The only difference between Gov. Cox and Gov. Willis is that while Cox insisted that the Democratic legislature should carry out the promises of the Democratic state platform Gov. Willis has made strenuous efforts to boss through the Republican legislature partisan measures solely in the interest of spoilsmen and grafting politicians and to engineer a rotten and scoundrelly gerrymander law by threats and intimidation that disgraces the governor in the minds of all intelligent and right thinking citizens of all political parties.

It is true that during the first few months of Gov. Willis' administration he let the aggregation of boobies and incompetents of the Ohio Republican legislature drift along aimless and impotent. This is because the governor did not know what to do or how to do any more than an unlettered boy at a spelling match. Matters grew so grave and appalling to the machine leaders of the Grand Old Party that Senator Harding and the resourceful Harry Daugherty and others were called to Columbus and after a secret conference it was decided to install Willis as an executive boss with Daugherty as head trainer and try and force some legislation as promised. And we all know now that no reform legislation of any value whatever was accomplished. Even giving Gov. Willis some credit for attempting to boss the legislative boobies, he utterly failed. This is the record however deplorable. Willis at the dictation of Harry Daugherty did finally succeed in forcing through the legislature the most unfair and atrocious congressional gerrymander law ever before attempted in Ohio.

If he has done anything meritorious no one is able to point it out.

It is a very general opinion among Ohio citizens of independent thought that Willis is only big in his voice and that his service to his fellows has been only lip service. He evidently has no executive ability nor has he any high purpose or ideals.

A FEW WAR FACTS

TWENTY-ONE MILLION of soldiers are engaged in the unparalleled war now raging in Europe; what will be our quota if we are foolish enough to enter into it?

More than TWO MILLION men have been killed thus far. What will be our toll if we take part?

Over FIVE MILLION wounded. What will be our share if we become a participant?

The nations at war are now spending FOUR HUNDRED MILLION dollars per week—more than TWENTY BILLIONS per year—what will our expenditures be?

Before we decide to "go in" "at any cost" let some of the advocates of war give us an estimate. We are a great nation and can not be stingy with blood or money if we cast in our lot with the belligerents.

And what is to be gained by war? Protection of American rights? No, that can be secured without loss of life, money or honor; it can be secured without arousing hatreds which would last a century.

And what would we lose by entering into the war? Men? Yes, no one knows how many. Money? Yes, no one knows how much. But more than that, we would lose our place as the leader of the neutral nations and the opportunity to mediate when the time for mediation comes; we would lose the priceless privilege of using our good offices as a friend to assist in laying the foundations of permanent peace.

There is no excuse for war. Our grievances—we have them against both sides—do not justify war, and the treaty plan furnishes the machinery for maintaining an honorable peace. Those who talk war misrepresent the wishes of the people. You can no more measure the sentiment of the masses by the froth of the jingo press than you can measure the ocean's silent depths by the foam upon its waves.

One Farmer Quick to Remedy the Wrong. Spends His Money at Home and Makes Money by So Doing

Men are seldom more innocently employed than when they are honestly making money.

The value of a dollar is to buy just things. A dollar goes on increasing in value with all the genius and all the virtue of the world. A dollar in a university is worth more than a dollar in a jail, in some industry in a temperate, law abiding community than in some distant mine, oil well or problematical fruit farm in distant territory.

The lack of money has brought many a community to a state of oblivion, and the community's pauperism is invariably the result of unpatriotic residents sending their money away to the large cities for supplies.

Catalogue Houses Sow Discord.

The retail mail order houses, as leeches in the side of rural commercialism, work day and night, in fair weather and in foul. They gnaw at a community's substance with invisible teeth.

They bind industry with their film as a fly is bound with a spider's web. They sow a crop of discord, and the harvesters reap thistles instead of dollars.

Mail order buying builds up the large cities at the expense of the smaller cities and towns. Every dollar used in this way by the residents of a community takes a dollar out of circulation at home and puts it into circulation many miles away.

Result of Violated Contracts.

The dollar spent with the home grocer, dry goods dealer, hardware merchant, druggist or other business man upbuilds the community in which you live.

These merchants pay taxes to support your town, repair your streets, maintain your schools and build up and sustain your churches and maintain your markets.

If the people must have inferior goods, such as many mail order houses carry the local merchant no doubt can arrange his stock to correspond with their wants, both in quality and prices.

In some instances the lower prices quoted by the mail order houses are the result of violated contracts and chicanery, which have no place in an honest merchant's business.

Adepts in the Art.

The mail order houses are adepts to the art and science of preparing interesting and readable catalogues. If read critically the skill with which plausible sentences are put together and words made to say what they really do not is apparent.

When a purchaser goes to his retailer he can examine what he wishes to buy. He can look it over carefully, test it and if he wishes receive a guarantee from the merchant that the article is satisfactory. The guarantee is good because the retailer intends to remain in business among his friends and he cannot afford to deceive.

Substitute Goods as Original.

The catalogue houses, however, may offer to replace unsatisfactory goods, but there is the annoyance of writing claim letters, packing the goods found not satisfactory and shipping them back and waiting for the new shipment.

And there is the chance that the substitute goods will prove to be no more satisfactory than the original, and all the trouble will have to be experienced again.

When the consumer learns that it is not ... easier, but much more satisfac... to buy of the home merchant than of the catalogue house then the latter will have a much more stony path to travel than today, and it is becoming more rough with the passing of each day because the consumer is becoming educated to its ways and methods of business.

Cash Versus Credit Business.

All that has been said is predicated on the theory that the farmer wants to do a cash business. He can do no other kind of business with the mail order houses.

Any man who accepts common decency as a standard will tell him that he has no right to send his cash to the big cities and ask for credit at the small local store.

That is not business. While such a practice is not forbidden by statute law, it is nevertheless immoral, unjust, mean. No fair minded man would have the consummate impudence to attempt a defense of such conduct.

Entitled to Cash Business.

If the local dealer is good enough to deserve the credit trade of his community he is entitled to the cash business as well.

LINER, CARRYING 26 AMERICANS, IS SUNK

Steamship Arabic Is Torpedoed Without Warning by German Submarine.

FIVE U. S. CITIZENS REPORTED MISSING

Three Hundred and Seventy-five Survivors of Destroyed Vessel Have Been Landed at Queenstown and Other Ports.

London, England.—The White Star liner Arabic, bound from Liverpool for New York with 180 passengers, 26 of whom were American citizens, and a crew of 248, was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine off Fastnet light at 9:15 a. m. Thursday morning and sank within 11 minutes.

Three hundred and seventy-five survivors have been landed at Queenstown and other ports. The remaining 48 persons are believed to have been lost. Not more than six of them, it is reported, were passengers. Five Americans are not among the survivors.

The torpedo struck the liner on the starboard side about 100 feet from the stern. It tore a great gap in the ship's side, making the water-tight compartments useless. The scene of the torpedoing was about 40 miles from Old Head of Kinsale, grave of the Lusitania.

The White Star line issued an official statement containing the report of Capt. Finch of the Arabic, in which he asserts that the liner was torpedoed without warning.

Such an act on the part of the German submarine commanders would be viewed as deliberately unfriendly. President Wilson warned the German foreign office in his last note to Berlin on the Lusitania case, adding that the United States government would not omit any word or act to safeguard the lives of its citizens at sea.

Turkey and Bulgaria Have Concluded Treaty by Which Latter Secures Railroad Outlet to Sea, According to Berlin Report.

London, England.—British warships have begun a bombardment at Zeebrugge, Belgium, believed to be Germany's submarine base. A dispatch states shells burst over the factory between Zeebrugge and Lissewegbe and that heavy clouds of smoke were seen over Zeebrugge. Whether the Germans' loss includes submarines in active service or others believed to be in the course of manufacture is not reported in the meager dispatches received here. The Germans replied with their coast defense guns as soon as the British opened fire, but these guns finally were silenced.

A German official statement says a hostile fleet of approximately 40 warships appeared before Zeebrugge and subsequently steamed away. It is said they steamed toward the northwest, which would take them in the direction of England.

SURVIVORS TELL OF ATTACK ON ARABIC

But Little Confusion Among Either Passengers or Crew.

NO WARNING GIVEN LINER

Calm Sea and Lifeboats Already Swung Out Help Materially in Preventing a Great Sea Horror—Many Passengers Bruised.

Queenstown.—No survivor of the Arabic disaster who was interviewed here saw the German submarine that sent the big liner to the bottom, August 19, though several said they saw the U boat that a few minutes before torpedoed the British steamer Dunsley, and believed it was the same submarine.

They agreed that the Arabic was sent to the bottom without warning.

Three things the passengers agreed prevented a larger loss of life. They were:

First, that the sea was calm; second, that lifeboats had previously been swung out to meet such an emergency, and third, that there was no panic and the crew displayed good discipline in getting over the boats.

Little Confusion Shown.

From the moment the heavy blow struck by the torpedo rocked the steamer with a violent explosion until she sank beneath the waves there was little confusion among either passengers [illegible]

Attack Prepared For.

"Our course was taking us over in the direction of Dunsley. We prepared for an attack at once. The crew ran about distributing life preservers and swinging out the boats.

"I adjusted my life preserver and ran below to get a suitcase full of important documents. I had just returned when I saw a white streak rushing toward the Arabic, churning up foam at a great rate. Then there was a tremendous explosion. The ship stopped almost instantly. She rocked from side to side and began to keel over. Most of the passengers were in the boats in an instant, and there was not the slightest panic.

"I barely had time to make the last lifeboat. We were launched successfully, but hadn't got clear when the Arabic rolled over and went down. She was half turned on her side, and her starboard quarter struck our boat, caving in the side and throwing us into the water.

Clings to a Raft.

"I thought it was all over, but I finally came up and swam to a raft. I don't know what happened to the others. While I was clinging to the raft I saw another lifeboat about to sink. They called to me and threw me a hawser. I tied it around the raft and hung partly to the hawser and to the raft until I was picked up exhausted.

"I counted ten lifeboats pulling away. One of them filled with water just after it cleared the Arabic's side and sank. A woman who I later learned was the sister of the Arabic's surgeon was thrown into the water. One of the Arabic's sailors swam to her and the captain of a French ship that came to our rescue dived off the deck of his vessel and helped get her into a boat. It was a fine piece of work."

Women Cool in Danger.

Stella Carroll, a professional singer, who was among the survivors, said there was no panic. The women, she said, were particularly cool, but several of them, very scantily clad, suffered from the cold wind after they got into the boats.

DEATH RATE IN OHIO SLUMPS DURING 1914

State Is Growing Steadily More Healthy, According to Official's Report.

ONLY ONE DISEASE CLAIMS MORE VICTIMS

Pulmonary Tuberculosis Takes Deadly Rise, Piling Up Fatality of 110.98 Per 100,000 Population—Typhoid Falls From Previous Record.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

OHIO is growing steadily more healthy. It was just a little safer, for example, to be one of its citizens during 1914 than during 1913. The death rate in the state for each 1,000 people fell from 13.78 to 12.94 during the years mentioned, according to the report just issued by State Registrar Morton W. Bland. In fact, within the state there is only one disease whose death ravages are increasing. That is pulmonary tuberculosis. Although this malady in recent years had given some promise of ameliorating, it took on a deadly upper rise during the period between 1913 and 1914. It cost the lives of 5,578 persons during the latter year as against 4,593 during the former, piling up a fatality of 110.96 per 100,000 population, as against 110.61 during the preceding year. In every other disease throughout the state there was a lessened fatality during the years referred to. For example, typhoid fever fell from its record of 23.99 per 100,000 population in 1913 to 18.14 in the succeeding year. In the same period [illegible]

Man Charged With Extortion.

The state banking department is furtively watching developments in the case of P. L. Andrews, who is charged in the Columbus police court with extortion and other violations of the state "loan shark" law. It is especially watching this case because, under the newly operative statute, it has full jurisdiction over agents who lend money on salaries and chattels just as well as it has over the bigger brokers. It is averred in the charges against Andrews that he forced borrowers to assign their wages for three years in advance, even when the sums loaned were not greater than $25. One year ago Andrews, who has offices in all the big cities of the state, was convicted in the police court in Columbus and paid a fine. The charges now filed against him are almost identical with the charges on which conviction was had. Without expressing any opinion in the pending case, State Banking Supt. Harry T. Hall said that it was his determination to "clean up" the loan shark situation in the state, and he has full authority to make such a cleaning since the law gives him the right to refuse licenses to those he deems unworthy.

Conservation of Human Life.

Ohio will be the first state in the Union to have a state fair exhibit dealing with conservation of human life. This exhibit will be shown at this year's fair under the direction of the state industrial commission, Victor T. Noonan, director of safety of the commission officiating. Fifteen large corporations and railroads will have exhibits showing what is being done to conserve the lives and limbs of employes of Ohio factories. The safety exhibit will illustrate proper methods of accident prevention, sanitation, hygiene and welfare work. The New [illegible]

[illegible] elected secretary of the state liquor license commission, has had an interesting career. Back in 1880 he was made secretary of the old state board of equalization. Hardly more than a year later he became assistant state law librarian and served in that capacity for four years. Then he resigned to become the executive clerk to Gov. Bushnell. Meantime Mr. Hampton had been graduated from Ohio Northern university at Ada, where Gov. Willis later became a teacher, and he had married the daughter of the founder of the university, H. C. Lehr, for years a teacher also but now retired. Until Sept. 3, when the new license law will become effective, Mr. Hampton will get a salary at the rate of $3,000, but under the new law his salary will be $2,400 a year.

'Loan Shark' Law Is Effective.

In an official statement State Bank Supt. Harry T. Hall has called attention to the fact that the drastic new "loan shark" law is now effective and has asked the co-operation of the people of the state toward its enforcement. The aim of the new measure is to prevent unscrupulous agents and companies from "bleeding" victims who ask small loans of money. The bleeding process consists in the extortion of huge sums in the form or under the guise of interest. Mr. Hall shows that hereafter no person may charge as interest more than 3 per cent a month, plus a flat charge of $1 in the case of loans under $50. This is a maximum of approximately 36 per cent a year. It is high enough surely, but nothing as compared with the 500 per cent and even 1,000 per cent which loan sharks have been known to charge in the past.

Ohioans Are 'Some' Gunners.

Ohio's jack tars are "some" gunners. The Essex of Toledo, Capt. A. F. Nicklett commanding, scored the largest number of hits of any of the naval militia ships participating in target practice in the maneuvers held at Erie, Pa., under the direction of the war department. The average of the various gun crews was a trifle over 50 per cent. The shooting was of such excellent degree that [illegible]

OHIO MAKES POOR SHOWING

Annual Average Number of Deaths in State Over One Thousand Says Report.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cincinnati, O.—Typhoid fever caused more deaths in Ohio than any other disease, except tuberculosis, according to figures presented by Frank G. Boudreau, of Columbus. During the last few years the annual average number of deaths in Ohio due to typhoid has been 1,153, while more than 10,000 persons each year have suffered from the disease, according to the figures shown.

Scioto county has the highest death rate from typhoid and Hamilton county the lowest, according to the statistics. Yet both counties, it is pointed out by Dr. Boudreau, have equally favorable conditions or unfavorable conditions. The report has a typhoid death rate of 35.41, while that of Lucas county is 34.07. Franklin has a rate of 17.51, while the rate of Columbus is 17.82 and the rate of Cuyahoga is 12.52, while that of Cleveland is 12.98. Minnesota National Committeeman Reports Sentiment of the Country as Opposed to a Return of Republican Rule.

Fred B. Lynch, Democratic national committeeman from Minnesota, was in Washington recently, and was tackled for a talk on the political situation by the Star's correspondent.

"I see that the bankrupt proprietors of the Republican party have been holding some creditors meetings down here," said Mr. Lynch, referring to the recent conference of several of the big leaders among the Republicans.

"I am not much in favor of talking or thinking politics these days. It is not quite fair to our Republican opponents to take advantage of them, although they were never specially tender toward us when we were at a disadvantage. Out West pretty nearly all sensible folk are now for President Wilson. I do not mean that everyone is going to vote for him, but the solid and substantial character of his administration has won the confidence and respect of the country.

Eggs Minus Bacon.

The vogue of bacon as a breakfast dish does not date back very far. We learn from Macaulay that the fare served in 1831 at Rogers' breakfast parties—the most famous on record—consisted of "very good coffee, very good tea and very good eggs, butter left in the midst of ice and hot rolls."

WONDERS OF THE PANAMA CANAL

EXACT REPRODUCTION OF THE GREAT WATERWAY AT THE FAIR.

SEEMS JUST LIKE A TRIP TO PANAMA

Visitors to Ohio's Great State Fair Have Rare Opportunity of Seeing One of the World's Most Remarkable Engineering Achievements.

If you haven't gotten the chance to visit Uncle Sam's great new waterway, connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, there's a world of opportunity open to you at the coming state fair. The fair is going to portray the Panama canal in all its splendor. The wonderful waterway will be reproduced to a mechanical nicety in a new pyrotechnic and scenic display. This reproduction is the latest work of the Thearle Pain company and is officially known as "The Opening of the Panama Canal," and "Uncle Sam's Reception to the World."

The scenic reproduction at the fair will show many thrilling spectacles to depict the grandeur of the canal's opening and to illustrate how the world was thrilled by the completion of one of civilization's greatest exploits. It is said that the artists who conceived this spectacle labored upon it longer and with more care than upon any like display in the history of pyrotechnic scenes.

The scenic setting or picture is more than 400 feet long and shows a portion of the old Panama City with its interesting wharves, market places, churches, building of old Spanish architecture, then the Great Spillway, the Miraflores and the Pedro Miguel locks, Culebra, Rio Chagres, Lamon Bay, with Gold Hill towering above and in the distance the Gatun locks and the Atlantic ocean.

The lights in the lighthouses, in the official buildings, in the hotels and on the battleships give a beautiful scenic effect by night. High power search lights and a wireless station in operation are among the remarkable features. There will be shown also real aeroplanes and dirigibles handled by living operators. Implements of warfare of a new order will be shown and correct models of the men of war of the different nations.

There will be represented in the various activities 250 actors, representing people of all the nations, from the highest dignitaries of the United States down to the picturesque natives of Central and Southern America.

Great Horse Show Feature

Lovers of well-bred horses are going to find the fair a haven of uninterrupted delight. This will be due to the arrangements just perfected for three big night horse shows that will be given during the exposition. The very highest type of horse flesh is going to be given a chance to display the brilliant effects of training and breed. If there is such a thing as aristocracy among horses, then the cream of the equine upper classes will be in clover at the fair. A keen lover of horses himself, Secretary Dunlap of the new state board of agriculture has personally inaugurated the horse show feature. He is going to look after it himself because he is going to take a personal pride in this part of the big show.

EXTRA!

There is also going to be given an exhibition of trained horses and ponies. The arrangements have just been made for this. It is said to be one of the best schools of intelligent horses in the country and its pupils to be able to perform stunts that are almost uncanny.

GRANGERS TO HOLD REUNION

Event Will Be Feature of Ohio State Fair.

BIG MEN ON PROGRAM

Several National Officers of Organization Will Address Ohio Members. Governor Willis Will Also Speak. Silk Banners To Be Awarded Granges Showing Largest Attendance at Big Gathering Sept. 1-2.

The State Grange has arranged for a reunion at the Ohio State Fair this year covering two days—Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 1 and 2. As is well known, new life and new blood have been infused into the grange organization in the state. For several years the membership has been mounting up and it is now an important factor in matters agricultural in the state, with which wide-awake and aggressive farmers are anxious to become identified. Hon. L. J. Taber, the master of the State Grange, has issued a call for the reunion, and the management of the State Fair has encouraged it by offering prizes for largest attendance. There are three such prizes offered. For the largest attendance from any local grange in Franklin county a silk flag is offered. Franklin county granges have an advantage due to location; that, of course, puts them in a class by themselves. The second prize offered is also a silk flag to be given to the grange in any other county within fifty miles of Columbus that records the largest attendance. The third is a silk flag to be given to the grange located outside the fifty-mile limit from Columbus. Registration will be the test, and so all visiting members of the grange should be sure to register their names and the names and numbers of the granges of which they are members in the book that will be provided at the reunion headquarters. Actual registration will decide the awards of the flags. These trophies will be exactly alike, of fine quality and similar to the trophy given to the champion speller of the state, as decided by the State Spelling Bee held a few months ago under the direction of the state agricultural commission.

There will be a number of notable addresses at the grange reunion—all well worth hearing, and on topics of special interest to farmers. Master L. J. Taber has invited the national grand master, Mr. Wilson of Illinois, and State Master McSparren of Pennsylvania to attend the reunion and speak to the Ohio Grangers, and both have accepted the invitation. The best program ever presented by the grange at the State Fair is now assured. Mr. Taber, the master of the Ohio Grange, will be in charge of the meeting.

In his call the state master states that the last six months have constituted the greatest period of grange growth in forty years. In that time sixty-six granges have been established and more than six thousand farmers, their wives, sons and daughters have become members.

One Farmer Quick to Remedy the Wrong. Spends His Money at Home and Makes Money by So Doing

Men are seldom more innocently employed than when they are honestly making money.

The value of a dollar is to buy just things. A dollar goes on increasing in value with all the genius and all the virtue of the world. A dollar in a university is worth more than a dollar in a jail, in some industry in a temperate, law abiding community than in some distant mine, oil well or problematical fruit farm in distant territory.

The lack of money has brought many a community to a state of oblivion, and the community's pauperism is invariably the result of unpatriotic residents sending their money away to the large cities for supplies.

Catalogue Houses Sow Discord.

The retail mail order houses, as leeches in the side of rural commercialism, work day and night, in fair weather and in foul. They gnaw at a community's substance with invisible teeth.

They bind industry with their film as a fly is bound with a spider's web. They sow a crop of discord, and the harvesters reap thistles instead of dollars.

Mail order buying builds up the large cities at the expense of the smaller cities and towns. Every dollar used in this way by the residents of a community takes a dollar out of circulation at home and puts it into circulation many miles away.

Result of Violated Contracts.

The dollar spent with the home grocer, dry goods dealer, hardware merchant, druggist or other business man upbuilds the community in which you live.

These merchants pay taxes to support your town, repair your streets, maintain your schools and build up and sustain your churches and maintain your markets.

If the people must have inferior goods, such as many mail order houses carry, the local merchant no doubt can arrange his stock to correspond with their wants, both in quality and prices.

In some instances the lower prices quoted by the mail order houses are the result of violated contracts and chicanery, which have no place in an honest merchant's business.

Adepts In the Art.

The mail order houses are adepts in the art and science of preparing interesting and readable catalogues. If read critically the skill with which plausible sentences are put together and words made to say what they really do not is apparent.

When a purchaser goes to his retailer he can examine what he wishes to buy. He can look it over carefully, test it and if he wishes receive a guarantee from the merchant that the article is satisfactory. The guarantee is good because the retailer intends to remain in business among his friends and he cannot afford to deceive.

Substitute Goods as Original.

The catalogue houses, however, may offer to replace unsatisfactory goods, but there is the annoyance of writing claim letters, packing the goods found not satisfactory and shipping them back and waiting for the new shipment.

And there is the chance that the substitute goods will prove to be no more satisfactory than the original, and all the trouble will have to be experienced again.

When the consumer learns that it is not [illegible] easier, but much more satisfactory to buy of the home merchant than of the catalogue house then the latter will have a much more stony path to travel than today, and it is becoming more rough with the passing of each day because the consumer is becoming educated to its ways and methods of business.

Cash Versus Credit Business.

All that has been said is predicated on the theory that the farmer wants to do a cash business. He can do no other kind of business with the mail order houses.

Any man who accepts common decency as a standard will tell him that he has no right to send his cash to the big cities and ask for credit at the small local store.

That is not business. While such a practice is not forbidden by statute law, it is nevertheless immoral, unjust, mean. No fair minded man would have the consummate impudence to attempt a defense of such conduct.

Entitled to Cash Business.

If the local dealer is good enough to deserve the credit trade of his community he is entitled to the cash business as well.

LINER, CARRYING 26 AMERICANS, IS SUNK

Steamship Arabic Is Torpedoed Without Warning by German Submarine.

FIVE U. S. CITIZENS REPORTED MISSING

Three Hundred and Seventy-five Survivors of Destroyed Vessel Have Been Landed at Queenstown and Other Ports.

London, England.—The White Star liner Arabic, bound from Liverpool for New York with 180 passengers, 26 of whom were American citizens, and a crew of 243, was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine off Fastnet light at 9:15 a. m. Thursday morning and sank within 11 minutes.

Three hundred and seventy-five survivors have been landed at Queenstown and other ports. The remaining 48 persons are believed to have been lost. Not more than six of them, it is reported, were passengers. Five Americans are not among the survivors.

The torpedo struck the liner on the starboard side about 100 feet from the stern. It tore a great gap in the ship's side, making the water-tight compartments useless. The scene of the torpedoing was about 40 miles from Old Head of Kinsale, grave of the Lusitania.

The White Star line issued an official statement containing the report of Capt. Finch of the Arabic, in which he asserts that the liner was torpedoed without warning.

Such an act on the part of the German submarine commanders would be viewed as "deliberately unfriendly," President Wilson warned the German foreign office in his last note to Berlin on the Lusitania case, adding that the United States government would not omit any word or act to safeguard ...

BRITISH WARSHIPS SHELL ZEEBRUGGE

Bombard Belgian Port Believed to Be Germany's Submarine Base.

JAPAN DECIDES TO ASSIST RUSSIA

Turkey and Bulgaria Have Concluded Treaty by Which Latter Secures Railroad Outlet to Sea, According to Berlin Report.

London, England.—British warships have begun a bombardment at Zeebrugge, Belgium, believed to be Germany's submarine base. A dispatch states shells burst over the factory between Zeebrugge and Lisseweghe and that heavy clouds of smoke were seen over Zeebrugge. Whether the Germans' loss includes submarines in active service or others believed to be in the course of manufacture is not reported in the meager dispatches received here. The Germans replied with their coast defense guns as soon as the British opened fire, but these guns finally were silenced.

A German official statement says a hostile fleet of approximately 40 warships appeared before Zeebrugge and subsequently steamed away. It is said they steamed toward the northwest, which would take them in the direction of England.

Two large British warships, however, are reported to have been off Knocke, Holland, shortly before noon Monday.

"Two French torpedo boats encountered and sank a German torpedo boat destroyer off Ostend, Belgium," says an announcement made in Paris. "Our boats were undamaged."

SURVIVORS TELL OF ATTACK ON ARABIC

But Little Confusion Among Either Passengers or Crew.

NO WARNING GIVEN LINER

Calm Sea and Lifeboats Already Swung Out Help Materially in Preventing a Great Sea Horror—Many Passengers Bruised.

Queenstown.—No survivor of the Arabic disaster who was interviewed here saw the German submarine that sent the big liner to the bottom, August 19, though several said they saw the U boat that a few minutes before torpedoed the British steamer Dunsley, and believed it was the same submarine.

They agreed that the Arabic was sent to the bottom without warning.

Three things, the passengers agreed, prevented a larger loss of life. They were: ...

... important documents. I had just returned when I saw a white streak rushing toward the Arabic, churning up foam at a great rate. Then there was a tremendous explosion. The ship stopped almost instantly. She rocked from side to side and began to keel over. Most of the passengers were in the boats in an instant, and there was not the slightest panic.

"I barely had time to make the last lifeboat. We were launched successfully, but hadn't got clear when the Arabic rolled over and went down. She was half turned on her side, and her starboard quarter struck our boat, caving in the side and throwing us into the water.

Clings to a Raft.

"I thought it was all over, but I finally came up and swam to a raft. I don't know what happened to the others. While I was clinging to the raft I saw another lifeboat about to sink. They called to me and threw me a hawser. I tied it around the raft and hung partly to the hawser and to the raft until I was picked up exhausted.

"I counted ten lifeboats pulling away. One of them filled with water just after it cleared the Arabic's side and sank. A woman, who I later learned was the sister of the Arabic's surgeon, was thrown into the water. One of the Arabic's sailors swam to her and the captain of a French ship ...

Attack Prepared For.

"Our course was taking us over in the direction of Dunsley. We prepared for an attack at once. The crew ran about distributing life preservers and swinging out the boats.

"I adjusted my life preserver and ran below to get a suitcase full of ...

... were clinging to one side. I helped them to clamber on the raft, and then hung on until all of us were rescued about 20 minutes later."

Optimistic Thought.

We must not permit sincerity and candor to expose us to the arts of the overreaching.

DEATH RATE IN OHIO SLUMPS DURING 1914

Special Columbus Correspondent.

OHIO is growing steadily more healthy. It was just a little "safer," for example, to be one of its citizens during 1914 than during 1913. The death rate in the state for each 1,000 people fell from 13.78 to 12.94 during the years mentioned, according to the report just issued by State Registrar Morton W. Bland. In fact, within the state there is only one disease whose death ravages are increasing. That is pulmonary tuberculosis. Although this malady in recent years had given some promise of ameliorating, it took on a deadly upper rise during the period between 1913 ...

Man Charged With Extortion.

The state banking department is furtively watching developments in the case of P. L. Andrews, who is charged in the Columbus police court with extortion and other violations of the state "loan shark" law. It is especially watching this case because, under the newly operative statute, it has full jurisdiction over agents who lend money on salaries and chattels just as well as it has over the bigger bankers. It is averred in the charges against Andrews that he forced borrowers to assign their wages for three years in advance, even when the sums loaned were not greater than $25. One year ago Andrews, who has offices in all the big cities of the state, was convicted in the police court in Columbus and paid a fine. The charges now filed against him are almost identical with the charges on which conviction was had. Without expressing any opinion in the pending case, State Banking Supt. Harry T. Hall said that it was his determination to "clean up" the loan shark situation in the state and he has full authority to make such a cleaning since the laws give him the right to refuse licenses to those he deems unworthy.

... James L. Hampton, the newly selected secretary of the state liquor license commission, has had an interesting career. Back in 1890 he was made secretary of the old state board of equalization. Hardly more than a year later he became assistant state law librarian and served in that capacity for four years. Then he resigned to become the executive clerk to Gov. Bushnell. Meantime Mr. Hampton had been graduated from Ohio Northern university at Ada, where Gov. Willis later became a teacher, and he had married the daughter of the founder of the university, H. C. Lehr, for years a teacher also but now retired. Until Sept. 3, when the new license law will become effective, Mr. Hampton will get a salary at the rate of $3,000, but under the new law his salary will be $2,400 a year.

'Loan Shark' Law Is Effective.

In an official statement State Bank Supt. Harry T. Hall has called attention to the fact that the drastic new "loan shark" law is now effective and has asked the co-operation of the people of the state toward its enforcement. The aim of the new measure is to prevent unscrupulous agents and companies from "bleeding" victims ...

... mals will be invited from their owners and observers on the whys and wherefores of each case. In the meantime the experts of the state expect to explode some of the old popular fallacies about milk production in general. Indeed, whether or not there is any virtue in the oft repeated tales about the so-called soothing effects of music during milking time and other bizarre folk lore is going to be tested in a real, scientific way. Everything will have to give way to careful and relentless scientific investigation.

Says Economy Is Practiced.

Newton M. Miller, directing commissioner from Ohio to the Panama-Pacific exposition, replying briefly by wire to the charges made by State Auditor Donahey that there has been excessive extravagance in the conduct of the restaurant in the Ohio building at the exposition, says that economy has been practiced by the Ohio commissioners at San Francisco. He says that he knows of no wine or whisky bills, as were mentioned by the Donahey charges, and he declares that he "feels certain" he will be able to prove the statements to be "misrepresentations" when the full facts shall have ...

IT IS YOUR FAIR

Agricultural Exhibition Belongs to All the People of Lake County

The Lake county fair, the one big popular event of the year comes week after next. There is every indication that it will be a fair of which the management can be proud. Entries in every department have already begun to come in, so that there can be no doubt but what there will be a correct representation of the agricultural and stock breeding interests of the county. There are also several departments of particular interest to the women. The children, too are going to have the times of their lives. Everybody should go and stay all day. Take lunch if convenient but there is no necessity for this as hot coffee and sandwiches and pie can be secured at a dozen different stands.

Have you noticed the accounts of the horse races at other fairs in Ohio? They are great this year and big fields of horses have contested in fast time for first money. Records are falling everywhere on the half mile tracks and as some of the best campaigners are entered in the Lake county fair races everyone has a right to expect some sensational finishes.

But the Lake county fair is not only an agricultural exhibit and race meeting, it is also an exposition and will be open evenings. The crowds have always been big under the electric light and this year there will be some very special attractions. The very best fireworks that money can buy have been secured for the evenings, and with the new system of lighting that was installed last year the midway will appear as bright as at midday.

And the midway which always seems to lure the crowd, will be ...

Bunnie Season Longer

Recent changes in game laws of Ohio give nimrods more than a month longer in which they may pursue the elusive bunnie within the confines of the state, and many local hunters have expressed pleasure as a result of the change.

Preparing for the hunting season, which opens the middle of next month about 25 hunters have taken out their licenses. Township Clerk A. A. Seager said today he expects more licenses to be taken this year on account of the lengthened rabbit season.

The first season to open is the one on squirrels. That begins September 15 and continues to October 20. Rabbits come in the first of November and continue until the first of January.

Following are the open seasons on other games:

Woodcock, October 1 to November 30; wild duck, protected until 1918; fox, November 2 to January 9, 13; coon, November 1 to March 1; muskrat, January 1 to April 15; skunk, November 15 to February 15; quail, protected until November 15, 1917.

Every Farmer a David Harum

David Harum always came out ahead in a horse trade because he knew how to judge horses. He could tell the age, note any unsoundness and estimate the weight and strength by a seemingly casual examination. In the agricultural colleges, students are taught how to judge horses as well as any shrewd David Harum. Now through the Extension Service bulletins, farmers throughout the state may learn by the same methods as explained by instructors in the college. Three judging booklets well illustrated take up judging Draft Horses, Dairy Cattle and Swine and are sent upon application.

SEE PEACE AGAIN REIGN IN MEXICO

Officials in Washington More Optimistic Over Outlook in Neighbor Republic.

HEAR FROM ALL CHIEFS EXCEPT CARRANZA

Receive Favorable Replies on Plan Proposed by Pan-American Conference From Majority of Leaders in Troubled Country.

Washington, D. C.—The Pan-American conference on Mexican affairs will shortly be reassembled to consider carrying out the peace plan proposed to the various factions in the republic.

Favorable replies have been received from Villa, Zapata and their military leaders and the influential civic authorities and prominent citizens to whom the note was addressed, with the exception of Carranza and his military commanders. The great majority express a strong desire to meet in a peaceful way and select a provisional president who will be acceptable to the United States and the other American republics.

Ambassadors Confer With Lansing.

Ambassador Naon of Argentina and Dr. Juan Ortega, Guatemalan minister to Mexico recently ordered out of that country by Carranza, held a conference with Secretary Lansing Thursday. Senor Ortega told the secretary that if a provisional president chosen at a convention of the people were recognized by the United States, Carranza as a civil and military leader would not last two weeks. He cannot now control the territory where his troops are, Senor Ortega said, and the measure of control he does exercise is because of fear of his wrath.

Although Secretary Lansing would say nothing about the conference, a general idea of what transpired is known. The replies thus far received were considered. A tentative arrangement was made looking to an early reconvening of the conference when the tenor of the responses will be made public and the Mexican people will be told to call their convention and elect their man.

The United States will give official recognition to the new president and his government and extend it moral support. Similar action will be taken by the Latin American republics.

Carranza's Act Provokes Delay.

The reconvening of the conference has been withheld pending the receipt of Carranza's reply. The first word from that leader came Thursday and was, as expected, evasive and intended to provoke delay. Through Senor Acuna, his minister of foreign relations, Carranza acknowledged receiving the appeal of the conference ...

WOMAN IS SLAIN WHILE TALKING TO HER HUBBY

Wife of Head of Private Detective Agency Is Shot and Instantly Killed by Unknown Murderer or Murderers.

New York City.—Mrs. Sarah Leitner, wife of the head of a private detective agency, was shot and instantly killed as she stood talking to her husband in his office at 52 E. 8th st. Three shots were fired, one penetrating the woman's right shoulder, another lodging in her right breast and the third penetrating her left side. Samuel Leitner, the husband, told the police that as he sprang to his feet he saw two gray caps on the other side of a high roll top desk. The murderer or murderers made good their escape without being seen, although there ...

... revolver was found in the office and the fact that all the windows were closed and the glass not punctured was conclusive evidence that the shots were not fired from the street.

Leitner's office entrance is about five feet from the door of the building. The husband's theory, as told to the detectives, is that the two murderers stole into the office hidden by the back of the high desk.

The detective agency of which Leitner is the head guards the trucks of boss truckmen and many men are hired by the agency. The police advance the theory that the murder was committed by striking truckmen.

Dupont and American Plants Destroyed, Police Probing Alleged Plot.

TWO BODIES ARE FOUND IN THE RUINS

One Tremendous Concussion Rocks Entire City of Wilmington, Del., While Other Explosion Holds Up Work on Large Orders.

Wilmington, Del.—Two men were blown to pieces and Wilmington was thrown into a state of consternation when two explosions, which the population for a time feared was an earthquake, wrecked the Hadley yard plant of the Du Pont Powder Co. on the outskirts of the city.

Investigating to ascertain the cause of the terrific blasts, which shook houses and shattered windows for miles around, the police are giving consideration to the theory that the explosion was a plot carried out by German sympathizers.

Suspicious Strangers Are Seen

It was reported that several suspicious strangers had been observed in the neighborhood of the Du Pont plant for several weeks. This report has led to close investigation on suspicion that the destruction of the works was arranged to reduce the supply of black powder manufactured here and shipped abroad for the use of the allied armies.

The tremendous concussion that rocked the entire city came at 8 a. m., before half of the people of Wilmington were astir, and hundreds, fearing that it was an earth shock, jumped from their beds and in many instances rushed half clad into the streets.

The explosion was followed almost immediately by a fire with calls for the police and fire department, and thousands of citizens hurried to the scene. Neither firemen nor police could do anything on their arrival.

All that remained were two smoldering holes in the ground. Various other nearby buildings of the Du Pont company were intact and the management ...

Large Orders Held Up.

Acton, Mass.—With a shock felt within a radius of forty miles, the glazing mill of the American Powder Co., which since the outbreak of the European war has been working to capacity, blew up. So far as known nobody was killed.

The actual money loss to the company was not heavy, but it was stated that work on large orders probably would be held up several weeks. Property owners in the surrounding towns, particularly in Maynard, were heavy losers because of shattered windows.

The mill had been closed down since Saturday afternoon and police of this town and Maynard expressed the belief the explosion was caused with intent to cripple the plant.

An official of the company pointed out that the glazing mill, where the powder enters upon its last stage of manufacture, is the only part of the plant whose loss would stop the output.

Armed guards have been stationed about the works for several weeks.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

On Monday Governor Willis appointed Dr. Z. B. Campbell of Ada, Republican, and S. D. Webb of Athens county and Columbus, Democrat, members of the new state civil service commission created by the Moore-Barnes law, which went into effect then. The new law reduces the membership of the civil service board from three to two members and makes it bi-partisan by providing for two members of opposite political faith. Charles German of Fostoria, Republican, retires from the old board. These three men were placed on the present board when Gov. Willis some weeks ago secured the resignations of ...

"Prison Demon" to Be Transferred.

Ira Marlatt, 15 years ago known as the "prison demon," with a batch of other prisoners at the penitentiary, within a few days will be transferred to the Lima state hospital for criminal insane. Marlatt is one of the most noted prisoners ever received at the big penitentiary. He killed a Quaker named Barak Ashton in Columbiana county in a controversy over the payment of money which the former owed the latter. John Wyman, chief of police of East Liverpool now, was sheriff then and when he entered a barricaded house to capture Marlatt the latter opened fire on him with a revolver. A bullet which struck him in the breast had its progress impeded by the heavy contents of a pocket and this saved the sheriff's life. For a number of years Marlatt was kept in a special steel cell at the penitentiary to prevent him from killing guards and officers. He almost clubbed the late Warden E. G. Coffin to death when the latter entered his cell to punish him one day 15 years ago last January. The late Warden William Darby subdued Marlatt and made him tractable by releasing him from his steel cage and treating him with kindness. Since then the officials have had no trouble with him.

Matters for Serious Consideration by Democrats.

Policy of the Party Calls for Deliberation of the Wisest Character—Big Issues Are Soon to Be Placed Before the Country.

The Democratic majority in the next house is certain to be in the neighborhood of 31. This will be ample for strictly partisan purposes in most administration matters.

If the tariff subject were opened up, however, the majority might be insufficient to insure safety for the administration. There are a number of Democrats who are in favor of a reasonable amount of protection.

Any attempt to suspend the free trade clause of the sugar schedule, therefore, is apt to prove dangerous unless the administration is willing to permit a general revision of the tariff. Sixteen votes cast with the Republicans will deprive the Democrats of their majority on any issue.

Inasmuch as those conditions will prevail, it is absolutely essential that on the issue of national safety the administration should take pains to eliminate partisan conditions and put preparedness on the broad basis of patriotism, seeking the support and advice of Republicans as well as Democrats.

National defense will be the big issue. No political considerations should be permitted to interfere with adequate military preparations. There are little navy and little army men in both parties. Those who believe in protecting the nation should stand together.—Washington Times.

Confidence in the President.

President Wilson is a million votes ahead of the Democratic party, said Representative Joseph W. Byrns of the Hermitage district of Tennessee at the Burlington, reports the Washington Star.

"I have just returned from an extended trip through the western states, and I find that Mr. Wilson is very strong in that territory. The sentiment for him seems to be unanimous throughout the West. I never ..."

SNAP SHOTS

Some men are afraid other men will steal their wives. And others are afraid they won't.

When it comes to a fight the weakest bystander often can hold the strongest combatant.

Occasionally a woman who has killed her husband is placed on trial. But more often a collection is taken up for her benefit.

Occasionally there is an advertising doctor who doesn't wear side-whiskers, but it is considered unprofessional not to do so.

If, however, you can deliver the goods the fact that you have cigarette stains on your fingers will not handicap you in obtaining a job.

A fat stranger had spent the afternoon walking up and down the street. "He seems to be a dirigible," said Buck Kilby after carefully looking him over.

Not being able to get about as rapidly as I once did, my pet aversion is the youth, just out of college, who mistakes a poetic dancing party for a horse race.

Another profession that is badly overcrowded is that of meddling with other people's business. But so long as it is the sure way of being elected to office it will have followers.

An old friend of Eph Wiley's had dropped in to see him. "How are you getting along?" the old friend asked. "Well," said Eph, "I'm not buying any radium."—Jay E. House, in Pittsburgh Dispatch.

And many a man finds it difficult to make a living because he is practically a dead one.

Even after a man sees where he made a mistake he keeps right on making more.

The young man who is waiting for something to turn up ought to marry a girl with a pug nose.

A wise girl never turns down one offer of marriage until she gets a strangle hold on a better one.

So arrange your affairs that when a bill collector calls you won't need to invite him to call again.

ONCE-OVERS

Too many people act upon the suggestion that "silence is golden" when they are called upon to speak up for a friend who is perhaps in trouble.

You might have been a positive element to stop the wagging tongues instead of a mere negative quantity, had you a moral stamina to stand firmly for the good in your friend.

A few words from you might have straightened matters out.

You did not speak because you thought, maybe, that your own name might get mixed up in the story. And yet a few words of yours might have dispelled the cloud on the name of your friend.

If you are right and square, have you not faith enough in your own standing to defy any who might try to belittle you?

If you have not, do not palm yourself off on anyone as a friend.

THE WAY TO GET A THING

Speaking before the Ashtabula chamber of commerce the other day S. A. Thompson, secretary of the national rivers and harbors congress, made a suggestion that should prove profitable to others besides the business men who heard him.

"When I was here last," he said, "I found among you a few dreamers who thought you needed a larger harbor. Some of your people got ideas into their heads and backed them up by good hard work and now I find not only the best harbor on Lake Erie, nor the best harbor on the whole chain of lakes, but the best harbor in the whole world. I want to congratulate the citizens of Ashtabula on having men of foresight, vision, force and persistence who were able to go out and get this improved harbor for your city."

It may surprise some to be told that the Ashtabula harbor is the best in the world, though no one in northern Ohio and no one familiar with the conditions of lake shipping needs ...

Shoppers Detest Filth and Merchants Fail to Understand Value of Tastily Arranged Exhibits of Goods

Cleanliness is next to godliness and is indeed a duty. Even from the body's purity the mind receives secret sympathetic aid.

So great is the effect of cleanliness upon man that it extends even to his moral character.

Virtue never dwelt long with filth, nor do I believe that there ever was a person scrupulously attentive to cleanliness who was a consummate villain. But cleanliness in commercialism is the most to be admired.

Not Sufficiently Attractive.

An unclean, a disorderly store can not hope to make a big success in these days of advancement. One of the principal reasons why rural consumers have gone to the large city stores and retail mail order houses is because some of the home stores have not been sufficiently attractive. They have lacked both in orderliness and cleanliness.

The successful merchant is the one who not only keeps his store up to the point of a man's idea of cleanliness, but also up to the woman's standard of perfection and, strange as it may seem, dirty people do not like to trade in a dirty store, and a cleanly person will never trade in a dirty store if he can help it, and the chances are a hundred to one he can help it.

The retail mail order houses show in their every move thorough recognition of the fact that woman has become the purchasing agent for the American home.

The successful merchant is the one who has discovered what women want and in what form they want it displayed.

Women Enjoy Looking Around

A woman enters a store much as a man enters a theater. Both are willing to be interested. Women enjoy looking.

The store which makes looking easiest and its display the freshest and most varied goes a long way toward inducing her to confine her shopping to that one store.

The success of retail mail order houses proves that shoppers enjoy leisure in their inspection of goods which they propose purchasing, as their immense catalogues are but a display of their wares and can be studied at leisure and ideas formed as to just how the actual goods themselves would correspond with the attractive illustrated display.

Beauty commonly produces love, but cleanliness preserves it. Age itself is not unamiable while it is preserved clean and unsullied, like a piece of metal constantly kept smooth and bright, which we look on with more pleasure than on a new vessel cankered with rust.

Must Use a Wordless Language.

The catalogue house is hundreds of miles away, asks payment in advance, causes the consumer endless delays, talks in print about mere pictures of goods but in spite of all these disadvantages it does interest and convince by means of its displays in its catalogues and the opportunity of the shopper to "shop" undisturbed.

The up to date retailer is persistently asking people to buy his goods, not by constantly boring them with spoken or written questions, but simply by the method and manner in which his goods are displayed.

His goods must talk for him, and talk effectually, and the language must be wordless.

But the pulling power of price and quality will not overcome the handicap of a dirty, disorderly stock and store.

They clash whenever they meet. Don't let them meet.

Cleanliness an Asset.

Dust is a parasite that eats into profits. Don't throw away your profits. Throw away the dust, sweep out the cobwebs. A dirty article is never a salable one.

Cleanliness is an invaluable asset. It means money in every man's pocket both from the standpoint of money credit and sales.

Untidiness and uncleanliness are not alone found among some merchants but they are too often found in the home, the professional man's office, the hotel and on the farm as well and I sometimes think men and women so thoughtless and shiftless must have cobwebs on their brains.

SYNOPSIS

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XVIII.

A New Intruder.

The keen senses of Roleau schooled in peril told him of some hidden danger—the very tenseness of the situation warning him. Turning, he saw the upraised weapon, and in a flash a blow from his own powerful arm had sent it flying through the window. It fell clinking on the floor at the feet of Count Sachio and his friends ... with the intruder.

Hearing the sound of this encounter Count Sachio and his companions ...

"Follow me when you can. I'll leave a trail." And as she caught up a book from the table Roleau guessed what she had meant by this—a paper trail.

She looked this way and that, but could see no trace of the stranger who had thus treacherously intruded upon their own plans. A strange feeling came to her mind that perhaps she had seen him elsewhere before now. Where could that have been? ... she concluded that he must have been some one of the band of bandits who had surprised her and her companions in the desert.

Trusting to fortune to bring her ...

... in your room, it is true, or near to it, at least, and was set upon by a ruffian and a young woman. Between them they bound me and left me helpless—flung me into your room here as you see. I ask no belief of you. Take me to Count Sachio—I am his man. Let him plead for me. I shall make no plea at all."

Count Frederick found upon the floor a little kerchief, which told him much.

"Very well," said he to Rudolph, "that is precisely what I shall do! We shall go to find your master, Count Sachio. There has been too much mystery of late; perhaps he can explain a part of it."

It was thus, therefore, that Count Frederick and his new passenger had come in a swift car from Gretzhoffen direct to the lodge of Count Sachio beyond the neutral lands. And having arrived at the chalet Rudolph had lost no time in flinging himself from the car and hastening to explain to his master that absence which he knew would be so resented. Seeing Roleau there in advance of him—and bound—his own rage overcame him and he lost not an instant in casting himself upon Count Sachio's prisoner.

This was not altogether a fortunate matter for ... Roleau, surprised at the attack and by this time somewhat in possession of recuperated powers, made so stern a heave at his bonds that he broke them, and thereupon addressing himself to the combat once more, soon gave Rudolph all he liked to do.

Meantime Count Frederick, thinking it well to guard all exits of the chalet, ... what he now saw, therefore, in the main room, was his own late prisoner ...

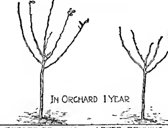
APPLE TREES ARE INDIVIDUAL PROBLEMS



BEFORE PRUNING AFTER PRUNING

Just as your boy John seems wholly different from his brother Richard and your daughter Helen has to be either coaxed or punished while Mary is obedient to the slightest parental suggestion, so every tree in your apple orchard is an individual problem.

If apple growing is to reach its maximum possibilities pruning must be carefully practiced, horticulturists agree, but specific rules universally applicable cannot be laid down.

There are certain general principles, however, and these F. S. Merrill, assistant in horticulture in the Kansas State Agricultural college emphasizes. Not only young trees, but neglected ones, are discussed by Mr. Merrill.

Condition Governs Pruning Time.

"The time for pruning," says Mr. Merrill, "will be governed largely by the condition of the orchard. Where winter pruning is not too extensive, it is usually carried on in the late winter months. Pruning in winter is not dangerous to the tree, nor is it dangerous to saw off a limb when the wood is frozen. The greatest drawback to midwinter pruning is the inconvenience to the pruner.

"The effect of heavy winter pruning is to promote a heavy wood and watersprout growth. The reason for this is that the roots have been unchanged while the top has ben reduced. To restore the balance that normally exists between the top and the root system a vigorous growth takes place. This is important in rejuvenating old or neglected trees but should be avoided in healthy trees of bearing age. A light pruning, however, will not cause the excessive wood growth and may keep a tree in good physical condition.

To Increase Fruit Production.

"Summer pruning should be done after the rapid growth of the spring has been completed. This type of pruning tends to overcome the production of watersprouts and heavy wood growth and is frequently recommended as an agent for increasing production in barren trees. The summer pruning must be light, consisting in pinching back the growing shoots, and is not possible except in trees that have been well cared for.

"The pruning should be done annually. If it is done periodically, the tree becomes unbalanced and too many large limbs have to be removed. Such a condition is liable to be followed by heavy wood growth, and heavy fruit production does not take place in trees that are making rank wood growth.

Keep Fungous Diseases Out.

"All cuts should be made close to the limb from which the branch is to be cut, and the surface should be as smooth as possible. This enables the callus to form and grow most easily. A cut should never be made so that water can lodge on or around it, for such a condition will increase the danger of infection by fungous diseases.

"If a large limb must be removed the pruner must be careful to prevent the limb from splitting at the base. He may do this by cutting off the limb a short distance from the trunk and then removing the stub. Even this additional work may be avoided by making an undercut from one-third to one-half through the limb. In making such a cut, it is often difficult to have the cuts meet and in that case the cuts should be smoothed over to aid the healing process.

How to Treat Young Trees.

"The usual age of trees at the time of planting is either one or two years. The pruning of a two-year-old tree at the time of planting is the same as for a one-year-old after one year's growth in the orchard.

"The one-year-old tree is a straight whip, varying in length according to the variety and the conditions under which it has grown. The one-year tree has the advantage of the two-year tree in that the grower can start the head at the point at which he desires. The height of heading should be between 14 and 24 inches. Whether the trees are pruned to a high or a low head is a personal question and there are points in favor of both, but the weight of facts is in favor of a low-headed tree. The liability of damage from sun scald is lessened, the trees are easier to prune and to spray, the fruit is harvested more easily, and the trees are not so badly damaged by wind.

"The method of pruning is the same for either type. The whip should be cut to a bud, generally on the south side, as the winds often reduce the growth on this side of the tree. A smooth cut should be made sloping away from the bud to hasten healing over. If the trees are strong and the season favorable, from four to eight shoots will be sent out on the original stem. These shoots are to form the scaffold branches.

Improving Form of Tree.

"The pruning for the second and third years will consist in improving and developing the form of the tree. The main leaders should be cut back as in the younger trees. The lateral shoots should not be cut back so severely, for the grower should aim to develop a good strong tree. If the branches are crossing or interfering they may be headed back or the weaker shoots may be removed. All shoots that grow back through the center of the tree should be removed.

"The pruning from the third year should be done so as to form a compact tree.

"After this time the formation of the fruit spurs should be started. If the growth is very rank, the spurs will form slowly, but in the slow-growing varieties the spurs are formed early. Besides the natural formation, the heading back of the small shoots may convert these into fruit spurs. If this work on the young trees is done regularly, only small limbs will need to be removed, and the tree will come into bearing at an earlier age than otherwise."

FEWER BIRDS THAN IN FORMER TIMES

More Encouragement and Protection Would Increase Number and Decrease Pests.

Our bird population is much less than it ought to be, according to the biologists. More protection and encouragement would help to increase the number of birds and correspondingly decrease the number of insect pests.

That breeding birds prefer thickly-inhabited centers of population to forests is one of the conclusions of the census. This refutes the wide-spread belief that humans and birds are naturally antagonistic.

It also seems probable that as our human population increases so will our bird population.

PRAISE GOD EVER

Songs of Gratitude Should Rise Spontaneously From the Lips of All Christians.

The songs of the lips are few, but those of the heart are many. The soul has its music when the tongue is mute and the lips refuse to sing. The mind runs back to other days and we think of father and mother gone to glory this many a year. We recall their goodness, how long-suffering they were of our delinquencies. There is a song in the soul at the sweetness of the memory. It was never set to music. The composer cannot find notes to express it, yet again and again when the dear faces come back and we see the look of tender motherhood or of considerate fatherhood we are conscious of a melody which the world hears not but which inarticulate lips are singing.

There rises before me an old rectangular church and beside the church a little brick house where the session met, and around the fire in the grate sit the godly elders, venerable men. Before them a young man has come with fear and trembling to announce his acceptance of Jesus Christ as his Savior. Memory's song is a tender one. Those faces rise before me, and the face of the pastor, reverent and thoughtful, with solemn questionings upon his lips. But the old church is gone, and the little one-room structure by its side; and in their places there is nothing now but graves. The elders, too, are gone. Not one remains alive. The reverent pastor likewise is at rest from all his labors. And as the memory comes back to me the strings of an invisible harp are melodious. The hour shines like a star in the firmament of recollection.

God's Kindness Abides.

We think of other times when the soul keeps up its songs of gratitude. Are there not in every life recurring memories of days when God was kind? There have been vales of tears we know, when it seemed as if the rain would never cease. But it did cease, and there was a sweeter breath upon the hills, and a livelier song in the boughs of the orchard tree and ...

The General Says:

Know-why and know-how are essential to any success. Every one of us has to acknowledge that the same sort of military preparedness that fits a nation for its defense is the most effective principle in making an industry of any kind serviceable and profitable both to manufacturer and consumer.

This Great Roofing Organization Is Trained Like an Army

Three enormous mills—officered and manned by the best trained force ever enlisted in an industrial army—three huge factories that are run like clockwork.

Military exactness in the securing and selection of raw material, and in every step from then on until the finished product is distributed and sold.

Constant readiness—being prepared every minute for the work to be done the next—Right there you have your finger on the great, essential reasons for the unfailing satisfaction every user finds in

Certain-teed

ROOFING

This roofing certainly has no superior. It is the best roofing that can possibly be made and it is manufactured in and guaranteed by the largest Roofing and Building Paper Mills in the World. 1 ply is guaranteed 5 years, 2 ply 10 years, and 3 ply 15 years, and this guarantee means the minimum life of the roofing. Thousands of Certain-teed Roofs all over the country are outliving the period of the guarantee.

When the General first entered the field the cost of roofing was two or three times more than it is today and the quality was not as high as Certain-teed is today. By reason of his enormous output the General has not only been able to bring down the cost and selling price of roofing, but he has also been able to raise the quality to its maximum. To lay every fifth roll of roofing sold bears the Certain-teed label.

Slate Surfaced SHINGLES

These shingles are made of the same high-grade materials as are used in Certain-teed Roofing. This process recognizes the principle that roofing materials don't wear out—they dry out. Therefore Certain-teed Roofing is made with a soft center asphalt and coated with a harder blend of asphalts, which keeps the soft saturation within—the life of the roofing—from drying out quickly. This produces a flexible shingle, a true sign of thorough saturation in the slowest drying asphalt mixtures that can be made for roofing purposes. A thick, stiff or heavy bodied asphalt shingle is by no means a proof of durability on the roof.

We use only genuine crushed slate in natural green or red colors for surfacing the Certain-teed Shingle. No painting is necessary. We don't try to use old brick, common rock or crushed tile from old tile roofs. The slate also increases the fire resisting qualities, thereby minimizing fire dangers and lowering insurance rates.

Certain-teed roofing, shingles, wall boards, felts, building papers, etc., bearing the General's name, are sold by your local lumber or hardware dealer at very reasonable prices. Don't send your money away for these goods. Patronize your home dealer.

HOW DAUBIT ROSE TO FAME

Painter May Have Had Successful Qualities All Our Titles, and "Pop" Agrees.

"Brother may not always prove up as an artistic quality," explained the old crite, "but it sometimes hits the spot as a business proposition.

"The thinking of Daubit, Daubit the painter, reminds me of a fellow I knew behind him in the little town he hailed from. He stuck to idealism until he saw that it was no use, then he turned realist and took the step that made him.

"About this time he met a young lady who was a great admirer of Cleopatra. The opinion was pretty nearly free of rain, and of one big old lady in particular.

"Daubit saw his chance. He picked the strings and arranged for a business interview with her. He talked to her about Cleopatra and the art of her portrait. He agreed to let Mrs Pop hold her as she fitted best to sit at home, with the stipulation that if the picture did not suit she could not pay one cent.

"Now our painter wasn't to be helped much by the old lady's opinion of the dress and and food he stuffed up and had her easy chair and other things handed down and back every sitting. He posed her to the chair, and he got hooks in the hooks in which her broader fabric always took a turn for the worse. He painted this hooker.

"When the picture was done he let her walk for a day or two before he invited her and her friends to come and see it. He met a special fortune in the fair old lady. That picture was so much like her that her friends and uncle ready to declare that she did not want the picture enough to pay real money for it. Just when she was ready to speak the lucky up proached the painter, seemed to be in it for the first time—it was an old, old story—he was called away, big, and evidently delighted, did her best to get at the basket.

"Daubit was a hero in her home, and in his mentor Daubit was there with her to help her enjoy it. His marriage to her made him a celebrity among all the rich people, and now he is a leader in the art world.

"Now do you second his motion concerning the inspiring friend. "Well it is like all the lots I suppose, and just needed an opportunity."

"Maybe," went on the old critic, "the painter had a good deal of trouble before he got Daubit's name in the right order, but Daubit came to the day before the exhibition and bought some variety.

"For my part, I make no sign of sharper—garter in profile, even with the lady's face in the middle of it.

GERMANY YIELDS TO U.S. DEMANDS

Says She Will Conduct Submarine Warfare According to International Law.

CONCESSION PRACTICALLY ENDS CRISIS

Kaiser's Action Clears Diplomatic Decks for Demand on Great Britain That She Subscribe to President Wilson's Insistence on Freedom of Seas.

Washington, D. C.—Germany officially notified the United States Wednesday that she will conduct her submarine warfare in accordance with the principles of international law as construed and laid down in this government's notes to Germany on that subject. This concession practically ends the German-American crisis.

The action of Germany clears the diplomatic decks for a demand on Great Britain that she subscribe to President Wilson's insistence on the freedom of the seas, which principle was Wednesday virtually conceded in writing by Germany. The promise and guarantee of Germany are that she will not sink liners without warning and without making provision for the safety of the lives of noncombatants, if the liners don't try to escape or offer resistance.

Secretary of State Lansing and officials close to the president regard the concessions of Germany as a "recognition of the fundamental principle for which we (the administration) have contended."

Letter of Count Bernstorff.

The official statement of the attitude of Germany was conveyed in the following letter from Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, to Secretary of State Lansing:

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

With reference to our conversation of this morning I beg to inform you that my instructions concerning our answer to your last Lusitania note contains the following passage:

"Liners will not be sunk by our submarines without warning and without safety of the lives of noncombatants being assured, provided that the liners don't try to escape or offer resistance."

Although I know that you don't wish to discuss the Lusitania question till the Arabic incident has been definitely and satisfactorily settled, I desire to inform you of the above because this policy of my government was decided on before the Arabic incident occurred.

I have no objection to your making any use you may please of the above information.

I remain, my dear Mr. Lansing,
Very sincerely yours,
J. BERNSTORFF.

Appended to the ambassador's letter as given out by Secretary Lansing was the following statement by Mr. Lansing:

In view of the clearness of the foregoing statement it seems needless to make any comment in regard to it, other than to say that it appears to be a recognition of the fundamental principle for which we have contended.

This comment of Secretary of State Lansing on the ambassador's letter reflected the attitude of the White House and all of the friends of the administration.

Question of 'Reparation' Next.

As the statement of Count Von Bernstorff is reflective of Germany's attitude on the Lusitania and the United States government has expressed its satisfaction with the principles of the statement, the question of "reparation" for lives lost on the Arabic and Lusitania will now proceed, probably by some means of diplomatic arbitration to which the United States committed itself in the case of the William P. Frye.

Perhaps the most important suggestion of the letter of Ambassador Bernstorff is its reference to the case of the Arabic. The note reveals two things as to this case.

First—That President Wilson regarded a settlement of that matter as a condition precedent to further discussions with Germany on the Lusitania.

Second—That the skillful phrasing of the ambassador's letter reveals that there can be now no danger of acute controversy between this government and Germany over the Arabic incident.

It is clear from the fact that Germany had instructed her commanders to warn liners and protect their passengers from death before the Arabic incident, that if the commander of the Arabic did not comply with the requirements both of the United States and Germany, Germany will disavow the act of her submarine commander and make reparation for American lives lost on that vessel. Conversely, if it be shown that the Arabic was warned and that she tried to escape or resist, German responsibility will have disappeared to a large extent.

The frank declaration by the German government that the commander of the submarine in the Arabic case had the proper instructions discounts any probability of further trouble over this incident, which the United States government regarded as the most serious of all the issues with Germany.

Ousts Teachers' Club.

Chicago, Ill.—The Chicago Teachers' Federation, considered one of the most influential organizations of its kind in the country, must disband within the next three months.

By a vote of 11 to 9 the board of education voted to adopt the resolution of Jacob M. Loeb, chairman of the rules committee, calling for abolition of the federation.

The edict prohibits any teacher from membership in the federation or any kind of so-called labor organization.

Americans Seeks to Be Soldiers.

London, Eng.—According to information in the possession of the American embassy here no less than 50 American boys, all under 18, have run away from their homes and enlisted in Canadian regiments. Every one of these has been sent home as the result of instructions cabled by the state department. These instructions were more or less colored by the frantic pleadings of the American parents, who had begged the state department to save their sons before they could get into the danger zone.

PRESENTS MESSAGE OF POPE TO WILSON

Cardinal Gibbons Conveys Plans to Bring About Peace in Europe.

ALSO CONFERS WITH SECRETARY LANSING

Cardinal, After His Visit and Confidential Talk With the President, Says He Thinks Prospects for Peace Are Brightening.

GERMANY'S TERMS OF PEACE.

Washington.—In well informed diplomatic circles it was reported that the terms which Germany is willing to consider for peace proposals are substantially as follows:

1—The establishment of Poland into an independent kingdom to be comprised of all Russian Poland, a part of Austrian Poland and a small part of German Poland.

2—Absolute freedom of the seas established through a new international declaration of rights to which all maritime powers shall be signatory. Germany will agree never again to establish a submarine blockade. England to agree never again to make the North sea a tributary water.

3—Coequal rights and liberties for Jews in all lands guaranteed by all signatories to any treaty of peace.

4—Bessarabia, now Russian territory on the Black sea, to be ceded to Roumania.

5—Austria-Hungary to be given a dominating influence in the Balkan states.

6—Belgium to be restored and her sovereignty and future neutrality guaranteed.

7—All French territory held by Germany to be restored to France.

8—That portion of Alsace held by France to remain a part of the German empire.

9—All German colonies seized during the war to be restored.

10—An indemnity to reimburse Germany for the cost of her military operations.

Washington, D. C.—Cardinal Gibbons, dean of the college of cardinals, presented to President Wilson Thursday a confidential communication from Pope Benedict, inviting and urging this government to co-operate with the vatican and neutral nations to bring about peace in Europe.

A conference on the same subject was held later at the state department between Cardinal Gibbons and Secretary of State Lansing. After his visit and confidential talk to and with the president, Cardinal Gibbons said: "I think the prospects for peace are brightening."

This statement, expressing the judgment of a representative of the pope, after conferring with President Wilson, is regarded here as indicating that definite results so far as future action by this government and the vatican are concerned are already being achieved.

Cardinal Gibbons, the secretary of state and the president declined to reveal the details of the pope's suggestion. It was stated at the White House, in fact, that the president would not discuss the subject at all.

Cardinal Gibbons said: "I can only tell you that I conveyed to the president a message from the holy father and that the message related to the subject of peace. The message cannot be made public yet. If I receive authority I shall be glad to make it public. The authority must come from Rome, and we will have to confer about that. I regard the settlement of the controversy between the United States and Germany as affording an exceptional opportunity for peace proposals and as having placed the United States in a most advantageous position to act in this direction. My interview with the president was most gratifying."

Kidnap and Slay Americans.

Brownsville, Tex.—The bullet riddled bodies of two Americans who were kidnaped by Mexican bandits 12 miles north of here, were found in the bed of a dried lake. They were Earl Donaldson, a farmer, who came here from Fayette, Mo., and an engineer named Smith, engaged in concrete construction work on an irrigation canal. In a fight between a platoon of United States infantry and 16 outlaws one of the Mexicans was killed and the rest of the band put to rout.

HESPERIAN DIVES TO OCEAN GRAVE

Vessel Torpedoed by German Submarine Sinks When Almost in Sight of Land.

TWENTY-SIX LIVES ARE BLOTTED OUT

Captain of Destroyed Steamship Declares Boat Was Attacked Without Moment's Warning—Washington Suspends Judgment.

London, England.—The Allan line steamship Hesperian, torpedoed off the south coast of Ireland Saturday night, sank early Monday when almost within sight of land.

Twenty-six persons lost their lives when the liner was fatally wounded on her westward voyage. They included one first class, six second class and six third class passengers and 13 members of the crew. This statement was issued by the Allan line after a revision of the lists.

Capt. W. I. Main and the members of the crew, who remained on board the vessel and attempted to bring her to port, were removed safely before she sank and arrived at Queenstown in the afternoon.

The German torpedo was fired against his vessel without a moment's warning, according to Capt. Main. He refused to be interviewed until after his full report had been made to the Allan line officials.

All through the night as she was being towed to port the Hesperian sank steadily by the head until at 6:47 o'clock Monday morning she plunged to her grave. Capt. Main, on the bridge, foresaw that the ship was doomed and signalled the convoy ships, which quickly transferred him and his men to safety.

Relative to reports said to have been sent to the United States that the Hesperian was armed, it was authoritatively stated here that she carried no guns, either for offense or defense, though the latter are permissible on merchantmen under the international rules of warfare as acknowledged by the American government.

Fears Twenty Are Lost.

Wesley Frost, American consul at Queenstown, reported to the American embassy early in the afternoon that he feared 20 persons were lost. At the same time the Allan line agent at that port issued a statement that one first class, six second class and six third class passengers remained to be accounted for besides 13 members of the crew.

Maj. Kersey, manager of ocean traffic for the Canadian Pacific Railroad Co., said: "It is likely that 12 of the passengers have been lost, as well as a number of the crew."

This official expressed the belief that all would have been saved but for the capsizing of one of the life boats when its falls jammed as it was being lowered in the dark.

So far consular and Allan line investigators have failed to find anyone but the ship's lookout who can state positively that they saw either the submarine or the torpedo. The sailor says he recognized the form of the undersea boat just before the torpedo struck and shouted the warning to the bridge: "Submarine on the starboard quarter!"

Passengers and ship's officers almost without exception, corroborate Capt. Main's statement that the liner was torpedoed and that no warning was given.

Additional support is given this assertion by the report that a sailing vessel, as yet unidentified, was torpedoed nearby at about the same time.

Aboard the Hesperian were 3,545 bags of mail, many of which were for the United States. Some of the mails originated in neutral countries. There also were 559 receptacles containing parcel mail for Canada.

Washington Suspends Judgment.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The White House and state department have suspended judgment on the sinking of the Allan liner Hesperian by a German submarine pending the receipt of definite information as to the circumstances.

It has been announced that this government will take no action till all the facts are at hand. The same course was followed in all other cases growing out of the German submarine activities.

The undercurrent of official suggestion is that, if it be shown that the Hesperian was torpedoed without warning and that she was not trying to escape, only prompt disavowal by Germany will avert the most serious of all the diplomatic crises between the United States and Germany.

The seriousness of the Hesperian case is emphasized by the fact that the United States absolutely refused to discuss the Lusitania case till satisfactory explanation had been made of the sinking of the Arabic, although only two American lives were lost by the destruction of that vessel.

Banker Is Killed by Autos.

Bellefontaine, O.—Thornton W. Mitchell, aged 45, cashier of the City bank, Lima, was killed at Lakeview when he was run over by two automobiles.

Mr. Mitchell had walked into the country near Lakeview to look at a farm he planned to buy. On his way back he stood at the side of the road to allow two automobiles going in opposite directions to pass. A small car driven by Postmaster Emil Davis of Lakeview struck Mr. Mitchell and hurled him in front of a big car.

Three Women Are Killed.

Detroit, Mich.—Three women were almost instantly killed and two men injured, probably fatally, when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a northbound interurban car at a street crossing in Wyandotte, a suburb.

The dead are: Mrs. John Hintz, 60, Trenton, Mich.; Mrs. Louis Hoffman, 28, Wyandotte, daughter of Mrs. Hintz; Mrs. Charles Asmus, 35, Wyandotte, daughter of Mrs. Hintz. The injured: Louis Hoffman, 30; John Hintz, 35, son of Mrs. Hintz.

EASTERN JUDGE IS ASSASSINATED

Justice Knowles Shot From Ambush Just After He Had Left His Bungalow.

SLAIN MAN WAS BORN IN BUCKEYE STATE

Murder Is Witnessed by No One Except Those Who Fired the Fatal Shots and They Succeed in Getting Away.

Providence, R. I.—Justice Willis S. Knowles of the eighth judicial district was assassinated just after he had left his bungalow in North Scituate to take a trolley car for Providence. He received three bullet wounds, two in the back and one in the jaw. The attack occurred about a hundred yards from the house and apparently the shots came from bushes that lined the village road leading to the car line. After having been wounded at least once, the justice turned back and nearly regained the gate opening into his place when he fell dead.

The murder was witnessed by no one except the assassins, who escaped. Later the police detained two men on suspicion. They are Italian laborers, and according to the police, one of them carried a loaded revolver.

The body was found by Knowles' housekeeper, Mrs. Warddel, who had run from the house when she heard the shots fired. As she reached the lawn she says she heard a man's voice with a foreign accent cry: "Now, judge, I've got you." She saw no one, but thought the voice came from the shrubbery.

Justice Knowles was 48 years of age and unmarried. His legal residence was at Cranston, but he occupied the bungalow at North Scituate this summer. His office was in Providence.

Police are proceeding on the theory he was killed in revenge by some litigant against whom he gave a decision. His circuit was made up of the city of Cranston and the towns of Johnston, Foster and Scituate, in each of which he held court once a week.

According to police, he complained recently of conditions under which a saloon, a short distance from his bungalow, was conducted. In recent years there have been many arrests in North Scituate of alleged promoters of cock fighting.

Justice Knowles was born in Hockingport, Athens county, Ohio. He entered Ohio university and studied three years there. In 1890 he removed to Boston, coming here three years later. In 1908 he was elected to the bench.

The justice had planned to leave for a visit of a month at his birthplace.

Friends of Judge Knowles told police he said recently he was making many enemies because of his activity in forming an organization to conduct a campaign against violators of the fish and game laws.

Upon this information police began a search for a man whom the justice is alleged to have described as having become embittered toward him in this connection. Application for a charter for the society was to have been made next week.

The police subsequently exonerated the two Italians detained. They are now looking up a man who was once taken into custody at the instigation of Justice Knowles, who alleged that the man had threatened his life.

Dies in Elevator Fire.

Newport News, Va.—William Butler, a watchman, was trapped on the top floor of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad's grain elevator which was destroyed by fire at night, and was burned to death.

Nearly 500,000 bushels of wheat were in the elevator. Other property destroyed included the Newport News offices of the United States Shipping Co. and the Holland-American Line. Orata pier No. 5 was damaged. Two other piers and three steamships were threatened.

Dies From His Wounds.

Cincinnati, O.—Frank J. Clements, who was shot by Harry Leahy the night of Aug. 31, died in the General hospital here Sept. 5.

The shooting occurred in a prominent cafe in the downtown section of the city.

Clements was a guard at the Cincinnati workhouse.

Both men had been close friends many years.

MEXICAN BANDITS KILLED BY TEXANS

Outlaws Who Crossed Border Are Shot Down by County Officers.

AMERICAN TELLS STORY OF HIS ESCAPE

Attributes His Life to Having Once Loaned $10 to One of the Bandits and Auto to Another—U. S. Troops to Shoot on Sight.

Brownsville, Tex.—Three of the Mexican bandits operating just north of here were killed by county officers at Los Castros, 14 miles north of here, it was reported.

A Mexican woman also was killed. She was deserted by her husband when the outlaws appeared at her home north of here and was accidentally shot by United States soldiers when she approached them in the darkness in search of protection.

Stanley Dodd, American, held prisoner by Mexicans who killed two other Americans, Smith and Donaldson, attributed his escape to his having once loaned $10 to one of the Mexican officers and his auto to another.

"J. S. Smith, my foreman, and myself were working in my pumping plant, six miles from San Benito, when suddenly five Mexican bandits covered us with guns," he said. "Then Earl Donaldson drove up. He was building a home near by.

"Goodby, Dodd!"

"Smith called out, 'Goodby, Dodd, if I don't see you again.' Then he and Donaldson were led off into the brush. I heard two rifle shots, quickly followed by three more. Evidently Donaldson tried to run, for his body was found 30 feet from Smith's.

"That I did not meet Donaldson's and Smith's fate, I believe, was due to the fact that the Mexican with the appearance of an officer told his companions I had once loaned him $10. I do not recall his name.

"Another Mexican in the gang took my side, saying I had given him a lift in my automobile during the Villa attack on Matamoros last March. Then my own Mexican workmen interceded, saying I was a German.

"Finally we took up the march again through the brush. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon the advance guard of the Mexicans began firing. Our guards ran forward to join them. Two of my Mexican workmen and myself ran back through the brush. Not a shot was fired at us. We soon met a company of United States infantry and were safe."

Retribution to Be Quick.

Quick retribution is to be meted out to the band, which is accused, also, of burning a trestle north of Brownsville.

The body of Earl Donaldson will be sent to his former home in Montgomery, Mo., for burial. Smith will be buried at San Benito. They were tortured before being killed.

Word from Encinal, Tex., 40 miles north of Laredo, is to the effect Americans are under arms, owing to a report that a band of Mexicans are in that vicinity and have threatened to attack the town.

At Brownsville it is understood American troops are spread out in a close cordon, leaving no foot of the international boundary unpatroled, ready to shoot on sight if the 15 remaining members of the band which murdered the Americans make any effort to ford the swollen Rio Grande to Mexico and safety.

GIRL FOILS KIDNAPERS

SCREAMS WHEN THREE MEN ATTEMPT TO STEAL HER FROM AKRON HOME.

Akron, O.—The struggles and cries of Carmelita Sebastiono, 18, foiled the attempts of three men to kidnap her from her home at 84 E. Exchange-st. Two men, alighting from a touring car, knocked the girl's mother to the floor with the butt end of a revolver, overpowered the girl and attempted to carry her to the automobile. The third man was at the wheel ready to start the car.

When the men reached the sidewalk, the girl partly broke from their grasp and, striking wildly, screamed for help. Her shrieks brought employes from the office of the Davidson Coal Co. and two of the kidnapers fled across the coal yard with a crowd that had quickly formed in pursuit, while the automobile dashed down the street and out of sight. According to the girl's story, the two men were hired to steal her by another Italian, who lives on a farm east of Akron. She would not divulge his name to the police, but said he was 40 and that he had asked her to marry him several times and that she had refused. He followed her from Italy to America two years ago, she said.

1,000 Christians Are Slain.

New York City.—At least 1,000 Christians were killed and 4,000 others died of disease in Urumiah, Persia, during the five months of Turkish occupation, according to a letter received by J. L. Caldwell, American minister at Teheran, from Dr. William A. Shedd of Urumiah and made public here by the Presbyterian board of foreign missions. Dr. Shedd stated that his figures were based on careful investigation and record, there having been 3,600 Christian burials alone in the city of Urumiah.

MORE MEN LOSE STATE POSITIONS

Democrats in Departments Are Being Separated From Their Jobs Daily.

ADDITIONAL DECAPITATIONS SCHEDULED

Dismissals in Offices of Secretary of State, Treasurer, Industrial Commission and Adjutant General Looked for at Early Date.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

DEMOCRATS in state departments are being separated from their positions daily. Three were turned off Friday. Two of these were in the state dairy and food department — Septimus Mawer of Grand Rapids, in charge of the inspectors, and Jacob M. Styers of Mt. Vernon, an inspector. Mawer is the man who has had charge of the department's campaign for better eggs. The dismissed employes will be succeeded by W. B. Bay of Cumberland and L. W. Stewart of Port Jefferson. State Insurance Supt. Frank Taggart has let out William J. Dum of Lancaster, who has been statistician in the department at an annual salary of $1,800 for several years. His successor has not been chosen. It is expected that most of the remaining Democratic employes in the dairy and food department will be let out soon by the state board of agriculture. There will be dismissals in the offices of secretary of state, treasurer of state, industrial commission and adjutant general's office also. The Democrats discharged by Treasurer Archer report for duty every morning and leave after being informed that there is nothing for them to do. They show up daily, contending that they are legally entitled to remain in the positions which have been taken away from them. The board of state charities has appointed Miss Natalie Merrill of Cincinnati.

'Prison Demon' to Be Transferred.

Ira Marlatt, 16 years ago known as the "prison demon," with a batch of other prisoners at the penitentiary, within a few days will be transferred to the Lima state hospital for criminal insane. Marlatt is one of the most noted prisoners ever received at the big penitentiary. He killed a Quaker named Barak Ashton in Columbiana county in a controversy over the payment of money which the former owed the latter. John Wyman, chief of police of East Liverpool now, was sheriff then and when he entered a barricaded house to capture Marlatt the latter opened fire on him with a revolver. A bullet which struck him in the breast had its progress impeded by the heavy contents of a pocket and this saved the sheriff's life. For a number of years Marlatt was kept in a special steel cell at the penitentiary to prevent him from killing guards and officers. He almost clubbed the late Warden E. G. Coffin to death when the latter entered his cell to punish him one day 15 years ago last January. The late Warden William Darby subdued Marlatt and made him tractable by releasing him from his steel cage and treating him with kindness.

Deaf but Misses Nothing.

Denver Williams of Wilmington, now 20 years old, who has been totally deaf since he was two years old, will enter the college of agriculture in the Ohio State university next month to take the entire four years' course. He was taught to talk and to read by the lip movements in an eastern institution, entered Wilmington college, from which he graduated as an honor student last June, meriting in all his studies. Besides being an honor student, he was an athletic star at Wilmington, playing regularly and with great success on both the football and basketball teams. So adept has he become in the art of lip reading that by taking a position in the class room where he can see both the face of the instructor and the faces of the members of the class he can rapidly follow the exercises and miss nothing of what transpires, so that he stands in no need of an interpreter.

Finds Defect in Law.

The state civil service commission has found a defect in the new civil service law that is causing friction with the city treasurers. The law provides that the fees from applicants for the examinations for state positions shall go into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund. It also provides that the fees from this source in the examinations for city positions shall go into the city treasuries, but does not state to what fund there they shall be credited. In private business there is generally no trouble about getting parties to accept money, and some may be surprised to know that many city treasuries are refusing to accept these fees. The reason is that it is likely to give rise to confusion in bookkeeping, and the treasurers would rather not have the funds than to hold them in that uncertain way.

Old Familiar Faces Appear.

Faces which were familiar at the state house in former Republican days are beginning to appear there again. Secretary of State Hildebrant brought two members of the "old guard" back when he Wednesday appointed Edward J. Hummel of Cincinnati and Thomas Cook to places in his office. Hummel was in the secretary of state's office during the Laylin and Thompson administrations. Cook was in the automobile department, which is a part of the secretary of state's office, during the Thompson regime.

Jobs Would Be Placed in Jeopardy.

Unless the courts tie up the operation of the new civil service law, which is scheduled to go into effect Sunday, many scores of Democratic office holders in various state departments will find themselves jobless and their places filled by Republicans after Monday. There are some 1,600 employes whose places are placed in jeopardy by the new law. If the courts tie up the act pending a decision by the supreme court as to its constitutionality the salaries of these 2,600 employes will be held up by the state civil service commission.

Town Plans Celebration.

A celebration that recalls municipal glory that has departed is scheduled to be held at Dublin on the 10th inst., the celebration of the establishment of that little village, 10 miles north of Columbus on the Scioto river, and a reunion of the descendants of the founder of the village—Ludwig Sells. Sells came to Ohio from Pennsylvania in 1790 and in 1808 laid out the village with a view to having it become the capital of the new state. The question of selecting a permanent capitol had even then become an acute one. When five years later the legislature seriously took up the matter and appointed a committee to select a site for a new capital, the proprietor of Dublin succeeded in winning over the committee in favor of his site and a report recommending Dublin as the site was made. In this the Dublinites won a victory over the other two sites considered—Worthington, five miles east of Dublin, and West Columbus, then called Franklinton. But the Franklinton advocates were strong enough in the legislature to prevent the adoption of the report of the committee and pending further action developed a plan which met the objections of the committee to the Franklinton site, which were based on the fact that the land was low and subject to overflow by the Scioto river. They brought forth a new proposition embracing land on the east high banks of the Scioto river, opposite Franklinton, which was accepted, and became the beginning of Columbus, to which both Dublin and Worthington are now suburbs. Of the two villages, either of which might have become the Buckeye capital, Dublin has proved the most backward. Neither steam nor electric cars have ever broken the Sleepy Hollow quiet of Dublin, while Worthington has both and is quite a bustling little village, though it has never let go its New England town character. It boasts of a thousand population while Dublin is still under the 250 mark. One feature of the Dublin celebration will be the dedication of a monument in the Dublin cemetery to Ludwig Sells, the founder, and his wife. The Sells family proved most prolific and there are few families in the surrounding townships now that are not related by either blood or marriage to it.

Conference of Republican Leaders.

The conference of Republican leaders, state and local, held here Thursday, decided that such conferences shall be yearly features hereafter held always during the week of the state fair. The attendance was a surprise to the persons who projected it, especially the representation of the county committees. The hall at the Virginia, in which it was held, resembled an old-time convention. Gov. Willis said in the course of his speech: "We are getting the Democrats out and that work is to be continued vigorously." This statement was greeted with enthusiastic applause. The address of Senator Harding was short and evidently wholly extemporaneous. He dealt with the political situation in the state in a very distant fashion. Gen. Charles Dick made what seemed the most earnest address of the conference. He said that if the Republicans wished to carry the state next year they would have to organize for it, and it was none too early to begin the work of organizing right now. He placed himself on record as believing implicitly in party organization. Former Congressman Ralph D. Cole confined himself mainly in his short speech to the discussion of our present foreign relations. Talking to the grangers at the state fair grounds, Gov. Willis referred to the grange as the pioneer in legislative and administrative reforms.

Rulings of Attorney General.

The regular meetings of the state board of health must be held in Columbus, although special meetings may be held elsewhere if the board deems this necessary in making investigations, so Attorney General Turner holds in a ruling. Conferences of the state board and health officers may be held at such time and places as the board may direct. Drs. O. H. Williams, B. B. Barber and G. A. Rowland of the Columbus state hospital cannot collect a bill of $180 for acting as witnesses in lunacy inquests held on 15 inmates from the Mansfield reformatory, who were transferred to this hospital. The attorney general says they are not legally entitled to the money because of being hospital employes. In a ruling to the board of state charities, the attorney general advises that delinquent children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court should not be kept even temporarily at children's homes. In some homes detention departments have been maintained for such children. This is illegal. In another ruling it is held that propositions for the establishment of county experimental farms may only be submitted to the voters for approval at November elections in regular numbered years.

Horse Show Attractive Feature.

The horse show given as a feature of the state fair this year has proved such an attractive one—far exceeding the expectations of the projectors in its drawing capacity—that the state board of agriculture has already decided to put on such a show next year on a national scale; that is, with a prize list that will attract the owners.

Picks Chief Food Inspector.

The state board of agriculture has elected Thomas L. Calvert of Selma, O., chief inspector of the dairy and food department, which is a bureau under the board now. The duties of this office are substantially those of the old elective state dairy and food commissioner. Mr. Calvert succeeds former Representative Bert S. Bartlow of Hamilton. The change in the office will take place at once. The selection of Mr. Calvert for this position has been generally discounted. Early in the year he had George E. Scott of Mt. Pleasant, O., for a competitor.

Movie Referendum Fails.

The Motion Picture Referendum league, composed of film manufacturers and exchange men, failed utterly in its efforts to get up a referendum with which to knock out the Bessaw movie law, which makes manufacturers and exchange men equally liable with exhibitors for censorship violations. The league was only able to get a comparatively few signatures for its petitions for the proposed referendum. B. J. Sawyer, Cleveland attorney and former member of the house of representatives, was in charge of the referendum campaign.

TRIBUTE PAID TO RESIDENT BISHOP

BY THE WEST OHIO METHODIST CONFERENCE WHICH MET AT SPRINGFIELD.

PROPOSE A DAY FOR PRAYER

Columbus Ministers Advocate a Different Division of State—Commission to Consider Plan.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Springfield, O.—Much business was transacted at the third day's session of the West Ohio M. E. conference. Bishop William F. Anderson presided. One of the first acts by the conference was to pass a resolution requesting the General Conference at its meeting next May to return Bishop Anderson as resident bishop to this district. Bishop Anderson responded fittingly to the compliment. The presentation of reports of district superintendents was resumed. Dr. M. M. Figley, of the Lima District, showed his territory to be in a most prosperous condition. New churches have been built during the year and some remodeled. After telling of the completion of Grace Church, Lima, a beautiful new structure, he brought forth applause by stating that he had been requested by the congregation of Grace Church to extend an invitation to the West Ohio Conference to hold its annual session there next year. The invitation will be accepted.

A countrywide temperance rally will be held in fifty Clark county churches next Sunday in the interest of the dry cause in the coming election, and the addresses will be made by the visiting Methodist ministers.

Superintendent W. D. Cole, of the Springfield District, spoke of the sudden death of District Superintendent J. A. Story in Springfield last March, Dr. Cole being appointed to fill the vacancy. His report showed the district to be in a growing and prosperous condition.

Proposed Day of Prayer.

Bishop Anderson is desirous that October 14 be set aside by the evangelical churches of Ohio as a day of prayer for the success of the dry cause in the coming wet and dry election. This plan will doubtless be carried out. Edward R. Graham of Richwood, Ohio, addressed the conference on the Methodist Book Concern. He said it started on $600 borrowed capital, and it is now valued at $6,[illegible] 482. In answer to some one who thought he should explain it to the conference, Mr. Graham said that the Book Concern runs an open shop. It does not declare, discriminate against a man because he is a member of the labor union or because he is not. The question of qualification is the one required.

The Book Concern pays union wages, and in some cases more. He presented a check for $7,204 from the Book Concern to this conference. This money goes into the fund for the support of retired ministers, and is a big help in building up this fund. Proportionate amounts are given annually to all the M. E. conferences.

Superintendent E. E. McCammon, of the Toledo District, read a report full of ginger. He did not seem at all backward in expressing his opinion of the manner in which the city of Toledo is managed. He declared it to be one of the widest open of all wide-open cities, and said that when a criminal is sought and they can't find him any place else they come to Toledo and generally find him. Nine churches in the district have increased the salaries of their pastors, and during the year 1,500 have united with the church. Many churches have been remodeled and improved and the financial condition is good.

TRAFFIC LEAGUE MEETING.

Toledo, O.—Members of the National Industrial Traffic League will hold their summer convention in this city on September 9 and 10. This meeting will bring together men interested in traffic work from all parts of the country. Those included in the roster are members of the various large commercial organizations and manufacturing concerns.

ROLLER USED TO STOP CARS.

Piqua, O.—Inability on the part of the City Council and the Dayton and Troy Electric Railway to agree upon a franchise sought by the company to operate its cars in this city precipitated a clash. The city brought into service a 16-ton roller with which to obstruct the tracks, thereby preventing the interurban cars from entering.

OFFICERS SALARIES HELD UP.

Hamilton, O.—The payrolls of the police and fire departments are held up. City Auditor Erb refused to pay salary to Carl Wentz, Socialist secretary of the civil service commission, chosen as the successor of Russell Felgert, Republican, because Felgert has pending in court an action to mandamus the commission to reinstate him. When Auditor Erb refused to issue a voucher to Wentz, the latter promptly refused to approve the city payrolls.

NEW $300,000 HOTEL IN DAYTON.

Dayton, O.—"The Holden" will be the name of Dayton's newest hotel, a nine-story structure which will be built on the corner of Fifth and Wilkinson, on the site of the Union Transfer Co. The contract was signed by William Meyers, of Dayton, and Thies & Thies, architects. Frank Holden, for many years manager of the Hollenden hotel at Cleveland, will be the manager of the Holden. The contract for the construction was signed by T. A. Graham, of Springfield, O.

METHODISTS OF WESTERN OHIO

Held Largely Attended Conference of Clergymen at Springfield.

Springfield, O.—Bishop William F. Anderson, of Cincinnati, called to order the third annual session of the West Ohio Methodist Episcopal conference in the beautiful Central church at Springfield. Practically all of the 425 members of the conference answered to the roll call. Of the number who answered "present" a year ago 14 have died. Nine ministers' wives have died during the year. Bishop Anderson officiated at the administration of the Lord's Supper, assisted by the nine district superintendents and Dr. Wiant, pastor of Central church. Rev. J. R. Colley, of Westwood, Cincinnati, delivered the annual conference memorial address in memory of the ministers and ministers' wives who have died during the year.

Following the memorial address conference these officers for the ensuing year were chosen: Secretary, Rev. V. F. Brown, Milford; associate secretary, Rev. Daniel Carter, Fayette; registrar, Rev. C. L. Corger, West Unity; statistician, Rev. A. F. Huntington, Manchester; treasurer, Rev. Calvin W. Horn, Jamestown; postmaster, Rev. Sheridan T. Walker, Huntsville. Hereafter young men seeking admission into the conference must present a physician's certificate of health.

HORNUNG ARRESTED IN INDIANA.

Columbus, O.—John Hornung, former cashier of the Dresden National bank at Dresden, Muskingum county, was on his way back to Columbus accompanied by United States marshals from Indianapolis, where he was arrested to answer to charges in connection with a reported shortage in his accounts before he suddenly disappeared more than two months ago. James M. Hengst, assistant federal district attorney, said Hornung would be released if he could furnish the $10,000 bond fixed by the federal commissioner at Indianapolis and providing the bond is not increased by authorities here. He then will be subject to action of the federal grand jury, which meets December 7.

BUCKEYE BREVITIES

Cincinnati, O.—The postoffice at Mt. Washington, a suburb, was broken into by robbers. A little money and a few stamps were taken.

Lima, O.—Thomas W. Farrows, aged 64, former general manager of the Erie railroad, with headquarters in Chicago, died here after a short illness.

Canton, O.—William Jennings Bryan will speak in Ohio this year in the interest of prohibition, it is announced by Florence D. Richards at the Stark county W. C. T. U. convention here.

Cleveland, O.—Word was received by the Cleveland Grays that the war department has detailed Lieutenant J. G. McIlroy to train Cleveland citizen soldiers, thus assuring the opening of the camp.

Columbus, O.—The Cincinnati Northern Railway Co. made application to the public utilities commission for permission to issue $[illegible]000 equipment trust certificates to pay for 300 new box cars.

Cincinnati, O.—Fire chiefs from all parts of the United States gathered here to attend their annual convention. The main subject discussed was fire prevention. There were about 1,000 chiefs in attendance.

Greenville, O.—The County Commissioners met and sold the Kleifiker bridge to the Brooklyn Bridge Co. for $4,437.00. The Coletown fill was sold to Studebaker & Son for $712.00. The hearing on the Stillwater Ditch matter was postponed until Sept. 27.

Ironton, O.—Manuel Rodgers, aged 13, of Campbell, this county, dropped a lighted match into the bunghole of a whisky barrel. He is battling desperately for his life at the Keller hospital. The match caused an explosion which crushed the skull of young Rodgers and physicians doubt that he will recover.

Marysville, O.—Mrs. Charles Hagenlocher, 40 years old, was instantly killed one mile east of Marysville in an automobile accident. While returning to her home two miles south of Ostrander, from this city, in company with her husband and two others, she stood up to put on her coat, fell out of the machine, and her neck was broken.

Bellefontaine, O.—The Ohio State Christian conference, which has been in session at Belle Center, has adjourned, after deciding to meet next year at Canton. The officers elected are: President, Rev. A. W. Harrod, of Columbiana; vice president, Rev. A. H. Miller, of Sugar Creek; secretary, Rev. A. R. Lembke, of Salem; treasurer, Rev. C. Z. Yoder, of Wooster.

Lima, O.—Failing to see T. H. Tegerter, aged furniture manufacturer, for several days, neighbors called the police. Officers broke down the door to his bachelor apartments in a factory building which has stood idle for several years, and found Tegerter sitting in his chair, paralyzed. He had been unable to call help and had been alone for several days. He was removed to the hospital, where he died from starvation. Tegerter was worth about $75,000 and owned considerable property, lived alone.

Sandusky, O.—Preliminary steps toward the bridging of Sandusky bay so as to make travel between Sandusky and Port Clinton and intervening points by auto possible without going 50 miles out of the way through Fremont, were taken by the Ad. club, the Federated Commercial club and other organizations composed of local business men. At the present time the New York Central railroad and several small boats afford the only means of crossing the bay, which is three miles wide at its narrowest point.

HOLDS THE RECORD

United States Leads the World in Trade.

Expansion Must Be Classed as Extraordinary—Country May Well Be Called the Workshop of the World.

For the week ended August 1 the balance of trade in favor of the United States was in excess of $24,000,000. The figures are based on the imports and exports from the thirteen principal customs districts of the country.

The favorable balance of $24,000,000 for a single week is simply an incident in the extraordinary expansion of the American export trade. The figures setting forth the foreign trade of the United States have reached a point beyond ordinary comprehension. In the fiscal year ended June 30 last the sales of domestic products by the United States to foreign countries totaled the stupendous value of $2,768,64[illegible].

As the foreign trade bureau of the Philadelphia Commercial museum says, the only way in which a conception of this enormous trade can be obtained is by comparison. How great this trade is can be better understood when it is remembered that the export total was nearly double the value of the corn crop of last year, over three and one-half times that of the wheat crop and over five times that of the cotton crop.

The United States is recognized as the greatest workshop in the world. Yet the value of the exports in the year ended June 30 was 15 per cent of the total capital invested in manufacturing in the last census year. Another comparison shows that the value of all the minerals produced in the United States in 1913 was $325,000,000 short of the total exports in the fiscal year of 1915.

The United States has established a new world's record.

Sees Democratic Victory.

Senator Ollie James of Kentucky is back in Washington after several weeks spent in the primary campaign in the Bluegrass state. He is enthusiastic about the prospects of the Democrats next November.

"Mr. Stanley, who was named for governor by the Democrats, will be elected by an overwhelming majority," declared Senator James at the New Willard. "Stanley made a great fight for the nomination and I confidently believe he will receive the vote of every good Democrat in Kentucky at the November election. The result of the recent primary has deep significance. The overwhelming vote obtained by Stanley means that the people of Kentucky approve of the existing county unit plan. It means that they do not want state-wide prohibition. The vote cast at the primary was greater by far than that cast at any previous primary in Kentucky. The chances are unusually bright for a Democratic landslide in Kentucky this fall."—Washington Post.

Secretary Lansing's Record.

Still in the prime of life, Secretary of State Lansing has not only been a profound student of international law but he has had valuable experience in applying it. He was one of counsel for the United States in the Bering sea arbitration in 1892; he was one of counsel for the United States before the Bering sea claims commission in 1896; he was solicitor for the United States before the Alaskan boundary tribunal in 1903; he was American counsel at the arbitration at The Hague of the Atlantic coast fisheries controversy in 1908, and he was agent of the United States at the time of the American and British claims arbitration in 1912. Whether Mr. Lansing's tenure is long or short, it will end, no doubt, as it begins, honorably and patriotically.

No More Tariff Bounty.

Today Big Business faces the certainty of no more tariff bounty. It must set about adjusting itself to the new and fairer order of things. If it cannot meet competition on equal terms it must get out of the way.

No problem of readjustment confronts legitimate business. The prospect of a fair field and no favors is not a problem. It is an opportunity.

That is the opportunity the country has been asking. It is the opportunity the Democratic party pledged itself to deliver. The Democratic party welcomes the responsibility. The head of the party has spoken.

Time for Appropriate Action.

Surely this is a fit time to emphasize the announced purpose of the government to put its seal of approval only upon banking institutions that serve the legitimate commercial needs of the country.

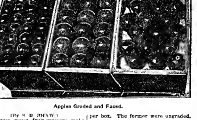
Country's Prosperity.

There are four great lines upon which the prosperity of this country is based—agriculture, industry, finance, transportation. As for the first, the crops this year are going to be the biggest ever, and the farmers are going to make a lot of money because they will find labor plentiful. As for finance, the banks are full of money. As for transportation, the situation is in the control of the interstate commerce commission. As for industry, in the middle West and other sections that is prospering.

Statesmanship Not Lacking.

The import duties collected under the old tariff constituted a much larger proportion of the whole revenue of the government than do the duties under the new. A still larger proportion of the revenue would have been cut off by the war had the old taxes stood, and a larger war tax would have been necessary as a consequence. No miscalculation, no lack of foresight, has created the necessity for the taxes, but only a great catastrophe which has been world-wide in its operations and effects.

ART OF SELLING FRUIT AND VEGETABLES



Apples Graded and Faced.

(By S. B. SHAW.)

A great many fruit-growers make the mistake of allowing their fruit to become too ripe before picking, and as a result the produce, which looks fresh enough in the orchard or garden, reaches the market overripe and often decayed.

Overripe fruit or vegetables should always be sold in a market which can be reached within a very short time after leaving the farm, and very ripe fruit should be consumed at home or canned.

Never ship bruised fruit, because every bruise means quick decay and rotting fruit never brings its cost on the market. Some growers harvest their fruit by shaking it on the ground on beds of straw placed around the trees or by knocking it off with poles or clubs. Fruit gathered in this way is almost useless.

Fruit should be picked in bags or baskets slung around the picker's neck in order that he may use both hands and every individual fruit should be laid, not thrown, into the receptacle. Growers of fine oranges have learned that even the slight abrasions made by the picker's finger nails will cause decay, and in many orchards the pickers are provided with gloves to prevent injury of this kind.

Next to proper picking comes grading, and many growers consider this the most important operation in preparing fruit and vegetables for market. This work can best be started in the field with the growing of the crop. Careful cultivation means fewer culls and less expense for sorting and grading.

Uniformity is the chief requirement to be considered in this operation and fruit and vegetables should always be sent to market uniform in condition, quality and general appearance. Markets are seldom overstocked with good fruit and vegetables, but it is the poorly developed, unevenly ripened and badly selected products that injure the sale of the better articles.

Produce of all kinds should be sorted so that in each package the specimens are as nearly alike as possible. The efficient grader has in mind the appearance of the whole package and not the individual specimen.

The time has come when the better grades of fruit and vegetables are put up in special packages that go with the sale of the product. The increasing demand of this period for produce in "gift packages" has created very strong competition among manufacturers and prices have been reduced to the minimum.

It is a good plan for amateur growers, who have not shipped to the general markets, to first visit the farms of successful growers and learn by observation how produce should be picked, graded and packed in order to bring the best prices.

To show the importance of the proper grading and picking of fruit it may be mentioned that some apples sold on the New York market at $4 per barrel, while apples from the same orchard at the same time sold at $4 per box. The former were ungraded, while the latter were graded, wrapped and well packed.

Most of the fancy fruit from the western states sold on the eastern markets is wrapped in paper and packed in boxes. Apples of this kind frequently sell on the Chicago and New York and other big markets at from 10 to 15 cents each, while if they were packed indiscriminately in barrels they would not bring one-third of the sum.

Trained pickers can also face each basket, thereby increasing the attractiveness of the package.

PREPARE ROASTERS FOR MARKET TRADE

Ohio Farmer Begins Fattening When the Cockerels Weigh Four Pounds.

When we furnished soft roasters to a local market, writes an Ohio farmer in an exchange, we began fattening about September 1, when the cockerels were about four pounds weight (soft roasters are crate-fed cockerels). We now sell most of ours in New York city and have our first ones ready for the Thanksgiving market. When the weather is cool enough to risk a shipment that distance (and we keep it up as long as we can buy nice young chickens) we make the work fit in with our other work, we begin as soon as we can after the silos are filled and our stock cattle are in.

We keep the wind pump going when we are dressing and let the cooling trough overflow. The temperature of the water is about fifty degrees F, and cools them as well as ice water, but no better, and not quite so quickly. We do not draw any that we ship, but draw them for our local trade, after first weighing as dressed. We find they are worth four cents per pound more drawn than dressed. Some markets require them drawn, but not table drawn. Only the small intestines are taken out without cutting any opening.

If poultry is properly dressed and cooled it keeps better and longer than if drawn, and the carcass is very much improved if kept at a temperature of about fifty degrees F. for one or two weeks before being drawn and cooked. If any feed is left in the crop it gives a sour flavor to the carcass because the fermentation of the food takes place there. But when that is over and the feed passed out into the intestines, and the carcass cooled as soon as dressed, no bad flavors result. If the skin is cut to remove the entrails, bacteria enter and very soon spoil the carcass.

Time to Feed Chicks.

Do not feed young chicks till they are at least one or two days old. They absorb the yolk shortly before leaving the shell, and that gives all the nourishment their systems can use for some time.

ADVANTAGES OF SILO TO THE DAIRYMAN

Cutting Ensilage and Filling Silo.

The silo has opened advantages to dairymen in other countries where corn does not mature. In England, where the conditions are unfavorable for production of matured crops of corn, the farmers sow corn for fodder, store in the silo, and then grow a crop of turnips on the land from which they took the fodder. The same system can be practiced in this country, but our farmers are too often content with one crop and thus do not derive as much from the land as is possible to be obtained.

The land in England is high and farmers pay high rents, but they do not hesitate to apply manures and fertilizers liberally, because in that way only can they get large crops in return.

Guaranteed Stock Preferred.

In Maine hotels the announcement, "Minnesota Cartoned Eggs," is to be seen on the bills of fare. Thus do eggs whose freshness, size and cleanness is guaranteed by a Minnesota creamery company, whose label appears on every carton, win the preference even over the products of the home hennories of New England.

Better Grade, Better Prices.

The increased consumption of poultry and eggs from a sanitary point of view as articles of diet, has also demanded a better grade, not only by individual purchasers, but by the general public, and higher prices are also obtained, and are cheerfully paid, too, by the consumer if the poultry product be satisfactory.

Good Laxative Food.

Bran is a good laxative food, especially for young stock.

Cause of Digestive Trouble.

An excess of animal food is apt to cause digestive troubles.

CHORES

It is just a little bit difficult for parents to understand and appreciate the fact that we are rearing children under materially different conditions than those which prevailed when 70 per cent of our people lived outside the cities and towns. In the old days the parents had endless chores for the children. Out of the travail of toil there came a strong, virile race of men. A large percentage of the men who make places for themselves in the world of work in this country came from the farms where they did chores as boys and made hands in the field at 14 to 15 years of age.

Some time ago Collier's Weekly printed an editorial on this subject which touches a vital spot. We quote as follows.

Chore laws are ancient, simple and inexorable. Do the thing half feared or dreaded, at the time appointed, without being told again, as well as if the master stood alongside. Bring in the wood the same when the pile is icebound and go back after the dropped stick ... that the young cattle through the barway though they ...

HARVEST HOME

The government crop report came out as usual last month with its serried ranks of figures, hundreds and thousands of millions of bushels, and the statisticians are now busy sticking in dollar marks as their taste and fancy dictate. The harvest is to be better than ever and the economic foundations of our country are solid. While Wall Street has been spinning its black-and-red wheel of war stocks, and the politicians have been perorating up and down the land that prosperity depends on them and the lack of it on the other fellow, the plain men of the United States have gone out to the fields and plowed prosperity into existence. It takes hard work, but it's the only way. The basis for the business of next year has been established on the bench lands of Montana, in the bottoms of Missouri and Illinois, on the tree-studded slopes of the older States and the irrigated flats of the new West. The predicted results are overwhelmingly impressive in bushels and tons and bales, but greater yet is the widespread intelligence, the faithfulness, and earnest work that made the results come. As science gets further hold among us these same qualities will reap even greater triumphs. Our cities have their place and pride; they do most of the advertising and make nearly all the noise, but when the crop returns come in we know on what the living strength of our country securely rests. The farmer is 71 in the United States, and the rest of us might as well acknowledge the fact. He is in league with the everlasting procession of the seasons, and his allies are the powers of the earth and the unchanging needs of men; the daily work relies on that eternal promise of four thousand years ago: "While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." This year has seen it fulfilled once more.—Collier's.

OUR DUTY

Those who talk war present it as a duty, but to whom? We owe no such duty to the belligerents on either side. They are fighting over questions which do not affect our welfare or destiny. They entered into the war without consulting us; they are conducting it without any regard for our wishes or our rights. An American must have more interest in one of the belligerents than he has in the United States if he desires to see us dragged into the contest as the ally or the opponent of either side.

The Duty to our own people requires that we keep out. The duelist put a sham "sense of honor" above his duty to his wife, his children and his country. According to his code in case of insult, real or supposed, someone had to be killed, regardless of the injustice done to those dependent upon him and regardless also of the needs of society. But the day of the duelist's code is past. Duty requires us to consider the welfare of ALL the people, not merely the whims or interests of a few; duty requires us to consider the welfare of the neutrals who look to us as their leaders, and duty also requires us to consider the future interests of the belligerents. We are the friends of all and must remain in a position to mediate and to advise.

Farmer Saves Fifteen Cents, Squanders Big Sum. Do Not Forget Your Home Merchants

If you know how to spend less than you get you have the philosopher's stone.

Economy is the parent of integrity, of liberty and of ease and the beauteous sister of temperance, of cheerfulness and of health.

Willful waste is a cruel and crafty demon that gradually involves her followers in dependence and debts and so fetters them with irons that enter their inmost souls.

Economy is a procedure by which a certain sum of money can be saved and waste, on the other hand, by which the same sum of money is dissipated.

To illustrate, a farmer wishes to buy an ax. The local merchant's price is $1.40, but the farmer can buy "an" ax from the retail catalogue house for $1.25. He is economical and is going to save that 15 cents.

Abandons Machinery In Field.

The previous summer the economical farmer bought a new mower with which to harvest his hay and paid therefor $85.

The machine was nice and new and shiny, and when the farmer completed the cutting of his hay he promptly unhitched his team and abandoned the pretty new mower to the tender elements of the hayfield, and there it remains, the seat and tongue protruding from a huge snowdrift.

That seems to be a case where waste took economy by the hand and led it out into the fields and lost it.

Neglect Is Noticeable.

It is a regrettable fact that the practice is not uncommon; that it is the rule rather than the exception among farmers.

Look out of the window of any train as you pass through the country, and almost the first thing that meets the eye is a neglected piece of farm machinery standing in a vacant field unprotected from the rains of the summer, the winds of the fall, the sleet, ice and snow of winter and the mud and mire of spring.

What must be the condition of that machinery when in the course of time the farmer is again ready to put it into service?

Have rust, neglect and the elements added to its value and efficiency?

Depreciated 50 Per Cent.

Have they not depreciated it at least 50 per cent in every way? Neglect of this kind is willful waste.

There is no better field in all the world in which the farmer can practice economy than in the proper care of his machinery.

Some farmers protect their machinery all right from the elements. They haul it in under a shed.

The barnyard fowls have also discovered this "nice shed" and find that machinery makes the nicest kind of roosting place, with the result that when the machines are again brought out into the sunlight they are things of sordid appearance rather than of worth and beauty.

Machinery Rusts Out.

The back door robs the house, and the back door leads to the machinery shed and to the open fields. Go out and see if your machinery is protected from both the weather and barnyard dirt.

Remember it is better for machinery to wear out than to rust out. Saving 15 cents on an ax and losing $50 on a mowing machine is false economy, the practice of which leads past the gate of thrift and industry and up to the door of "woeful want and willful waste" and to the fireside of indolence and neglect.

The man who neglects and abandons his farm machinery in the field is not only the most indolent man in the world, but also the most stupid.

And the strangest part of it all is that a man will admit his indolence, but will fight if called stupid.

He sort of persuades himself to believe that indolence cherishes all the peaceful virtues and that without destroying the others it merely suspends their functions.

Be Frank With Dealer.

Be frank and open and manly with yourself and ask your dealer to be the same.

Then there will be more consumers in the town to feed and the farmer will profit by it. So will the retail merchant and also the consumer citizens of the town, the professional man and the employee, as they will be profitably employed and earning money.

Coughs That Are Stopped!

Careful people see that they are stopped. Dr. King's New Discovery is a remedy of tried merit. It has held its own on the market for 46 years. Youth and old age testify to its soothing and healing qualities. Pneumonia and lung troubles are often caused by delay of treatment. Dr. King's New Discovery stops those hacking coughs and relieves la grippe tendencies. Money back if it fails. 50c and $1.00.

As to Argument.

Argument is generally waste of time and trouble. It is better to present one's opinion and leave it to stick or not as it may happen. If sound, it will probably in the end stick, and the sticking is the main thing.—Samuel Butler.

A Clogged System Needs Attention

Are you bilious, dizzy and listless? Dr. King's New Life Pills taken at once seizes upon constipation and starts the bowels moving naturally and easily. Moreover it acts without griping. Neglect of a clogged system often leads to most serious and a body poorly functioning need immediate attention. If you wish to wake up tomorrow morning happy in mind and entirely satisfied, start your treatment tonight. 25c a bottle.

Fourth Annual Lake County Fair Is Big Success in Every Way

Best Exhibition of Live Stock and Farm Products Seen In Many Days. Record Breaking Crowds Wednesday and Thursday

As we go to press Thursday morning the Fourth Annual Lake County Fair is in full swing with every indication that all previous attendance records will be broken. Tuesday, the opening day, brought out a fair-sized crowd while the Wednesday visitors were very numerous.

The fair is more than living up to its advance notices. It is truly bigger and better than ever, and an institution of which every man, woman and child in the county should be proud. The officers, from president down, who have worked so hard for weeks to make the fair a success, deserve hearty votes of thanks.

The stock barns were too small to hold the large number of fancy horses and cattle and tents have been used for the overflow. Among the cattle exhibitors are Hull Brothers of Perry, 19 Brown Swiss; M. B. Thayer of Linesville, Pa., 17 Devons; F. J. and H. S. Inerchen of Geneva, had 13 Red Polled cattle; R. L. Pike of Fairview farm, Unionville, O., 16 Jerseys; J. E. and C. R. Wade, breeders of dairy shorthorn cattle of Orangeville, O., Edgewood farm, 19 cattle; R. H. Morrison, State Line farm, Orangeville, O., 12 Ayrshire and Guernseys; W. L. Porter of Atwater, 11 beef shorthorns; F. B. Trumbull of Cederville, O., 11 head of Abberdeen Angus; J. E. Kelley of Kellairn farm, Xenia, O., 17 Jerseys; G. Walter Shumway, Grandview farm, Perry, O., 8 Jerseys; W. H. Silverthorne, Old Orchard farm, Painesville, 17 Jerseys; Samuel Runner, Cherry farm, Painesville, 37 Holsteins.

FINE LOT OF SHEEP

The sheep pens are also filled to overflowing with the largest and best number of entries ever seen here. Following is a list of contenders for premiums: S. H. Sanders of Ashtabula, 12 Merinos and Delaines; A. D. Crocker & Son, 10 head of Cotswolds, Dorsets, Southdowns and Hampshires; J. Kranis & Son of Canal Dover, 30 head of Merinos, Rambouillet and Delaines; L. & L. C. Blodgett, Columbia, O., 11 head of Shropshire; Geo. H. Neuhard, Hill Top Herd farm, Elm Grove, W. Va., 12 Hampshires, 14 Cheviots and 30 Hampshires; Palmer & Tussing, Pataskala, O., 35 head of Shropshire, Southdowns and Oxfords; Bradford & Jewett, Rochester, O., 41 head of Dorset, Cheviot, Cotswold, Hampshire and Lincoln. C. H. Ostrander of Thompson started to judge the sheep Wednesday.

SWINE

The exhibit of swine included a valuable bunch of "porkers." The exhibitors are A. D. Crocker & Son; Millard Brothers of Huntsburg; R. L. Pike of Unionville; C. W. Hadden of Richmond; W. S. Robinson of Mentor, and President H. V. Shulters' individual exhibit.

HORSES

Much interest was manifested in this unusually fine exhibit and the two horse barns were well filled and included many valuable animals in almost every class.

OTHER EXHIBITS

The displays of fruits and vegetables, of flowers, fancy work and many other things are all there and well worth looking at. Local merchants have attractive booths and the automobile salesmen are a whole fair in themselves. Then there is the midway with its clean attractions, the log cabin with the Craine curios and dozens of other things which must be told about some other time.

The ball games and races are great drawing cards and with the track in excellent condition fast time will be made today and Friday.

If you haven't attended the fair, do so by all means. It is your fair and worth many times the quarter it costs to enter the gates.

A Reminiscence

Backward, turn backward, O time in thy flight and bring back those days of childhood when the county fair was the most attractive event of the whole round year.

In the mellow Septembers of those old days when the skies were full of color with cloudlings of violet and amethyst and the trees brilliant in scarlet and gold and the frost was on the pumpkins, the farmer boy would abandon the apple picking and corn husking for all the days of the county fair. Dressed in his new "store" handmedowns he would hitch his "hoss" to a narrow seat buggy and take his best beloved lass to the fair.

What an array of improved editions of Adam and Eve drove through the front gates in serene Garden of Eden ecstacy! How they used to arrange themselves in spoony pairs in front of the sideshow tents, listen to the orations on the fat man, the giant, the midgets, and the female snake charmer. Here and there a young man would fish out two dimes, receive the red pasteboard tickets and amid the din of drum and tambourine go into the tent and get humbugged just as we do today.

And then when the starting bell rang what a grand rush there was for the picket fence that lined the race track along the home stretch. How the rows and rows of farmer lads and lassies hung on that fence between heats and ate ginger bread and taffy. The whole infield would be covered with farm wagons and top buggies and big baskets of dinner could be seen in every rig. Here and there stalwart young men reckless of danger balanced themselves on the top of the picket fence lest they miss a single stride of the swift array of trotters striving for first place at the wire.

How it all comes back to mind after the lapse of years! The music of the many bands, the shouts of the lemonade seller and the candy puller, the startling announcements of the starting judge roaring through his horn, the colored caps of the drivers, the mongrel medley of jabbering swipes wrapped in horse coolers, the mounted marshal jabbing his heels into his tired steed chasing intruders off the quarter stretch—all these and many more.

O yes. The present Lake County Fair is a vast improvement over those of the old days, of course, but somehow when we see the long procession of high powered motor cars, the correctly tailored men and the short-skirted, summer furred girls who would turn up their pretty noses at old fashioned taffy or ginger cake somehow we have a longing for those good old days when a quarter would buy more real enjoyment than a five dollar bill will now and when the county fair was the most alluring of all the year's delights to the boy accustomed only to the serene and lonesome quiet of the home farm.

Ohio Boys Are Good Judges

During September 75 boys live stock judging contests are being held in as many counties in Ohio at the county fairs. During the week of September 13-18 contests are being held in Lake, Medina, Morgan, Paulding, Richland, Shelby, Warren and Wyandot counties. The three winners in each county will be given a free trip to Farmers' Week in February 1916. Additional prizes are also given in each county. In many counties the scores are very close, the boys showing that they are proficient livestock judges.

The Festive Farmer

"Farm life is an ideal life," says Zim, in Cartoons magazine, especially in the story books and upon the theater stage. The farmer is his own boss and monarch of all the acres that are not plastered with mortgages. He arises with the little birds, hits up the hard cider in the cellar, then bless him thither to toy with the cattle, for milking at four A. M. is one of the joys of farm life. From the milking stool he wends his way to the woodpile and gleefully chops up a cord or two before the breakfast call. When the morning meal is over his real life begins. Blended with the buzz of rusty machinery, song and profanity, the remaining eighteen hours are whiled away. When the farm becomes so impoverished that it will raise nothing but chin whiskers, he lets the mortgage holder do his worst.

New School Law Benefits Every County In The State

Columbus, Sept. 13.—A little more than a year ago the legislature was called in special session by Gov. Cox to make over Ohio's school system.

Have the results been good or bad? What are the conditions in Ohio's schools now?

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Frank W. Miller gives the answer in the following article:

Under our new school code:

Hundreds of school buildings have been remodeled and otherwise improved. Walks have been built, grounds graded, toilets screened.

All counties have adopted some system of school records.

There has been great savings in the purchase of supplies.

Courses of study have been revised quite generally, eliminating dead matter, and providing for practical and up to date methods. General flexibility is everywhere in evidence.

County uniformity of text-books has been secured in many counties and is rapidly coming in others.

Medical inspection is being arranged for in some localities. A marked increase in the number of pupils enrolled is noticeable.

Greater interest in reading circles work, both as regards teachers and pupils.

More schools showing work at the county fair than ever before.

Marked improvement in the character of the county institute.

A considerable number of rural schools, both one room and consolidated, have been standardized.

Centralization projects are being considered in widely separated sections of the state. Many counties have made rapid progress along this line.

The method of promoting pupils to the high schools is proving more satisfactory than the old Boxwell-Patterson provision.

Rural social activities, as connected with the schools, have been increased, enlarged, quickened. Hundreds of school and community functions have been boosted.

An awakening among the teachers is evidenced by the fact that approximately 13,000 teachers and prospective teachers have enrolled in the summer schools connected with the county and state normal schools, and private and denominational colleges.

The creation of a county board of education has justified itself in that it furnishes a body of clean men who are in a sense representative and who deal with school problems in a larger way, influenced less by selfish interest and petty local prejudice than the old local boards.

There is practically a concensus of opinion among school men and students of educational problems as to the possibilities of advancement and school betterment under the provisions of the new school code.

"A Land Yacht"

Roland R. Conklin's motor land yacht" skipped the business section of Painesville last Thursday afternoon, going through via Erie street.

The automobile was built for private use and was fitted along the ideas of the owner. It is as fully equipped as most modern houses, having two stories and sleeping accommodations for 16.

On the first floor of the machine there are 6 sleeping berths and ten on the second floor. Sleeping accommodations can also be provided on the roof.

The big car, which has a 60 horse power engine, looks more like a street car than an automobile.

It has an electrical plant that furnishes light and heat for both cooking and comfort. There is also a bath room and toilet on the car.

Seventeen-year-old Julia Conklin and her school friend, Miss Zinsser, and ten-year-old Roland Conklin are delighted with the unique tour. A governess is in the party for their benefit. Others include, besides Mr. and Mrs. Conklin, their nephews, Harry and Frank Conklin.

Conklin, who is president of the New York Motor Bus Company, designed the "motor land yacht" as a new and attractive way of traveling from their home in Huntington, L. I. to the Panama exposition. They expect to reach San Francisco late in October.

Open Music Studio

Willoughby was favored with the opening of a studio for the teaching of violin, voice and piano on Saturday, September 11.

Mr. Carl Ludwig, member of the Cleveland Symphony orchestra and orchestra leader of Trinity cathedral Cleveland, and his sister, Miss Viola Ludwig, pupil of Wilson C. Smith, well known Cleveland pianist, will receive pupils in those three branches of harmony at their studio in the home of Mrs. Edward H. Williams, at No. 49 Euclid avenue. Mr. Ludwig needs little introduction to the music lovers of Willoughby, many of whom doubtless recall that he has studied with Herbert Butler and Sig. Arcangeli of Chicago and has also had a wide experience in teaching the violin and voice. His sister has accompanied her brother in many important programs in Cleveland society and has had much experience in teaching.

Accident at Fair Grounds

Miss Nellie Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Mills, was injured in a runaway accident at the fair grounds Monday evening. Miss Mills was seated in a surrey while other members were looking over the grounds. The horse became frightened and ran through the grounds the surrey colliding with a pole and overturning.

Miss Mills was rushed to the hospital where it was found that her left arm was fractured and her head badly bruised in front and over the right eye. A fracture at the base of the skull was feared but the young lady was much improved Wednesday.

Andrews Exhibit at Fair

... will have individual exhibits. Stu... the fair is that of the Andrews Institute for Girls, which will have one booth devoted entirely to products of the different departments of the school. The majority of these will be dresses, art needlework and sweetmeats and pastries. Besides this booth, more than 50 students ... One of the interesting exhibits at ... dents here won 28 blue ribbons last year and think they can better that record this year, according to Supt. S. D. Shankland.

County Treasurer instructed to proceed with the collection of delinquent personal taxes.

Comfort and Home, Sweet Home.

Comfort is the "High C" in home decoration, according to a well written bulletin issued by the Agricultural Extension Service of Ohio State University, on "Home Decoration." The author considers the average American house the result of a combination of many types of building including English, Italian, Swiss and Dutch Colonial styles. Furniture, wall and floor coverings, graduation of colors, the use of pictures, bric a brac, curtains and draperies are a few of the subjects treated.

Passengers in Danger

While a Cleveland & Eastern car, filled with passengers, was leaving Chardon Sunday a breakbeam dropped down, derailing the car and splitting a switch. The car narrowly escaped turning over.

The first meeting will be held at the navy department Wednesday, Oct. 6, with Chairman Thomas A. Edison presiding.

"Desiring to make available the latent inventive genius of our country to improve our navy," said Daniels in making his announcement, "a short while ago I requested Thomas A. Edison to become chairman of an advisory board of prominent men who would make up the board. Mr. Edison, with the patriotism characteristic of American inventors, accepted the call to duty.

Selection Plan.

"The plan adopted for selecting the members of the advisory board was as follows: I requested 11 great engineering and scientific societies to select by popular election two members and to represent them on the board.

"The result has been most gratifying. I have received the nominations of all these societies and have accepted them and it only remains to have a meeting, organize and determine the method of procedure to utilize to the best advantage this mobilization of the talent and genius of our great country."

Austrian Ambassador Requests That He Be Recalled 'On Leave of Absence.'

SPECIAL FEDERAL JURY IS PLANNED

Will Investigate Alleged German and Austrian Plots to Foment Labor Disturbances in War Munitions Factories of U. S.

Washington, D. C.—Dr. Constantin Theodor Dumba, the Austrian ambassador, has asked Baron Von Burian, the Austrian-Hungarian minister for foreign affairs, to comply with the request of this government for his recall. Dr. Dumba asked that he be recalled "on leave of absence."

The ambassador, who is now at Lenox, transmitted his request through Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador. This was because Dr. Dumba's only method of communication with Vienna is by German wireless through Berlin.

The text of Dr. Dumba's message to Baron Von Burian was as follows: "I beg your excellency to recall me on leave of absence for a personal report.—Dumba."

Dr. Dumba's telegram was in reply to a message from Baron Von Burian asking him for a statement on the request of this government for his recall.

New York City.—A special federal grand jury is planned by the Washington authorities to investigate the alleged German and Austrian plots to foment labor disturbances in the war munitions factories of the United States. If this jury is called, it probably will sit in New York and will work under the direction of Federal District Attorney Marshall.

Violations of United States postal laws and conspiracies to interfere with interstate commerce in connection with the alleged plots will be carefully looked into by the grand jury. Particular inquiry will be made into the acts of Archibald, the newspaper correspondent who carried abroad the letter from the Austrian ambassador, Dumba, outlining one of the plots ...
